MAN SHOT TO DEATH AT MOUNTAIN ROCK

Strange Tragedy in Which Youth Used Revolver Deliberately on Turkish Baker Firing 3 Shots Into His Breast—Assailant Not Alarmed at Charge Against Him

Ghouri Mooradian, the youth who yesterday shot and killed Zafouti Ali, he near Mountain Rock, will be arraigned this afternoon in the local police court on a charge of murder.

At first it was thought that Mooradian would be arraigned in the morning session of police court but later this was found to be impossible.

In order to charge a defendant with murder the report on the autopsy performed on the body of the victim must first be received by the court. As this report was not made this morning the arraignment was deferred until afternoon.

The young defendant did not seem to be at all alarmed this morning by the thought of yesterday's horrible deed. He passed a quiet night in the police station cell and appeared to be sleeping whenever the officer on duty looked in upon him.

Young Mooradian seemed quite ready to talk today but did not materially change his story of yesterday. He still contends that the victim assaulted him, which the police believe to be the truth.

Story of the Crime

The story of the crime for which the Mooradian boy is held is a very unusual one. The shooting took place at Mountain Rock yesterday afternoon and so far as is known there were no witnesses to it. The boy claims that Zafouti Ali attempted an assault upon him and that he shot in self defense. When asked by the police if he shot to kill he replied that he certainly did. He said he never saw Ali before until yesterday. Ali's death, he stated, however, does not agree with the boy's story. Ali said that the boy worked for him in Worcester. Yesterday afternoon he met Mooradian in Merrimack square and they went to Mountain Rock together. Both car fares were paid by Ali. The latter said that while in the woods, and without any provocation whatever, the boy pulled a gun and demanded money from him. Ali said he refused to give the money and the boy shot him. He started to run, he said, and was shot again.

Ghouri Mooradian is a pupil of the Green school. He has been living at a corporation boarding-house in Dutton street. He says he came from Pawtucket, R. I., about four months ago.

Instead of going to school yesterday he decided to go out into the country and boarded the 1.15 car for Lakeview. He said he did not go to school because he was not feeling well. Ali was on the same car with him and both left the car near Mountain Rock. Later, he said, he met Ali in the woods and the latter attempted an assault. Under a stiff cross-examination by Supt. Welch the boy added that Ali had bound his hands and thrown him on the ground, but that with his teeth he managed to undo his bonds. Then, he said, he jumped to his feet, whipped out his gun and shot his assailant. The gun, he said, he obtained in the house where he lived in Dutton street.

The weapon used by Mooradian was a .33 calibre revolver. He fired three shots at Ali. Two of the bullets entered Ali's body, one in the right shoulder and the other through the right lung. Ali died this morning at 1.50 o'clock at St. John's hospital.

Mooradian, after firing the shots did not attempt to escape. Constable Provencer was notified of the shooting by Joseph Roy and when the officer arrived at the scene of the tragedy he found Ali stretched upon the ground with the boy standing over him, revolver in hand. Mooradian turned his revolver over to the constable. Ali was placed aboard a Lowell bound car, which was met by the ambulance at Spark's drug store in Lakeview avenue. Constable Provencer, with Mooradian, was also aboard the car. The constable took the boy to the police station and turned him over to the Lowell police. Ali was a baker residing in Lakeview avenue.

KARLSRUHE HAS SUNK 20 BRITISH SHIPS IN ATLANTIC

Despatch From Canary Islands to London Reports That the Karlsruhe Sunk 13 British Merchantmen—Berlin Gave Out Report on Oct. 3 That She Destroyed 7 British Vessels

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Tenerife, Canary Islands, to the Daily Mail under date of Thursday, reports that the German cruiser Karlsruhe has sunk 13 British merchantmen in the Atlantic.

The news, according to the Mail's correspondent, was brought to Tenerife by the German steamer Grefeld, which arrived there with the crews of the British steamers Stratroy, Maple Branch, Highland Hope, Indral, Rio Ignessu, Farn, Niceto, Maria De Larranga, Cervantes, Carnish City, Froth, Condor and Lynrowan, all of which were sunk by the Karlsruhe. The Grefeld was accompanied late port by the German steamer Patagonia, Rio Negro and Ascension.

A later message states that over 400 men on the crew are prisoners and that the merchantmen were mostly sunk in the Atlantic. The ships were mostly engaged in the South American trade and their total tonnage is about 60,000.

The cruiser Karlsruhe, a ship of a trifle less than 6000 tons, has had in this war a career as eventful in the Atlantic as that of her smaller sister ship, the Emden in the Indian ocean. The Karlsruhe first came into notice at the outbreak of the war when she appeared in the vicinity of Sandy Hook apparently in wait for British merchantmen leaving New York. For a few days the British shipping huffed their pliers and then came news that the Karlsruhe had been driven away by the approach of several British cruisers.

On Aug. 9 the Karlsruhe appeared in the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, where she coaled and then again took to the sea. Soon after it was learned that the Karlsruhe had been in a sensational running fight at sea with the British cruisers Suffolk and Bristol.

It appears that the British cruisers came unexpectedly upon the Karlsruhe while she was coming from the German steamer Kronprinz. Wilhelm. The cruisers engaged in a running fight while the Kronprinz, Wilhelm, through her superior speed easily escaped. The Karlsruhe eluded her pursuers and an unconfirmed report had it that she damaged the Bristol in this fight.

Since then the Karlsruhe has appeared in several West Indian ports for coal after preying in southern seas on British commerce. An official statement given out in Berlin on Oct. 3 said she had sunk seven British steamers in the Atlantic.

The Karlsruhe is comparatively a new ship, having gone into commission early in 1913. She is very fast, having a speed of 27 knots, which has enabled her thus far to successfully elude the persistent British pursuit. Her main armament consists of 12 4.1 and she carries a crew of 375 men.

Lowell, Me., and Armand Plante of Bedford were arrested here yesterday, charged with breaking into a clothing store in Lawrence, Mass.

The police allege they left the store with $2000 worth of clothing in grips and went to Lowell, where some of it was disposed of at pawnshops and other places.

The men landed in Manchester yesterday morning and Patrolman Blackett got one of them, a little later Inspector Mohr caught the other. At the station they admitted, the police say, that they had taken the stuff. The authorities at Lawrence were notified and came here last night for the men.

First Edition FRENCH WARSHIP IN COLLISION ON COAST

Coastwise Steamer, Going at Full Speed, Crashed Into Cruiser Descartes—French Officer Demanded Bond From Steamer Officers

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—It was reported here this morning that the French cruiser Descartes while patrolling off the New Jersey coast had been rammed by the coastwise steamer Telesfera. Neither vessel, however, was seriously damaged.

The collision occurred as the Telesfera was entering the harbor, her officers said. They did not see the Descartes.

RAID IN MANCHESTER

WRAPPED IN SHEET—MAY BE MILDRED SULLIVAN

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 23.—In a raid yesterday on an isolated house on Belmont street in East Manchester, occupied by Mrs. E. J. Harris, who advertises as a nurse, the Manchester police carried away in an ambulance the form of a woman wrapped in a sheet. Last night the office of Chief of Police Michael J. Healy was the scene of a star chamber session in which more than 20 people were rigidly examined. Chief Healy declared last night that there was nothing to make public in the case, but that developments are expected.

Rumors were thick in East Manchester to the effect that the girl removed from the missing house was Mildred Sullivan, missing Maine girl. This could not be confirmed up to midnight. Where the girl is now the police decline to state.

It is known also that several arrests have been made, but what the charge is and who the parties are is also a closely guarded secret.

carter till the cruiser was a short distance ahead.

Immediately the steamer's engines were reversed and she let drop her anchor. Her momentum, however, was too great and she crashed at high speed full into the war vessel. A boat was lowered from the cruiser and two of her officers boarded the steamer. They were very angry, the Telesfera's captain feared they would beat him.

After a long and bitter wrangle the officers went away and the Telesfera was made to give a bond to make good the cruiser's repairs before the steamer was permitted to continue on her trip to Boston and New York.

140,000 DODGING TAX

EVASION INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTOR AND DUCK INCOME TAX —$7,585 RETURNS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Unless the experts who figured out the "tax-aliases" when congress was working on the income tax law were far at sea in their calculations, there are more than 140,000 income tax dodgers who have evaded the internal revenue collector and failed to pay their share of the toll.

According to figures made public last night by the secretary of the treasury, $7,585 returns were made under the income tax law during the fiscal year just ended. The estimates on which congress did much of its work on the act gave a total of 43,000 taxable incomes. These estimates did not include incomes between $3000 and $4000. According to last night's statement 79,426 returns were made on incomes between these limits, so that the total discrepancy between the estimates and the incomes is 146,525.

LETTER FROM AUGUSTE SARRE
Auguste Sarre, Sr., father of the Sarre brothers, prominent business men of this city, has written an interesting letter to his sons relative to the present conditions in Veyre, Minton, Auvergne, France, where he now resides.

Among his subjects he describes the march of 50,000 French cavaliers through Veyre. The railroads, he says, are used exclusively by the troops and travel is impossible. Congressman John Jacob Rogers was an important factor in the receipt of the letter, as the local sons had made many queries for mail and had been unable to locate it. Mr. Sarre, Sr., is a former resident of Lowell, having resided here a number of years.

JOHNSON IS PRESIDENT

Manufacturers' Export Association Closes Convention With Banquet in New York City

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—American trade conditions with foreign countries were discussed at the closing business session yesterday of the fifth annual convention of the American Manufacturers' Export Association. Alba B. Johnson of Philadelphia was elected president.

Resolutions were adopted in support of Postmaster-General Baileston's efforts to establish two-cent postage between the United States and Argentina and Uruguay; complimenting the steamship lines which transferred their ships to American registry and appointing a commission to cooperate with the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in holding an exhibition at Washington at which South American countries would be represented.

The convention closed last night with a banquet at which speeches were made by James A. Patrick, president of the United States Steel Corporation.

An aged woman writes from an "old ladies' home": "If I could only get away from here! The old ladies quarrel among themselves and are a fearfully selfish lot. I used to have such a different life. Why, I had a Sunday school class of 23 girls, and they all loved me, and I used to help them to be good and sweet and happy. I know I did; they used to tell me so. We had beautiful times together. It seemed then as though I was doing something worth while, and now here I am, useless and without a chance to do any of the worth while things."

SIGNS WAR TAX BILL

President Signs Papers—Taxes on Beers and Wine in Effect—Congress Did Not Adjourn

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Congress met today with the program for adjournment completely upset as the result of obstructive tactics on the part of the southern democrats who are demanding legislation to relieve the cotton situation. The plan to adjourn at 6 o'clock last night immediately following the adoption of the conference report on the war revenue bill was frustrated by the filibuster which prevented action in the senate on a joint resolution calling for adjournment at that time and to which the house had agreed.

Meantime the war tax bill, estimated to bring in $90,000,000 of revenue, has received the signature of President Wilson. The taxes on beer and wine were in effect today but the levy on tobacco will not go into effect until November 1st. The stamp taxes will date from Dec. 1. Although the president stayed at the capitol for a few minutes after he had signed the bill, he had nothing to say regarding the failure of the adjournment program.

The question of the adjournment was still further complicated today by reason of the fact that many members of both houses had already left for their homes in anticipation of the plans for adjournment last night being carried out. Majority Leader Underwood was of the opinion that under these circumstances it would be impossible to have a quorum on hand again to pass an adjournment resolution until after the elections. The question of whether congress would remain in session indefinitely without a quorum of either house hinged upon whether an agreement could be reached today for a recess until after the November elections.

Although Majority Leader Kern and other democrats in the senate has expressed doubts regarding adjournment at this time it was believed that the recess plan might be agreed today by democrats from the cotton states if they had assurances that measures designed to allow relief in the cotton situation would be considered following the elections. Senator Hoke Smith, who led the fight in the senate in behalf of such legislation had signified that he might agree to such a plan.

Dinner in Honor of the Prohibitionists Urge Supreme Court Given Dries to Vote for Their Own Candidates

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—A dinner last night in honor of the United States supreme court and commemorative of its 125th anniversary, presided over by former President William H. Taft, and attended by Chief Justice White and the associate justices of the court, closed the annual meeting of the American Bar association. Peter W. Melbrin of Savannah, Ga., had been elected president at the final business session.

The compromise of the race question as to membership in the association in the closing hours of the meeting permitted adjournment without a single contest on the floor. Moorfield Storey of Boston had introduced a resolution to rescind the 1912 resolution declaring it had never been contemplated that negroes should become members. A substitute by Henry St. George Tucker of Virginia, before debate of the Storey resolution was taken up, offered a resolution rescinding the 1912 resolution, but setting forth that, whereas it is important that full information should be furnished to the executive committee as to application for membership, it was resolved that all applications for membership should state the race and sex of the applicant and such other facts as the committee should require. The Tucker resolution was adopted almost unanimously. Mr. Storey grasped Mr. Tucker's hand and the entire audience broke forth in applause.

The Tucker resolution not only settled for the time being the negro question but empowered the executive committee to pass upon the admission of women, three of whom have applied for membership. Invited as special guests at the dinner last night were representatives of the families of former chief justices. These included William Jay of New York, Benjamin H. Rutledge of South Carolina, Ernest Bradford Ellsworth of Connecticut, Burwell Keith Marshall of Kansas City, Roger B. Taney Anderson of New York, Franklin Chase Hoyt of New York, Morrison R. Waite of Ohio, and Melville W. Fuller of Washington.

ERUPTION ON WRIST SPREAD TO ELBOW

Child's Arms Itched, Could Not Sleep, Grew Worse, Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Healed.

R. F. D. No. 2, West Burke, Vt.—"My little daughter's trouble began on her wrist and I thought it was chapped by playing out of doors. It spread on her arms half way to the elbow and her little arms itched so she would rub them until they would bleed. Her arms were red and rough and as they grew worse I used to have to get up with her nights for they itched so she could not sleep. I had to keep her arms bandaged for about two months. They would look as if they were raw at times and she would rub them nights until they would bleed.

"I used some ointment but it would not cure her so I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed her arms with the Cuticura Soap then put the Cuticura Ointment on and bandaged them. The second time I used them I could see a change so we bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap. We had only used about half of them when she was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Lilla Beane, Jan. 31, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

It is so easy to get rid of skin troubles by using Cuticura Soap exclusively and a little Cuticura Ointment occasionally that it is a pity not to do so in all cases of pimples, redness, roughness, itchings and irritations. A single act is often sufficient when all else fails. Although Cuticura Soap (25c) and Cuticura Ointment (50c) are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each with 32-p. 125 YEARS OLD RAP BULL MOOSE

Dinner in Honor of the Prohibitionists Urge Supreme Court Given Dries to Vote for Their Own Candidates

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Caustic reference is made to the progressive party, and all prohibitionists are called upon to stand by their candidates on the state ballot, in a statement issued last evening following a meeting of the Massachusetts Prohibition club at the offices of the prohibition party state committee, 79 Milk street.

The statement declared that the constant fight made by the prohibition party against the liquor traffic as an economic issue had been largely responsible for the present spread of sympathy for natural prohibition.

"After years of sacrifice and devotion to a principle," says the statement, "the prohibition party would be justified in giving up its separate existence in favor of a party only which met these three conditions:

"1. It must be unqualifiedly committed to prohibition in state and nation.
"2. It must be fitted by history and organization to unite all or most of the temperance elements.
"3. It must be reasonably sure of growth, permanence and ultimate victory."

"The progressive party in Massachusetts stands for prohibition in the nation, but not in the state. At its national convention in 1912 the progressive party refused to declare itself on this question at all, and it cannot act again until 1916.

"Because of its origin and present leadership there is good reason to believe that a large part of the temperance forces in state and nation would never fight under the banner of the progressive party.

"Of course, no one can foretell the future, but since the prohibition party came into being more than 20 parties have sprung up and died. To many keen political observers the progressive party gives no better promise of permanence.

"Indeed, we see no reason why in this day of the election of our principles the prohibition party is not as likely to unite all shades of temperance men as a new party. Surely we do not see why a man who sincerely wants his vote to count for prohibition—either state or national—should pass by the candidate of the prohibition party to vote for the progressive."

FOUR GARTERS ENOUGH

GIRL WHO WANTED SIX ON CORSETS HAD MERCHANT IN COURT—EXPERTS TESTIFY

YONKERS, Oct. 23.—Half a dozen prettily and modestly attired expert witnesses yesterday have settled the question as to how many garters there should be attached to up-to-date women's corsets.

Four is enough, they testified, and City Judge Joseph H. Beall dismissed the complaint of Miss Edna Smith against a local merchant. He sold her corsets with that number, but she claimed there should be six at least.

The merchant contended that two garters for each stocking were sufficient to obtain the desired result and said he had several expert witnesses who would testify and demonstrate. He indicated half a dozen young women in the court room who certainly were wearing silk stockings and who, the merchant said, had been harassed into corsets only waist high but nearly knee deep.

Miss Smith, who had said that she was willing to show that four garters on a corset were not sufficient, became dismayed by the array of expert testimony and, throwing the disputed corsets upon the judge's desk, she flew from the court room saying she wouldn't think of wearing corsets that had only four garters.

Judge Beall then dismissed the complaint against the merchant and adjourned court.

THE HABIT OF SWINGING THE ARMS.

If you will observe the numbers of elbows out instead of in. To be graceful women swinging their arms as they walk along the avenues, you will give the topic more thought in the future. There should be a slight movement to the arms if you have nothing to carry in them, so as to give a sort of rhythm to the figure as you walk. But this little backward and forward movement should never develop into a swing.

If you find difficulty in overcoming the "swing" cultivate the habit for a brief while, at least, of carrying something in both hands. When the arms are burdened even slightly there is very little tendency to movement. Your handbag held in one hand and possibly a book in the other will act as weights and you will soon lose the desire to swing the arms back and forth.

Another serious defect in connection with the arms is that of pointing the ing gently to remove the superfluous flesh from this part of the body. A simple cutting out of bread and potatoes, indeed will reduce the flesh on all parts of the body in most cases.

ATTEMPT TO KILL OFFICIAL

PISTOL TAKEN FROM MAN WHO ATTACKED DEPUTY HARRISON OF THE DOCK DEPARTMENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—An attempt to assassinate Richard C. Harrison, first deputy commissioner of the department of docks and ferries, as he was about to enter his office yesterday morning, was frustrated by the quick action of spectators, who overpowered Mr. Harrison's assailant and took from him a pistol.

The assailant was John O'Connor, a discharged employee. He was locked up. O'Connor was a ship's carpenter in the employ of the dock department. He was discharged several weeks ago after trial on charges before Mr. Harrison. Since then he wrote letters to the mayor asking him to dismiss Mr. Harrison.

TO SCALP THE SCALPERS

Plan to Stop Scalping of World Series Tickets Brought Forth by New York Man

Shortstop in the New York Press has the following to say as to trimming the scalpers on world's series tickets:

During the recent world's series the writer met a dyed-in-the-wool Giant fan who had been recently trimmed by a Philadelphia scalper. He purchased a ticket for the second game in Philadelphia for $7, only to find when he presented it that it had coupon No. 2 torn off, and was good only for the third game.

By coughing up $5 more and throwing in his third game ticket to clutch the bargain he got a postcard from another scalper for the second game. It was the game in which James defeated Plank, 1 to 6, and the fan decided it was well worth it.

"I don't mind telling you this," he said, "because you are a stranger, but if any of my friends heard a Philadelphia fan skinned me I would never hear the end of it."

"Well, I don't mind buying a ticket for a good seat from a scalper when I see a game in Philadelphia. I am not an Athletic fan, nor a patron of Shibe park, but it does hurt me when, after patronizing the Giants all season, I am forced to buy my tickets from speculators."

"I have not the time to stand in line for tickets, neither do I like to be compelled to reach the grounds at 10 in the morning for a game which starts at 2. I sent money for tickets in 1911, but got the money back after the series was over. I had to buy my tickets from speculators."

"However, I have thought over this ticket scalping business, and there is a way of circumventing it. At least I have a scheme by which a club can protect its own patrons during a world's series, and I think that is what all the clubs are working for, or, at least, pretend to be."

"Out with the scheme," Shortstop replied. "It is worth real money if you can tell the national commission how to avoid the annual ticket scandals."

The scheme presented by the fan is plausible, and would enable a fan who has supported his club all year to have first chance at purchasing world's series pastebards. The proposition is, therefore, put forth and will be sent to the national commission for its approval.

At the start of each season each one of the 16 major league clubs shall issue a sort of a commemorative ticket containing 17 numbers. A fan gets one of these cards at the first game he takes in, and thereafter the ticket taker punches a hole in his card with every game.

This arrangement would be continued until a club is hopelessly out of the running, though the work of the Braves last season shows that there is no such thing as counting a club out of the hunt until it is actually dropped for the count.

When it came time to sell the world's series tickets all fans having 15 or more punches in their cards would be invited to send them to the club with an application for world's series tickets. Fans with the greatest number of punches could be considered first, and everybody would be taken care of until the supply was finished.

The fan argues that it would not be necessary for a club to hire extra help to punch the tickets, as the gatekeepers could punch same while taking the regular admissions tickets.

In order to prevent such cards from falling into the hands of speculators around the time of the world's series ticket sale, it is suggested that each fan file an application for a commemorative ticket at the start of the season. He must advise the club of any change of address, and at the time the ticket sale the world's series tickets would be sent to him only at that address.

The idea of having a commemorative ticket seems to Shortstop to answer the question best, and would enable a club to take care of all its regular

WORMS ARE ENEMIES OF CHILDREN

Worms are one of the most dreaded diseases of children. There is nothing better than Dr. True's Elixir to expel worms of all kinds and to keep the stomach in good order.

First manufactured by my father in 1831. Our mothers and grandmothers used this remedy and found it to be ideal for its purpose.

Some of the signs of worms are: Deformed Trade Mark stomach, furred tongue, belching, variable appetite, increased thirst, acid or heavy breath, nausea, enlarged abdomen, variable bowel action, pale face of leaden tint, bluish rings around eyes, itching of nostrils, languor, irritability, disturbed sleep, grinding of teeth, irregularity of pulse.

patrons, and their welfare should be a home club's first consideration. It might also help the attendance at games when a fan knew that his patronage would be rewarded if his club won the pennant.

It may appear foolish for clubs like Cleveland, Cincinnati or the Browns to sell such a ticket, and their fans, perhaps, would make it a joke. It might also have appeared very foolish if the Braves had issued such a ticket last spring, especially when their club was last in July.

It would do no harm if the leading clubs of last season—the Braves and the Athletics and Red Sox in the American league—tried the scheme next season.

THREE MAJOR LEAGUES

Bradley, Former N. E. Leaguer and Now With Pittsburgh Feds, Thinks Outlaws Will Stay

According to Hugh Bradley of the Pittsburgh Federal league has done a world of good for baseball players throughout the country. He said: "Before the Federal league was organized the managers of organized baseball teams told their players what they would work for—and if they didn't they were blacklisted. Now, it's a different story."

"If a ball player doesn't like the terms submitted to him by his manager he can dictate his terms and then stand pat. Provided the O. B. head comes through all is well. If he doesn't come through the ball tapper can do business with the Federal league and get paid what ever he is worth. Ask any ball player whether the Federal league has helped ball tossers in general or not, they'll soon tell you it has," concluded Bradley.

Room for Three Majors
"Some people declare there isn't room for three major leagues in this country," said Bradley. "I insist there is—in fact the Federal league has demonstrated this fact. Why should there be but one major league ball team in Cleveland, Detroit, Washington and Cincinnati?" queried Bradley. "Other cities in the National and American leagues support two teams," he continued, "why not all of them?"

The Federal league moguls assert there is room for three major league teams—and they have proven it," said Bradley. According to Bradley Cleveland took in an American Association league team this season and the team outdrew the Naps—the American league club. "If there is money for that team in Cleveland why shouldn't the Federal league thrive there—with major league ball players in its roster?" asked Bradley.

"There are two major leagues without the cities mentioned above—why not three major leagues including these cities?" he asked further.

Bradley states the Pittsburghs came pretty near splitting even this season. The club used the old Pittsburgh National league ball field— Exposition park. The club drew good crowds in the first and middle sections of the season when it was in fourth place. At one time about midseason the club was within five games of the top rung of the ladder, after taking five straight games in Pittsburgh, from the Homestead team, which later won the pennant. But after that series injuries crippled the Pittsburghs and the club finished the season in seventh place—two games behind Kansas City. St. Louis won the cellar championship.

"We had our full strength in only 25 games throughout the season," declared Bradley.

Sugar Deeded Bradley
On Sept. 1, Bradley was struck in the face with a pitched ball. The injury made him lay off for one week and gave him his first chance to see his daughter, who was born on July 31. George Sugar, pitching for the Baltimore team, the former Cincinnati twister, was the hurler who benched Bradley.

Bradley will shortly undergo an operation to get relief from that injury. The ball caused the cartilage in Bradley's left nostril to harden.

Bradley broke into organized baseball with the Climbers in 1906. He remained with Burkett in 1907-8, and the team landing the pennant in each of those four years. In the spring of 1910 Bradley reported to the Red Sox, and he remained with that club until after the Sox had copied the world's championship in 1912, from the Yankees. In 1913 Bradley was sold by the Red Sox to the Toronto club of the International league. Bradley refused to go back with that club this year at the old salary, and he jumped to the Pittsburghs.

About the first of September Bradley was surprised to learn that Steve Yerkes, who played with Bradley in this city in 1909, had been released by the Red Sox and signed by the Pittsburghs.

Old Climbers Meet
Yerkes went from the Climbers to the Sox in the fall of 1909. In 1900 he was named by the Sox to Chattanooga. Both Bradley and Yerkes were with the Red Sox in 1912 world's series—each of them getting $101 as their share of the winners purse. Yerkes hit for .340 for Pittsburgh, and he played shortstop in wonderful fashion. He was short stop for the Climbers but was shifted to second base by the Sox.

The 1902 Climber team included Bradley and Yerkes, the former cover, his first base, "Tom" Keaty, coach at Lehigh, George Wilson now in the Central league; Jack Martin, shortstop for the Phillies; "Doc" Anderson, who twirled for the Buffeds this season; Tom Logan, Hugh McCune, Eddie Russell, Henry Roudan, "Buzzer" Shaw, Andy Owens and Johnnie Klemm.

Lupine Huggins, "Red" Hooty who is generally considered to be one of the best players turned out by the New England league, said that the Climbers' 1903 ball club was the best Class D ball team he ever saw.

In the early part of this season Bradley was hitting for .430 when he was released by the Sox. Shortly after his return to the game

Neuralgic Pains
Among the causes of neuralgia the most important is the general physical condition of the patient. Neuralgia is most common in persons reduced in strength by over-work or some form of over-exertion, physical or mental, or by loss of sleep. Anemia, or lack of good, red blood is a common cause of neuralgia. The reason for this is plain. The nerves get their nourishment through the blood. When the blood is thin and weak the nerves are badly nourished, they become inflamed and neuralgic pains are produced. These pains have been described as "The cry of a starved nerve."

Hot applications to soothe these inflamed nerves and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to build up the blood and carry the needed elements to the nerves is the correct treatment and one that has brought good results in so many cases that it is no longer an experiment. Headache, backache, sleeplessness, nervous debility, nervous breakdown, St. Vitus' dance and the functional form of partial paralysis show good results under the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Send today for the booklet on Nervous Disorders to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. It is free.

Bradley was bumped by "Vin" Campbell and was on the injured list seven days. Bradley was bothered with a Charley horse and a twisted ankle following his bump by Campbell. Then followed his injury at the hands of Seggs.

Childs Lost Plum
According to Bradley the Federal league does not want to go into organized baseball at this time. He says the Feds will raid the major leagues of several stars before the 1915 season opens and then the Federal league will be ready to listen to any terms suggested for baseball may submit. "If the terms suit the Federal league officials," states Bradley, "all will be well. If they do not, the Federal league will do the dictating."

Bradley declared that if the Chicago Federal league team won the pennant this year, its president, Charles Wengham, would have given the players $25,000 or about $1000 per man. Indianapolis defeated Chicago for the flag by a few points.

It is likely the Pittsburghs will do their spring training in Mississippi or near the home of "Rebel" Onkes, the manager of the club, at Homer, La.

Asked if the reported signing of Ed Konetchy by the Pittsburghs would make any difference with his plans, Konetchy, being a first baseman this year for the Pittsburgh National league team, Bradley said he isn't afraid of any first baseman taking his place from him. "I had a fine season this year and I will go better next year as I guess I have had all the accidents that are going to befall me," he concluded.

Bradley claims that two teams, which were in the Federal league this year, both money losers, will be replaced next season. He declares Toronto and Cleveland will be added to the Federal league circuit in 1915.

"Next year," said Bradley, "the Federal league will publish its schedule first and the National and American league magnates can arrange their cards thereafter to suit themselves."

O'Brien's Policy and Nationally Advertised Products

We consider it timely, during this week, devoted to the display of Nationally Advertised Products, to call attention to the merchandise policy at O'Brien's, as announced when we started in business.

In a broad way, that policy is: To identify O'Brien's with those brands of men's wear that the consumer knows and has confidence in; that have stood the test of time and publicity; which publicity proves the merit of the article and the progressive methods of the maker.

These are the makers and brands we wished to identify with our name. The makers' name backed by our own label is your safeguard in trading. The policy is sound, for it is winning out in the face of competition.

"Whose make is this?" is a question that is becoming very familiar to our salesmen. It is an evidence of the education resulting from national advertising to the consumer.

We append a list of nationally advertised makes and brands that are carried at O'Brien's and constitute the big bulk of our stock. It is worthy of perusal.

BIG FIGHT IN ILLINOIS

R. C. SULLIVAN, IS SEEKING ELECTION AS UNITED STATES SENATOR

ROGER C. SULLIVAN

Roger C. Sullivan, one of the most prominent democrats of Chicago, is seeking election as United States senator from Illinois. He is opposed by Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, who seeks re-election. Mr. Sullivan has long been in the political limelight, both locally and at times nationally. He captured the nomination in spite of the opposition of Secretary Bryan, Governor Dunne and Mayor Harrison of Chicago. A third very busy contestant for the senatorial toga in Illinois is Raymond Robins, a noted social worker, who is a progressive.

KENTUCKY WARMS ON ILLITERACY

In a proclamation characterized by Dr. P. B. Claxton, U. S. commissioner of education, as "one of the most important issued by the governor of any state since the beginning of our national life," Governor McCreary, of Kentucky, announces the appointment of a state literacy commission and the beginning of a campaign to eliminate illiteracy from his state. A thousand volunteer teachers are already at work in the "moonlight schools" teaching Kentucky's 208,000 adult illiterates how to read and write.

The members of the literacy commission are: Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, through whose efforts as superintendent of schools illiteracy has been entirely wiped out in Rowan county during the last three years; Miss Ella Lewis, superintendent of schools for Grayson county; Dr. J. G. Grabbie, president of the Eastern Kentucky state normal school; and H. H. Cherry, president of the Western Kentucky state normal school. The commission is receiving valuable aid from the Kentucky educational association, the Kentucky Press association, the state federation of women's clubs, the society of Colonial Dames, and other public-spirited organizations.

Of special importance, in the opinion of Commissioner Claxton, will be the effect of Kentucky's example on other states. Illiteracy is a national problem, and few states are free from it. Says Dr. Claxton:

"This proclamation will have far-reaching results. It marks the beginning of a new era in Kentucky and for all the country for the idea will be taken up by other states, and the work will go on till the curse and shame of illiteracy have been lifted from every state in the Union."

It will be the part of the lasting glory of the state of Kentucky that it has taken the lead in this movement. It is the first state to undertake to offer to all the people, of whatever age, an opportunity to learn to read and write, and thus break away from the prison walls of sense and silence within which the illiterate man and woman must live. Whatever else Governor James B. McCreary may do for his state, this proclamation and his recommendation to the legislature that it provide for the compulsory of this illiteracy commission must always be accounted among his wisest and most important acts."

Bureau of education officials point out that work such as has been begun in Kentucky will make much more rapid progress when the illiteracy bill introduced by Congressman Abernethy of Alabama, becomes law. This bill (H. R. 15470) requires the bureau of education and the commissioner of education to devise plans for teaching adult illiterates, and to cooperate with state and local authorities in the work when requested to do so.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

THE OPERA HOUSE

Tonight is the big tango contest at the Opera House between Mack and Hickey who have been appearing all this week with the Raymond Fox Musical company, and Mr. Sheely and lady of this city. Mack and Hickey have appeared in all of the leading theatres of the east, meeting all comers and have yet to go down in defeat. Mr. Sheely and lady have proven beyond a doubt that they are the best in their line in this vicinity, which should make this contest the best of the season. The audience will see as the tangoes, and the prize, which amounts to $50, will be awarded according to their verdict. The prices will remain the same, namely 10, 15 and 20 cents, and all seats may be had in advance by calling at the Graham Street box office or telephone 261.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary fluid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get fluid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE
The theme of "The Blindness of Virture" which will be presented the coming week by the Merrimack Square Theatre Stock Co. is said to teach a great moral lesson to parents who are remiss in their duties to their children by their failure to properly instruct them in the many things which they should know in order to be fully equipped for their part in life's battle. Incidentally it will mark the first appearance of Miss Frances Shannon who will be the new leading lady, and it might also be added that the role in which she will make her debut to local theatregoers is one well suited to allow her an opportunity to display her versatility. Seats for all performances are now selling at the box office and the subscription list is still open.

THE ROYAL THEATRE

A remarkable program has been arranged for Friday and Saturday at the Royal Theatre. Three good special features have been secured besides the regular releases. "The Lord of the Jungle," is one of the most thrilling three-reelers ever played. It is an animal drama, with most unusual settings. Others on the program are "The Dancer" with Veruna Desrosiers, the dancer in the companion piece of the "Vampire." It is a Kalem special production, that will attract considerable attention, with its wonderfully realistic scenes "Did He Love Her" and "Between One and Two," two of the funniest Lubin comedies ever produced are billed. The other special play is a Vitagraph called "The Mysterious Lodger" with Maurice Costello in the leading part. "The Titled," a biograph play is also on the program.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm of Germany and his dreading "Death Head Hussars," King Albert of Belgium and his flying cavalry, and a number of other big figures in the present European mixup will all appear on the screen today and tomorrow for the benefit of the patrons of the Academy of Music. They will also be a number of important events which have taken place in the theatre of war within the last few weeks. The management of the Academy of Music has secured the exclusive right to exhibit the Mutual Weekly War pictures in Lowell and they are all guaranteed strictly authentic.

Every man of voting age and every woman of Lowell should see the big political melodrama entitled "The Boss of the Eighth," which will also be a part of the show.

Amateurs tonight and free candy for the kiddies tomorrow afternoon are but two others of the many new surprising features of the Academy of Music. You shouldn't miss the big vaudeville and picture concert Sunday afternoon and evening.

THEATRE VOYONS

"His Brother Bill," a stirring two-act drama with John Rice. This is one of the greatest war pictures that has ever been produced. "The Green Rose," featuring Alice Joyce and Tom Moore, a photo-play worth seeing. Mary Pickford in "The Old Actor." Pathe daily news giving all the latest events. They were college boys and the manhunters complete a great show. Coming Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "An American Heiress," fourth of "The Beloved Adventurer" series. "His Unknown Girl," a two act drama. For Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week we will have John Hunsy and Flora Finch in "Hearts and Diamonds," and "Broncho Billy" in a great western drama.

Our feature for Sunday will be "The Heart of Sonny Jim," featuring Bobby Connelly and Teft Johnson. Six others. An all-star show.

THE OWL THEATRE

The Owl offers another great array of good features for Friday and Saturday. The sixteenth episode of the "Perils of Pauline" showing the villainous ex-secretary trying to poison

Pauline, is one of the many good pictures to be shown. His scheme is foiled at a critical time, and again Pauline escapes from death. This serial is drawing to a finish as there remain only a few more releases to be sent out, and the management is contemplating the use of another well-known serial for their numerous patrons. Other pictures on the program for today and tomorrow are "The Father's Sin," a powerful sociological two-part feature with Blanche Sweet in the leading part. "Our Mutual Girl" is a most interesting young lady, and her admirers will again have the chance to admire her in her weekly appearance. "Through the Dark," another two-part extra feature, is also booked, and as can be seen, the variety of the subjects are specially commendable. "Zip, the Dodger," is another of those Keystone farical plays, with no end in view, except to raise a laugh.

TOWN OF NO. CHELMSFORD

Little Girl Struck by Motor Cycle— School Committee Criticized for Holding to Dual Session School Day —School Dance Planned—Campfire Girls and Boy Scouts Busy

The beautiful little town of North Chelmsford, at the present time more beautiful than ever, in its autumn hues, is being besieged with the rapid fire political guns of the various candidates, and from now on the political issues of the day will be the main topic of discussion with the men folks. Every day some candidate speaks at the mill-gates, and according to reports, they have all had good sized audiences. Much interest is being centered in the congressional fight this year and many of the voters are trying hard to figure out just how the town will vote. Last year it went progressive. Some say that the republicans and progressives will split the vote this year, thereby making way for a democratic victory, but this remains to be seen. J. Joseph O'Connor, the democratic candidate for congress, who is putting in a whole lot of hard work in the various townships, spoke to a very large gathering Wednesday noon at the Silem mill gate and made a good impression. His talk was on the achievements of the present administration, and he appealed to the voters for the election of a democrat in order that the democratic party could go on with its splendid work unhindered. The mills in the town are running steadily and in some cases night work is being carried on. Little Girl Injured Little Elizabeth Sheppard, aged eight years, had a narrow escape from being killed yesterday afternoon through being knocked down by a motor cycle. As it was the child received two bad scalp wounds, one of which required several stitches being taken. She also sustained several bruises over different parts of her body. The accident happened just before 3 o'clock when the children were coming out of school. While crossing Princeton street the child failed to hear the warning horn of an approaching motor cycle, ridden by J. H. Brown of Forge Village. Endeavoring to cross the street she became confused, with the result the machine struck her and threw her forcibly to the ground. The rider dismounted and assisted Principal Arthur Trubey and Harold Hodge in looking after the little one until she was carried into a nearby residence, where she received medical assistance and the attention of a graduate nurse, Miss Eva Hoyle, who happened to be in the vicinity. The child was afterward taken to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Sheppard, in Gay street.

Although the accident was unavoidable, there should be suitable warning signs posted around the town, and especially in front of the school buildings. Every day large crowds of children gather in Princeton street in front of the schools and many accidents have been narrowly averted. Local School Needs The schools of the town have grown very rapidly, far beyond the realization of the community. The high school at the present time is overcrowded and some provision will have to be made to accommodate the large influx of pupils. There are 89 pupils in the school this year, an increase of 10 over the preceding year. The lower grades are also taxed to their capacity, and next year an addition to the school building will be an absolute necessity. Because of the overcrowded condition, the high school is short one teacher. This makes it necessary for one teacher to do double work, which is an inconvenience to herself and to her pupils. One of the two rooms is teacherless at certain periods of the day, and from this it can be seen that the best results are not obtainable. The type-writing room is very unsanitary, and if a state inspector ever chances to drop around in that direction he will condemn it. There is only one window in the room which is so small that it can accommodate only about 10 or 12 pupils comfortably and this window is now kept open to afford a little ventilation. In the winter months this cannot be done, and some provision will have to be made to protect the health of the pupils. Yesterday a prominent resident of North Chelmsford said: "That the school committee has not lived up to the times can be seen in the fact that the old-fashioned two-session school day is still in force. In every progressive city and town in the country, in this enlightened age, the one-session school day is prevalent and is a decided improvement over the old system. By giving the pupils their afternoons off they are given more time for study, and in many cases the pupils can enough to support them after school hours. The present state of affairs is most inconvenient for pupils who live far away from the school as they have to eat their dinners in school and then hang around for an hour and a half until the session resumes. This question has been agitated time and again, but to no avail, and it looks as though the school committee is afraid to adopt the up-to-date method."

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR NO DANDRUFF—25 CENT DANDERINE

Hair Coming Out? If Dry, Thin, Faded, Bring Back Its Color and Lustre. Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

THE BAD TOOTH

LIKE THE PAIL OF GARBAGE ATTRACTS DISEASE GERMS

Keep a pail of garbage just inside your front door and the house will be filled with flies, swells and disease germs. The front door of the human body is the mouth and a bad tooth is like a garbage pail, that is never emptied. It does to the body just what the garbage pail does to the house—fills it with poison.

This is no exaggeration. It is no mere metaphor, but a plain statement of a liberal truth. You don't have to rely on me for it either, though any reputable dentist will verify the assertion. The most eminent physicians and surgeons are proclaiming it at their meetings.

A decayed tooth with its mass of decaying food and matter offers a hotbed of fertile soil in which disease germs of all kinds thrive, multiply and grow strong. They are next swallowed into the stomach or breathed into the lungs where they begin their destructive work which often ends in broken health. In fact there is no disease which human flesh is heir to that may not be caused by decayed teeth.

If you are not just up to the scratch in health, if you are losing that old time buoyancy and feel unfit at times, look the question of good teeth squarely in the face and go to a good dentist.

I am always pleased to give freely, honest advice about mouth conditions. Step in and consult me. Also learn of my superior porcelain dental methods and how every kind of a dental operation is painlessly accomplished with the use of "Nap-a-Minit."

date method."

The high school graduating class wants to hold a dance, but it is said the school committee is against the idea. The proceeds would go to the school. It seems that the same thing was given a try-out in Chelmsford Centre, but was stopped by the members of the school committee, who disliked the modern dances. If something was wrong at Chelmsford Centre, there is no reason to believe that the same applies to the North Chelmsford pupils. This is the pupils' version of it, and they say that the dance will be held.

The schools closed yesterday at 2:15 in order that the teachers might attend the meeting in Chelmsford Centre.

The schools will close next Friday for the Middlesex county school teachers' convention.

On the 16th and 18th of November a stereopticon lecture will be given in the town hall, the proceeds to go to the school. The lecture is given on the west and the views will show this great part of the country as it appeared in the past and as it appears at the present. It is bound to be of great educational benefit and a large attendance is expected.

Congregational Church

The Sunday services at the Congregational church of which Rev. Franklin Reeves is pastor, are very largely attended. The Sunday school attendance has also shown a marked increase, 137 children attending last Sunday. The preceding Sunday the attendance totalled 155. At the regular meeting Kirkby S. Taylor spoke on "The Passover Night in Egypt," his text being, "When I see the blood, I will pass over you."

Tuesday evening's meeting was held at the home of Mrs. H. H. H. on the Dunstable road.

The following officers were elected at the meeting of the Dux Christies club held Tuesday afternoon: Mrs. George White, president; Mrs. Edgar Dixon, vice president; Mrs. Abbie Lovell, treasurer; Miss Lizzie Draper, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Lizzie Draper, assistant treasurer; Mrs. William Blakeley, secretary. The membership committee is composed of Mrs. Henry Woods, Mrs. George F. White, and Mrs. Christopher Clausen.

Camp Fire Girls

No head has yet been appointed for the Camp Fire Girls since Miss Kendrick, a former teacher in the high school went to Bristol, R. I., to teach. Meetings are being held regularly and many events have been planned for the enjoyment of the members through the winter months.

Boy Scouts

The Boy Scouts have had a very successful season and are planning for the winter activities. Meetings are being held regularly and the troop now takes a ranking place with other leading troops in the state. Mr. James Kibberd, their organizer, is scoutmaster, Charles De La Haye, assistant scoutmaster and George Davis, president.

The work of remodeling the basement of the Plymouth mission hall on the old Tyngsboro road is now going on. The windows have been placed in position and the remaining portion of the work will be completed as quickly as possible.

Mrs. Mabel Boudreau, is a patient at St. John's hospital suffering from appendicitis.

George Marinet's orchestra is very steadily engaged and will play at all the select functions in the town hall during the winter.

Boxing Losing Great Popularity it Once Enjoyed in New York

The gentlemanly art of self defense is slowly but surely losing the great popularity it once enjoyed in New York. Since the creation of the athletic commission the sport, it seems, has suffered on all sides and is now resting on but one leg. If we are to judge by what is said in New York's boxing circles, no one has done the sport more injury than the boxers and the members of the athletic commission under whose supervision the bouts are held in New York clubs.

From the recent actions of the commission, its members have shown very little, if any, knowledge as how to properly conduct the sport. That body has allowed boxers to get away with some awful deals and then, contrary to its rules, has turned right around and allowed that same fighter to perform again. Lovers of good, clean, and gentlemanly sports are now up in arms against this disgraceful behavior of the commission and demand a change. According to the complaints of these sportsmen, the boxing game in New York, and by that is meant every city and town where boxing bouts are held, is in a deplorable state.

The boxers in particular are the real cause of the present state of the sport in the Empire state. They have taken advantage of the ignorance of boxing shown by certain members of the commission and have given the public cer-

DEFENSE CLAIMS MAN KILLED MRS. BAILEY

Counsel for Mrs. Carman, Who is Charged With Murder, Says Defendant is Innocent of Crime —Mrs. Carman May be Called to the Witness Stand— Court Room Crowded for Fourth Day

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman, on trial as the slayer of Mrs. Louise Bailey, entered the tiny court room in the Nassau county courthouse here on this, the fourth day of her trial, expecting to take the stand this afternoon as her own chief witness.

Prosecution of the state's case, it is thought, will be concluded this afternoon.

Frank Farrell, the Beverly character, who testified yesterday afternoon that he had seen a woman running from a window through which the shot was fired around the Carman house to the rear, was recalled to the stand when court convened for a continuation of his cross examination.

At an preceding days, the courtroom was crowded with women. Elizabeth Carman, the 12 year old daughter of the defendant, came in with Mrs. Carman's mother, Mrs. Platt Conklin, and Mrs. Carman's sister, Mrs. Ida Powell. A few minutes later Mrs. Carman entered the courtroom. Elizabeth was permitted to sit with her mother at the counsel table.

John J. Graham, Mrs. Carman's lawyer, questioned Farrell closely about his movements on the day of the murder. The story related by the witness was practically the same as that given in direct examination of an hour and a quarter. Farrell was excused at 11:15 and the state announced that it rested its case.

George M. Levy of Mrs. Carman's counsel made the customary motion for a dismissal which was denied. He then began his opening address.

"We will prove," said Mr. Levy, "that this crime was not committed by Mrs. Carman, but by a man whose motive we do not know."

On the day of the tragedy, Mr. Levy declared in opening, Mrs. Carman had gone to New York on a shopping trip and had returned suffering from an acute headache.

She asked Elizabeth to stop playing the piano because the sound aggravated her headache.

Mrs. Carman to Testify

"Mrs. Carman will then tell you that she then heard a shot and some commotion downstairs," he said. This was the definite declaration from the defense that she was to testify.

"She immediately put on a blouse and leaned over the banister. She did not go into the office because Mr. Carman had forbidden her to do so."

"She will admit all about the telephone instrument and will tell you that she had it installed to find out if the things she had heard about the director's relations with women were true."

We will show you that there can be no suspicion attached to Mrs. Carman's talks with me because I was a friend of the family and had been for years.

"As to the witness Farrell, we will prove him a liar."

Attacks Made's Testimony

A vigorous assault upon the testimony of Celia Coleman, the Carman maid, who swore that Mrs. Carman had said "I shot him" was begun by the defense with its first witness, Benjamin Chessman, a negro stenographer of New York City.

Chessman testified that he and two negro lawyers called on Celia on July 14 last and that the lawyers questioned Celia about her knowledge of the crime while he took down questions and answers in shorthand. He identified a typewritten statement as the one she had made. In it Celia said she wanted to tell the whole truth. She was not under oath, however, and she made no mention of Mrs. Carman having shown her a revolver.

Chessman was reading the statement when the court ordered the noon recess.

Chessman continued his testimony at the afternoon session. The two negro lawyers to whom he referred as having been present when Celia was questioned were in the court room.

It became known this afternoon that the district attorney had summoned hotel clerks from Rochester, Schenectady and various other cities in the state where Mrs. Mary Hanley Cohen had worked as a chambermaid. Mrs. Cohen made a so-called confession just before her death in an institution for the insane in which she said it was she who killed Mrs. Bailey.

The district attorney said that one of the hotel clerks was prepared to testify that Mrs. Cohen was working about 100 miles from New York on the night of the murder.

Several persons from Charleston, S. C. brought here by the district attorney, were prepared to testify for the state as to Celia Coleman's reputation for truthfulness.

Now Farrell on Day of Murder

After Chessman was excused, Thomas Crogan, driver of a moving van, testified that he saw Farrell three times in New York on the day and evening of the murder and on each of the two following days. Farrell told him he thought he would get mixed up in the case so he would at least get three square meals a day. Crogan testified.

On cross examination the witness denied that he was a gunman or a member of the "Forty thieves" but admitted that he had worked as a strikebreaker in Lexington, Ky., Cleveland, Ohio, and New York City, and the copper district of Michigan.

TOM McCARTY, COUSIN OF LUTHER, ASPIRANT FOR HEAVYWEIGHT HONORS

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Jimmy Irslinger, who used to be a wrestler, is now manager of Tommy McCarty, white hope. Tom's chief claim to fame is that he is a cousin of Luther McCarty, a western giant, who huddled over fame's barricade by introducing Carl Morris to Mr. K. O. Walley, and who soon thereafter was judged into permanent oblivion by the same blow that brought Arthur Paily into the public prints as a hard hitter. But for all that, Tommy McCarty, whom Irslinger calls the heavy-weight champion of the northwest, may really be able to fight. He is ready to show his skill and pluck, awaiting only an invite from a fight club.

AT THE ARMORY

The Westford street armory is now available for political rallies, provided the rallies can be arranged so as not to interfere with drills of the four companies quartered there. As every night in the week, except Sunday, is taken up with drills or athletic, the new ruling, which was promulgated this week by the adjutant general in accordance with charter 732 of the acts of 1911, may not result in any very great stampede toward the local armory for political purposes. However, it is available, according to the adjutant general, for a small sum per night payable in advance which is made to cover the charge of heating, heating and services of the armory. Under the same act the armory is available for civil service examinations, meetings of boards of trade or chamber of commerce of any occupation, also for meetings to raise funds for non-sectarian educational and non-sectarian charitable purposes for a small sum per night. The building can also be used for meetings or dances of firemen's and policemen's relief associations. The new regulations which were issued yesterday by an adjutant general and forwarded to the armory all over the state follow in part: Public use of armories shall be allowed: When such use does not interfere with the military use thereof. No armories other than one, two, three or four-company armory can be so used. A political meeting or rally must be conducted by the duly constituted local committee of such party. No political party shall be permitted the use of the same armory more than twice in one year. Application for use of an armory must be made to the commander-in-chief through the military custodian on the prescribed form. Armories will be allotted in the order in which the applications are received. No spirituous or malt liquors will be allowed to be brought into the building or drunk upon the premises. No exhorting or the floors in any part of the building, no profane language, gambling, games of chance, will be permitted, and under no circumstances must persons be accosted or interfered with in any respect from the building. The following schedule of rentals for armories and compensation of armorymen for the use of an armory for a meeting or rally of a political or municipal party has been established by the armory commission and is approved: One company armory, $5; two company armory, $7.50; three company armory, $10; four company armory, $12.50. This covers lighting and heating and compensation of the armorymen.

WILL SELL TOWN FARM CLOSING OUT SALE

Conducting a Large Farm for the Benefit of Two Paupers Not a Paying Investment

The story published in The Sun last week to the effect that a number of citizens were advocating the sale of the Tewksbury town farm is the topic of discussion among the voters of the neighboring town and several influential residents of the district informed a reporter for The Sun yesterday that the matter of disposing of this valuable piece of property will surely be brought to the attention of the voters at the coming town meeting. The story was published exclusively in The Sun and a few days later it was picked up by Boston papers.

A large farm is being conducted for the benefit of only two paupers and some of the citizens claim the farm is not self-supporting and should be sold. George W. Trull, a prominent citizen, who has served the town three years as overseer of the poor, in conversation with the writer yesterday said he has been advocating the sale of the farm for the past 30 years. He said the disposal of this valuable piece of property is a business proposition for the town and the transaction should be made at once. He said the interest on the money received would be sufficient to support the paupers and the taxes on the property would be clear money for the general treasury. Mr. Trull feels that a small building could be purchased in the Centre with a small garden and a matron be placed in care of the place. He said there is no fear of having a large number of paupers on hand and inasmuch as the surrounding towns have disposed of their farms he sees no reason why Tewksbury should not follow suit.

Mr. Trull has another plan and that would be for all the towns surrounding Lowell to combine and conduct but one place for all paupers. He believes this would be a cheaper proposition and in this manner the welfare of the poor people could be looked after properly. Mr. Trull believes the superintendent of the farm and his wife are very efficient and they economize as much as possible, but nevertheless the farm is a burden to the town and should be disposed of.

Frank A. Haines, another prominent citizen of West Tewksbury, also favors the sale of the property. He said the farm is not self-supporting for each year the town appropriates several hundred dollars for the upkeep of the place. He said the farm is running the town in debt and the quicker the sale is made the better for all concerned.

Twentieth Century Club

The first meeting of the season of the Twentieth Century club will be held this evening in the vestry hall of the Congregational church. The affair will consist of an organ recital from 6:30 to 7 o'clock by Miss Theresa Smith, a supper at 7 o'clock followed by an illustrated lecture on "Jamaica," the speaker to be Hon. Herbert Fletcher of Westford. Miss Wardell of this city will render vocal selections. It is expected a large number of members will be on hand. The committee in charge of the meeting consists of the following: Mrs. H. M. Billings, chairman; John Henderson, Mrs. Melvin Rogers, Mrs. William Perley, Mrs. H. M. Larrabee, Miss Ethel Fairclough, Miss Almy Tingley, Mrs. William H. Lee and Miss Edith Forestall.

State Infirmary

The number of inmates at the state infirmary in Tewksbury Centre is 2351, the largest on record, according to Dr. Pierce, assistant superintendent. Last summer there were more inmates at the institution than in any other summer in the history of the infirmary and the drop in the early fall was hardly noticeable.

It is reported that about a dozen men employed as day men at the infirmary, including carpenters and other craftsmen will be laid off in a short time on account of lack of money. When the appropriations for the year were voted the usual sum for repairs was omitted and the men are now working on the old appropriation and when this runs out, unless a special appropriation is voted, the men will be discharged. These employees are all residents of the town.

This evening graduating exercises will be held in the assembly hall of the infirmary, when 12 young women will graduate as nurses. The exercises will be attended by the parents and close friends of the graduates and in the course of the evening, the superintendent of the institution, Dr. John H. Nichols will deliver a lecture on the work of nurses. An entertainment will be provided and dancing will be enjoyed.

The young women who are to graduate and their residences are as follows: Miss Ella M. Jacques, Ballardvale; Miss E. M. Sargent, Medford; Miss M. J. Chisholm, Providence; Miss E. G. Williams, Tewksbury; Miss B. M. McPhee, Providence; R. L. Miss B. P. Wilson, North Wilmington; Miss H. C.

Notes endorsed by me are coming due and must be paid. In this predicament half-way measures will not do and I shall sell all the stock in my factory and eighty stores.

ACCOUNTANTS CRITICIZE STREET DEPARTMENT

A copy of the official report in connection with the examination of the financial books of the city by the state bureau of labor and statistics, of which Charles F. Getty is the head, was received by George H. Brown, commissioner of finance yesterday. The examination of the books by Mr. Getty's experts was for the year 1913. The report is signed by Edward H. Fenton, chief accountant.

The report deals with all the departments and contains more or less mild criticism, especially of the street department. Referring to this department the report states that a great deal of time was consumed because of the condition of the accounts that it was very difficult to reconcile the accounts with the auditor's books because of a lack of systematic reporting by the department. The street department seems to have fought against the introduction of the uniform system of bookkeeping, probably because it meant more clerical work, and the report recommends that because of the great confusion in the accounts and reports of that department a change in the departmental accounting is desirable. It is also stated in the report that the commissioner of that department for 1913, supported by a majority of the municipal council, was desirous of having the interlocking system of accounting extended to the street department so as to have an up-to-date internal system, but somehow or other the department failed to pull itself out of the old rut in which it has been imbedded for years as it was at the time when Getty's men were struggling to obtain facts and figures for the report received by the finance commissioner today.

The following is a summary of the report as it deals with the different departments:

Mayor's Department
The only revenues received in this department are on account of Sunday amusement licenses, which amounted to $531. In my former report, attention was called to the lack of records of the licenses issued and a change was subsequently made. But I have been unable to locate the records, consequently no verification could be made. At the present time a complete record is being kept, so that in the future a satisfactory audit of this account can be made.

Auditor's Department
The auditor has shown a proper spirit, and, with the necessary cooperation of the several departments, will be able to give at any time a clear statement of the true financial condition of the city. The means now available for checking accounts show marked improvement over the previous year; and, with a continuation of the interest now manifested, I feel sure that the results will be highly satisfactory.

Treasurer's and Collector's Department
An examination was made of all the receipts and payments made in 1913. The accounts were checked with the auditor's books and found to be correct. The treasurer is also treasurer of the sinking and trust funds, all of which were found to be as reported.

To be able to get a proof of departmental accounts receivable shows accounting progress, as this is a check that is difficult to obtain in the majority of municipalities. In checking these accounts errors were found and corrections made, but these errors were purely bookkeeping, that is, errors in the entries made or in failure to enter on account of the number of reports; but in no case were errors found in cash transactions. The accounting of this department is uniformly good and, considering the immense amount of detail that is necessary, the number of posting errors made was very small. All cash and securities held for by the books were properly accounted for.

Assessors' Department
The examination of this department was confined to a checking of the clerical work on the collectors' commitment books and to records of abatements reported to the auditor. No errors were discovered in the assessors' clerical work on the commitment books, but there was a misunderstanding as to the reporting to the auditor of abatements after payment. These abatements, which are in reality authorized re-funds, should appear as such on the auditor's books and consequently should show separately from those abated before payment. The general clerical work in this department is performed in an accurate and business-like manner and the spirit of cooperation on the part of the officials is very commendable.

License Commissioners' Department
It is recommended that all receipts

HOW DEADLY BOMBS ARE DROPPED FROM AEROPLANES

This shows the method by which bombs are being dropped from aeroplanes during the European war. The bomb dropping officer is shown as just about to drop a pear shaped bomb upon the town of Huy, in Belgium. The aviator must take the machine up to a certain height to secure the proper detonation of the bomb. If dropped when too close to the ground the charge will fail to explode. A little windmill apparatus (seen between the protecting bars at the top of the bomb) must revolve a given number of times before the bomb becomes operative. The rush of air causes a little spindle inside the outer case to descend before the bomb strikes the ground.

be deposited with the treasurer during the year when received, in order that the entire revenue of a given year may show in the accounts of that year. A classified cash receipt book was installed in this department in November, 1913, which will greatly facilitate the accounting in the department.

City Clerk's Department
The financial records of this department were examined and receipts were listed. The cash receipts amounted to $2333.71, all of which was paid to the treasurer and duly reported to the auditor.

Engineering Department
This department is part of the street department and is charged with the duty of preparing sewer and sidewalk assessments. The departmental records for the year 1913 were examined and compared with the treasurer's and auditor's books and found to agree.

Building Department
The financial records of this department were examined. The accounts were incomplete, as no entries had been made in the ledger of bills sent out. The customary bills had been made out and committed for collection, excepting bills numbered 233 and 237, which were in the department office. The ledger was posted and outstanding bills were checked with the collections reported, with bills in the treasurer's office and with the auditor's ledger.

Police Department
The records and receipts were verified by checking the same with those of the auditor. Committed bills had not been reported to the auditor as contemplated by the system installed, but when the necessity of such reporting was called to the attention of the department, I was assured that it would be done.

Fire Department
The financial records of this department were checked with those of the auditor and treasurer. Bills aggregating $31.59 were committed. Of this amount $31.45 was collected by the treasurer.

were checked. Bills aggregating $370.92 had been committed, all of which were collected by the treasurer.

Weights and Measures

The records of this department were examined and checked with the auditor's and treasurer's books. Considerable difficulty was experienced in reconciling the accounts, due in a very large degree, no doubt, to the health of the late sealer whereby party developed upon deputies unacquainted with the keeping of the accounts. I was unable to check the accounts exactly; there appears to have been $5.01 collected and not turned over to the treasurer, but the different items included could not be located. The proper manner of recording and reporting was explained to the present sealer of weights and measures and it is believed that the instructions will be carefully carried out.

Health Department

The financial records of this department were examined and found to be systematically and accurately kept. The department collects cash for sale of garbage, licenses to collect garbage and manure licenses. Money received are deposited daily with the treasurer and receipts taken and properly filed, so as to facilitate the auditing of the accounts.

Milk Inspector

This office, while a part of the health department, collects money on account of milk licenses and keeps a separate cash book and ledger. The license and cash books were checked and a difference of fifty cents disclosed. Attention was called to this and I was assured that it would be corrected.

Street Department

An examination was made of the street department accounts. Owing to their condition, a great deal of time was consumed in obtaining a reconciliation with the auditor's books. The accounts receivable, as shown on the auditor's books, did not include all the bills sent out and were further confused with certain transfer bills. This was due to a lack of systematic reporting by the street department. A copy of every bill sent out was examined and checked with the ledger and further checked with the treasurer's cash collections on account of this department.

Accounts payable are always a matter of record; but there is a general laxity in recording accounts receivable. This often results in actual loss to a city, for unless it looks after its accounts due with as much care as its creditors look after their accounts they are liable to be lost sight of. A considerable sum of money is expended every year in this department. At present there is not an adequate system to show costs as they should be shown. The card system, classifying pay rolls for material charges, as well as yard accounts, must be kept if a given year's expense is to be properly shown.

The inability to show job costs and to distinguish between costs of work which are ordinarily termed "maintenance" and those that might properly be considered construction, or outlay, is, I believe, appreciated, for without these facts it is impossible to form any definite conclusions as to the efficiency or inefficiency of the department. While the cost of the work done is not the whole story, yet it is the basis from which deductions are to be made.

The commissioner, supported by a majority of the city council, desires to have the interlocking system of accounting extended so as to have an up-to-date internal system in this department.

The general accounts should correspond to those carried on the auditor's books, but should be in greater detail, for in this department it is necessary that the administrator have such detail in order that the funds in hand may be wisely spent. It is admitted that considerably more money can be honestly spent on streets than the tax payer will be willing, or can afford, to pay, therefore, discretion is necessary and this cannot be had without correct information.

While I believe the present system could produce better results if carefully carried out, and while it was expected that certain forms of reporting provided would secure certain general classifications after a year's trial it is found that the desired results have not been obtained. Under the circumstances a change in the departmental accounting is desirable in order to adequately meet the needs of this department.

Charity Department

Outside relief—The accounts of this department were well kept and in perfect balance. The receipts of the year agreed with the auditor's and treasurer's books. The outstanding accounts were listed and proved by the unpaid bills in the treasurer's office and by the auditor's ledger.

Hospital Account—The accounts of this department were checked and compared with the auditor's books and receipts were checked with the treasurer's accounts. A bill for $1 had been sent out without notifying the auditor. With this correction the books of the two departments were brought into agreement.

School Department

The records of this department were examined and proved. The receipts agreed with the auditor's and treasurer's books. Outstanding accounts were approved by comparison with the unpaid accounts in the treasurer's office.

Industrial School

Financial records of the Industrial school were examined and the receipts for the year and outstanding accounts were proved by comparison with the auditor's and treasurer's records.

Library Department

The records of the financial transactions of this department were examined and checked with the treasurer's books. The treasurer's cash book and bank account were audited, and receipts were checked with department books and payments with receipted vouchers.

Clark Department

The financial records of this department were examined and compared with the auditor's and treasurer's books. There were no outstanding bills.

Water Department

The records of this department were examined and checked with the auditor's and treasurer's books. A considerable amount of time was required to reconcile the department's books with the auditor's ledger. This was due to the fact that at the time the bills were sent out a correct total was not forwarded to the auditor and his books showed approximate figures, which was to be corrected at a subsequent date. The method of handling discounts had a tendency to confuse the accounts and it was necessary to check them carefully before a reconciliation was obtained.

Public Scales

The accounts were checked and compared with the auditor's and treasurer's books. The total receipts for the year were $51.20.

Cemetery Department

The books and accounts of this department were examined. The receipts were checked and found to agree with the treasurer's cash book and auditor's ledger. Outstanding accounts as shown by the department books correspond with the auditor's ledger.

The conclusion is as follows: "In submitting the results of this audit, I beg to express on behalf of myself and assistants, my appreciation of the assistance received from the several department heads and their staffs. It was necessary at times to interrupt the routine of the office work and to request information which could best be supplied by those actively engaged on the books; but in every instance the information or assistance was cheerfully given and every effort made to facilitate the work."

FEWER PRISONERS IN JAIL

Sheriff Eveleth Explains How the New Drunk Law Operates to Reduce the Number—Bill of Fare at Local Jail Not Bad

A noted decrease in the number of prisoners confined at the Lowell jail is being noticed and Sheriff Eveleth in conversation with a Sun reporter stated he has hopes of closing the institution before a great length of time. At the present time the list of prisoners at the local institution includes the names of 69 men and seven women, which is a big reduction from last year's list.

Of course the small number of prisoners at the Lowell jail does not mean that Lowell is now spotless or that no crime is being committed in the good Spinnaker City. The police court docket is as large every morning as it ever was, but the judge of the police court was given more leeway two years ago by the enacting of a bill at the legislature by which the judge of the police court has the privilege of placing a third offender for drunkenness on probation and many of the justices take advantage of this privilege to reform drunkards.

Formerly a third offender was given a direct jail sentence, but now he is fined and given a certain length of time in which to pay his fine, during which time he is placed in the care of the probation officer and, accordingly, most of the third offenders are given this chance to reform, and this accounts for the decrease in the number of prisoners who are being kept and fed at the expense of the county.

Two years ago when the bill was enacted the average number of prisoners at the jail was 123. Last year the average dropped to 99 and this year another decrease is being noted.

The crops at the jail are fairly good and the men are now kept busy storing the vegetables which are plentiful. There are 2½ acres of good fertile land in cultivation around the buildings and of this an acre and a half are covered with light vegetables, including cabbage, turnips, beets, parsnips, etc., and the crop is large enough to last until next fall. As soon as the farm work is finished the men will have nothing to do, for the industrial department which has been successfully conducted at the jail has been dropped. This consisted of a waste sorting department, but there has been nothing doing in this particular line since last January. Formerly the waste was purchased by the jail officials from an outside party. It was brought to the jail where it was sorted by the prisoners and then sold over to the same party, but this party went out of business last January and the jail officials have been unable to find another concern that would do business in the same way. This department kept 22 men busy all the time. The women, however, are kept busy mending and sewing for the prisoners.

There is a certain impression among a lot of people that prisoners at the Lowell jail and other similar institutions are being fed on bread and water but such is not the case, and if one will examine the bill of fare published before he will see that the menu is as good as that served in many of the homes of Lowell. Recently the prisoners commissioners asked the sheriff to supply them with a copy of the bill of fare served at the jail and the following menu was given.

I hope I shall speak plainly, for I am accustomed to do that, and if life and health are spared me, I hope I shall add to the knowledge of the Civil war, that shall inspire loyalty to our country, love to its people, and terror to future sectional treason forever. HERE'S QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Rheumal salts Routs Constipation

Constipation doesn't linger when Rheumal salts, takes action. This medicinally blended and absolutely pure carbonated lithia drink is the safest, most pleasant and quickest laxative known.

Undigested, fermenting, putrifying foods which cause constipation, headaches and biliousness yield quickly to Rheumal salts.

Rheumal salts dissolved in water makes a delightful carbonated drink that cleans out the stomach and intestines, eliminates toxins and poisons, and leaves the intestinal canal clean and sweet.

If you are bothered with indigestion, biliousness, neuralgia or rheumatism, then take Rheumal salts. Instead of "drugging" your system with cathartic pills and "starve" tablets.

Rheumal salts acts quickly and gently on the bowels, liver and kidneys, without griping or nausea. Can be used for infants as well as adults. It is a uric acid solvent as well as a saline laxative.

Ask your druggist for about five ounces of Rheumal salts. Take two teaspoonfuls in a glass of water before breakfast each morning.

Jackson put it, when explaining how he was able to do what he had received in his arm the bullet of Colonel Dickinson in his duel, 'I believe I had will enough left to have killed him if he had shot me through the heart.' And so I think I shall have will enough to sustain me until I have done justice to my friends and enemies, and especially the latter. With an accidental exception, I believe I have in my possession a copy of every important letter written by me and to me since 1851, and a knowledge of topics that it will not take a great deal of research to verify."

How Old Is Joe Donahue?

The Sun of a quarter of a century ago had the following:
"Lawyer Dan Donahue was made the proud possessor of a 10-pound boy Sunday night. This is the herculean feat that broad smile that the attorney is now wearing."

And the called him Joseph, and if he didn't wax fat he waxed tall and became possessed of a reach that prevented many a widely-thrown sphere from connecting with the unoffending craniums of the fans in the first base bleachers. Being a chip of the old block, Joe went in for the law like his father, but while Dan was busy to get them out of trouble, Joseph is helping to put them in, as a member of the district attorney's force. Don't get them mixed, for Joe Donahue, the real estate man is 25, and then some.

Billerica Has Changed

Says the old Sun:
"Within the past week a man giving the name of William Howe has been purchasing apples from the farmers in Billerica, giving in exchange checks on the Blackstone bank of Boston. One of the farmers went to Boston and found that the checks were worthless. It is said that he gave worthless checks in Bedford, Mass."

That simple little bunco scheme might have gone in Billerica a quarter of a century ago but in this enlightened day it takes a charge of dynamite to separate Billerica from anything in the line of money.

Two Active Workers

Says the old Sun:
During September Bernard Burns induced 50 young men to join the Matthew Temperance Institute and William F. Thornton induced 71. Monday night the institute voted to present these young men with handsome testimonials.

Truant Commissioner Thornton, for such is his present title, is an active member of the Matthews though in recent years he has extended his activity and hard work to Lowell council, Knights of Columbus, of which he is a past grand knight and at present a district deputy. While grand knight of Lowell council, Mr. Thornton had the pleasure of seeing a large increase in the membership of the council, due in a great measure to his enthusiasm and energy.

Was Probably Dyspeptic

Just why the following editorial appeared in the old Sun is somewhat of a mystery unless the editor had dyspepsia and was jealous for he says:

"The editor of the Times is out in a noble defence of the great American pie. We read his many words and our admiration for the pie was intensified. Brer Bayles of the Citizen is a pie sharp. He can make all kinds of pie and he never hesitates to place under his vest large pieces of his own product. Brer Bayles is a great canoeist and when starting off for a long trip he stows away a large batch of pies for ballast. At the peak he flies a pennant cut after the shape of a quarter of a pie."

Anniversary at Belvidere Church

On next Sunday the anniversary of the translation of the relics of St. Verecunda, a feast specially observed in the Immaculate Conception church, will take place. For many years a diminutive relic of the martyred saint had reposed in one of the altars and annually special services have been held. The event of a quarter of a century ago was reported in the old Sun as follows:

"The anniversary of the translation of the relics of St. Verecunda was observed at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Sunday. The altars were very beautifully adorned, red, the martyr's color, predominating the floral decorations. The relics, enclosed in a life-like figure, were placed before St. Joseph's altar, where they were venerated throughout the day by hundreds from all parts of the city. At the solemn mass in the morning, Very Rev. James McGrath, O. M. I., officiated, assisted by Frs. Joyce and Lancelotti of the same order. Fr. Joyce was the preacher. At vespers the church was crowded to the doors, and the occasion was one of those brilliant ceremonies for which the church is noted. There was a sermon by Rev. Fr. Dacey, O. M. I., who dwelt upon the great essential of the Christian, courage, showing that it was courage that animated the martyrs like Verecunda. He exhorted his hearers in very earnest speech to show courage in their lives, and by living as good Christians to serve as examples to all the time advancing, with Christ as the leader and under the banner of the cross, to the celestial reward. There was a procession of the relics, borne by Frs. Burns, Lagler, Malony and Gagnon, O.

TICK QUARANTINE

Lauderdale County, Miss., and Tensas Parish, La., have been released from quarantine for Texas fever tick, as part of nearly 7,000 square miles of southern territory, which had been freed from this pest. It seems that both of these counties made unusual progress in getting rid of the tick and so putting themselves in a position where their cattle could be shipped to market without quarantine restrictions, and also where they can safely import northern cattle for breeding or dairy purposes.

Lauderdale county began tick eradication in earnest on April 1, 1914, and through the active cooperation of the local and federal authorities, have succeeded in ridding the county of this costly and dangerous pest in five months.

In Tensas Parish the police jury appropriated $6,200 for tick eradication work in January, 1914. The building of cattle-dipping vats was commenced in February, and early in April active dipping of cattle was inaugurated. Federal, state, and county authorities and individual cattle owners cooperated harmoniously, so that Tensas Parish also joined the white area this fall.

The success of these two quick, intensive campaigns has stimulated cattle owners in other counties to consider similar plans in their own neighborhoods.

TRADE EXTENSION TIME

Many problems relating to the war in Europe and its effects upon American business were discussed last Wednesday at the annual meeting of the state board of trade, held in Boston. Though the questions involved were discussed from many angles and though the adverse influences were by no means minimized, the consensus of opinion seemed to be that America is on the eve of a great extension in trade, to benefit by which, however, our manufacturers and business heads must take the initiative and "go after it."

An unusually optimistic note, blended with salutary warnings, was sounded by Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, chief of the U. S. bureau of foreign and domestic commerce who at the outset declared that the war has brought opportunities such as we never had before. According to his view we have the entire field in South America, in China and in Australasia to ourselves, practically. "We should remember, too," he said, "that there are other markets than South America. The exporter looks with keen appreciation at the 60,000,000 in South America, but is apt to overlook the 300,000,000 prospective buyers in China." Those who kept in touch with government attempts to extend trade previous to the war will remember that the Orient was regarded as the field of greatest promise.

Frederick L. Roberts, Boston manager of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, called attention to a branch of his department which should be of peculiar interest to the manufacturers of Lowell. He wants all commercial organizations, boards of trade and business men who are interested in foreign trade to take advantage of a new branch office, recently opened in the Oliver building, both in securing publications on foreign trade or advice or suggestions which the bureau is anxious to furnish.

The report of the committee on manufactures, which was read at the meeting, indicated that the effects of the war on American industry could not be forecasted at present and incidentally paid a high tribute to German efficiency. Among other things of interest to American business, it said: "German educational methods, technical and industrial, and subsequent training have enabled German manufacturers to deliver their products to buyers in this country for less than it costs American manufacturers to produce the same kind." This consideration seems to have reacted unfavorably on the suggested manufacture of domestic dyes; but, even though true, it does not seem the part of wisdom for our industries to maintain utter dependence on a foreign supply that may become more and more uncertain. Even though American dyes are more costly, American manufacture must have them and it seems more a question of enterprise than a question of cost. Should the war drag on for a few years, America may learn to regret that it did not attack the dye question with more earnestness, even at ten times the possible cost at present. When a manufacturing country must have something to carry on its industries cost is a secondary consideration, and only time and experience will bring the excellence and efficiency that reduced costs for the Germans.

It is very necessary that all who have any influence on our trade relationships with foreign countries should work in an optimistic spirit, but the danger ahead should not be kept entirely out of sight. In this connection, it is well that manufacturers and others should peruse the following paragraph from the report of the committee on manufactures:

"When the rapid strides that have been made in Europe in recent years are considered, it may well be presumed that the time would not be far distant when American manufacturers would be outrun in the race. With European competition on the one hand and restrictive laws and labor agitations on the other, American manufacturers need to practice the utmost economy if they are to get by and make two ends meet."

THE PITY OF IT

The Lynn News remarks editorially that "the most pitiful cases which are brought to the attention of the local court are those of family troubles where little children are involved." The same is too true in the case of our own city and recent police court recordings have given some particularly touching examples. Most people reading of such occurrences see only the drunken father or mother or the penniless wretch who does nothing to support his family, but often there is a tragic story of suffering children deprived of food, miserably clad and objects of public pity behind the court story. Too often, unfortunately, the penalty imposed on the offending head of the family falls most heavily on the dependent members.

In non-support cases the law makes some slight provision for the family while the father is in the house of correction, but the amount is insufficient to be of much practical value. The miserable mother who has gone the limit of endurance realizes, therefore, that if she makes complaint against her drunken and abusive husband, and if he is given a term of imprisonment, she will have to support herself and her children as best she may in the meantime. Facing an almost hopeless situation, therefore, many poor women bear a life of nameless misery, uncomplainingly, helpless to remedy their condition.

In cases of habitual drunkenness, the law is not only ineffective but often times unjust. Fathers of families are taken from their homes and sent to prison for long periods, leaving the mother and the children destitute. Those who enjoy the comforts of life can scarcely realize the suffering of many in the slums who are devoid of fuel, food, or of clothing, and are perhaps dependent on charity for the means of keeping soul and body together. Added to the physical suffering and degradation are the moral influences which blight the home of the habitual drunkard.

The day will come when the law will look upon habitual drunkards as diseased rather than criminal, and it is to be hoped that in time the law will also plan to punish the guilty without punishing their innocent families in double measure. The most humane judge is powerless at present to avoid occasional impositions of hardship on the unoffending, but wise judges everywhere strive to meet the demands of justice with fairness to all concerned. In this age when humanitarians are wasting energy in so many aimless channels, it were well that some attention should be paid to those dependent on men and women on whom the hand of the law has fallen.

WAR LOANS AND FOOD

When the very nations involved do not lay down very specific lines as to what constitutes contraband of war, it is difficult to ascertain just what this country may do without danger in the matter of sending food supplies to the warring powers. At first it was generally understood that practically all goods sent to the nations direct or through a friendly nation might be seized by an inimical power, but recent declarations of Germany have cleared away the mists from the matter. This country is now shipping wheat and other food supplies without protest from across the water, though the possibility of capture at sea is not denied by the state department.

At the beginning of the conflict the state department intimated that loans to either side would be an unfriendly act towards the other, but there has been a change of view. France made application for a loan of one hundred million from our financiers, but owing to the opposition of the government, the scheme fell through. Now Acting Secretary of State Lansing has announced that this country may make loans to either side without danger of complicity, and the policy adopted becomes parallel to that which governs every country at times of war. Still, the government erred in the right direction by being over-prudent until time showed what could be done without danger of international complications.

Many peace-loving people regret that by the sending of food and money to one or other of the powers we indirectly prolong the war, but to do otherwise would be as foolish as it would be ineffectual in achieving peaceful ends. International law cannot be set aside by the most idealistic sentiment, and no nation dare set itself to the task of starving out a war. Furthermore, the impractical suggestion, if adopted, would react more on the non-combatants than on the armies actively engaged. America may send money and food to Europe—under definite limitations—without endangering our own peace or the spirit of neutrality.

BOY SUICIDES

It is an age of wonders, not the least of which are the shocking incidents of juvenile suicide that crop out with sickening regularity. Last Wednesday two boys at Freehold, Mich., after having played "hockey" from school shot themselves rather than face frate parents. One was aged 10 and the other 12. An almost similar story was reported in the papers of a week or so ago. It has always been accepted as true that even the old hang on to life tenaciously, and here we have lives that have not tasted the first sweets of existence blotted out by the terrible act of self destruction. The thing is incomprehensible and no words can describe its enormity. Surely one such incident in a year is sufficient to make all mounds of character pause and ponder. Modern conditions such as the lack of proper home influences, laxity of school discipline, weakening of religious bonds, the movies, codding juvenile laws, etc., have manufactured a strange crop of youngsters. Strange that our boasted progress should have given us so much that is abnormal.

HELP FROM WARSHIPS

One of the most picturesque items of war news of the past few days is that which tells of alleged attacks made by British warships on the land forces of the Germans in the neighborhood of Ostend. Rumor has it that 11 war vessels are taking part in the operations and though there is nothing definite to build on the official British despatches have spoken of aid given by the marines on land and by warships at sea. One report relates the shelling of Ostend by some vessels of the English fleet, a rather strange reversal of battle conditions, but made imperative by German possession.

Remembering that the greatest German successes followed most closely on the heels of favorable despatches from the allies, it does not do to take too much for granted, but blended with the stories of English attacks on Ostend are other indications of German defeat at this point. Since the Alsace battle, which was not decisive either way, there has not been a great battle between the allies and the Germans, and the time seems ripe for another revelation.

The Harvard authorities have taken the only course consistent with decency in requesting Professor Munsterberg to withdraw his resignation and to remain at the head of the psychology department. A learned professor is a greater asset than a visionary bequest with a string on it, and besides Munsterberg, if he has any opinion on the war worth mentioning, would prove a rather strange freak in condemning the country of which he is such a notable product. In this country we must expect to hear personal opinions in favor of both sides.

The American tank steamer John D. Rockefeller, after having been seized by a British cruiser, has been released; true to its name, it got out of a rather tight fix. The Standard Oil and its distinguished founder usually come out on top.

Let us hope that the body found at Mountain Rock will not be buried as others have been—until all measures of identification have been exhausted. Some day Lowell will have to do some fall explaining on this score.

Without doubt the European war is reflected here in the prevalence of murder, suicide, robbery and all manner of crime: the newspapers have been unusually lurid for the past few weeks.

Neutrality, brother; safety first, you know.

Was there really a murder?

Clean your liver and constipated bowels tonight and feel fine.

Get a 10-cent box now. Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the food, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

WAR AND WOMEN

War is a man's game, but there have been Amazons. And in all the wars recorded in history, the wives and mothers of the warriors have acquired masculine austerity. The Spartan mothers told their sons to bring back their shields from the war or be brought back upon them, and correspondents in Germany have reported that the German women witnessed the departure of their dearest to the front with tearless eyes and grim determination, not ceasing even to see them back unless they returned victors. And there is the story of the aristocratic French mother whose three sons were killed in battle not long ago. A messenger came to bring her the news, and faltered badly in telling the sad story. But the mother did not break down. A look of rapture is said to have lit up her face as she said: "My sons all died for France, I am satisfied."

Women in all ages have urged their men to fight. There is nothing that a woman desires so much on earth as a coward. More than once when men would have ended a war, which they had come to know was hopeless, the women have urged them to fight to the last ditch. The southern women did in the Civil war, and if the rest had been covered by the women of the north would have done the same. Women are not what so many scolders think them to be. In times of stern and stress, that masculine subconscious mind that Charles Geoffrey Leland credited them with comes to the surface.—Hochester Herald.

INCOMMON SENSE

She mastered through base with ease, Had rules of harmony by heart; Could play Wagnerian rhapsodies, With touch and skill of highest art; Yet she confessed, with a blush, Her ignorance of the sweet-toned thrush.

She studied the masters old and new, Who made the canvas live and glow, With sweep of plain, expanse of blue, And touch the mountain crowned with snow.

And yet for shame she could not tell An aster from an asphodel.

Her headgear was a vain display Of plumes of ostrich and egret, And stunning was its wild array Of bird wings, blue and red and jet; But strange to say she did not know A blackhawk from a common crow.

In polished diction frenzied verse, She gloried in the templed hills, And gushingly she would rehearse, In studied phrase, of woods and hills, But knew no difference—no joke—Between a maple and an oak.

She learns a kitchen stunt or two—Desert to make of Frenchy name, Ethereal as the honey dew, On lips that feed a lover's flame; But her indulgent mother said, She could not make a loaf of bread.

She had a liver—this she knew— Its function guessed not, nor its place; And brains, perhaps so, quite a few, But her chief asset was her face; And this, with her uncommon lore, Brought her four suitors by the score, —M. Caraness, in Kansas City Journal.

LATIN AMERICAN TRADE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23.—That Latin American countries are looking to the United States for the capital and the market for their products which they formerly found in Europe is emphasized in "Statements on the Latin American Trade Situation," a pamphlet just issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, giving the addresses made by representatives of Latin American countries at a conference with American officials held recently in Washington. The pamphlet, issued as Miscellaneous Series No. 20, contains the statements made by the ministers from Bolivia, Uruguay, Peru, and Cuba to the United States, the consuls general of Costa Rica and Colombia in New York, the minister from Ecuador to England, and others, besides the opening remarks of Secretary of State William L. Bryan, and a statement by Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield. Many obstacles to the development of Latin American trade with the United States were commented on, notably the matter of credits and that of a proper understanding of the Latin American way of doing business on the part of business men in the United States. The pamphlet is for sale by the superintendent of documents, Government Printing office, Washington, for five cents.

Richard V. Lindabury Continues Argument for the Defense

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—Resuming his argument today for the defense in the federal suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation on the ground that it violates the anti-trust law, Richard V. Lindabury, in the United States district court, continued to describe the conduct of the corporation after its organization. At the outset he denied that the earnings of the corporation were excessive, but declared that on the contrary they were quite ordinary. Counsel told the court that the record in the case does not show a single instance of rebates having been asked or received by the concern or by any of its subsidiaries. Mr. Lindabury gave figures to show that since the formation of the corporation the wages of its employees have been increased an average of 25 per cent; that in 1912 its employees numbered 22,024, that its total yearly payrolls then amounted to $185,551,693 and that the average yearly wage of its men was $83.70. In February, 1913, the average yearly wage increased to about $92. The corporation, in its treatment of employees, Mr. Lindabury declared, leads the world.

MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

REV. HENRY C. KING RESIGNED AFTER BEING ELECTED PRESIDENT AT PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 22.—Differences of opinion with regard to relations of the American Missionary association with the National Council of Congregational churches caused Rev. Henry C. King, of Ohio after being elected president of the missionary organization at its annual meeting today to offer his resignation. He finally was induced to withdraw the resignation, at least until the convention had taken a definite stand in the question that prompted his action.

Besides Dr. King, the following officers were elected: Vice presidents, Samuel O. Prentice, Connecticut; Rev. Harry P. Dewey, Minnesota; Prof. John B. Clark, New York; Rev. William Barton, Illinois; Rev. J. B. Van Horn, California; recording secretary, Rev. Asher Anderson, Massachusetts; auditors, Edwin H. Baker, Connecticut; George W. Bailey, New York; executive committee, Rev. J. H. Brown, Danforth, Connecticut; W. B. Howe, Vermont; Rev. Oscar E. Maurer, Connecticut; honorary secretary and editor, Rev. A. F. WILD RUNAWAY TWO MEN KILLED

Men Were Injured When Thrown From Wagon in Varnum Avenue Who Robbed Bank of $20,000 in Battle

Peter Ducharme of 5 Lavalle place and Peter Langlois, who resides at 53 Race street, were thrown from a moving van shortly after noon today when the horse attached to the vehicle took the bit between his teeth and galloped madly down Varnum avenue. The accident occurred at the end of the Varnum avenue car line. Both men were thrown heavily to the ground and stunned for a time. Ducharme twisted his leg when he fell and found it impossible to stand upon the injured member, while Langlois' shoulder was badly wrenched. A hurry call was at once sent for the ambulance and the two victims of the accident were hurried to the Lowell hospital. There it was found that, although badly wrenched, Ducharme's leg was not broken. At first it was thought that Langlois was suffering from a fractured collar bone, but an investigation showed it to be only a severe bruise.

YOUNG MAN FOUND DEAD

BODY OF WALTER H. LITTLE FOUND WITH BULLET HOLE IN RIGHT TEMPLE

WALTHAM, Oct. 22.—With a bullet hole in his right temple and one over his heart, Walter H. Little, a 19-year-old boy of Belmont, was found dead beneath scrub pines near Worcester lane today. He was discovered by Norman Millard and Charles Bond, two of the Boy Scouts of Waltham, who had been called out to search for Little, reported missing since yesterday. A .38-calibre revolver was lying on the boy's chest when the body was found. An all night search was conducted by the Belmont forces without success. Medical Examiner George West pronounced it suicide.

THE C. E. CONVENTION FIRES ON THE DUMP

DELEGATES FROM LOCAL SOCIETIES ATTENDING SESSIONS IN FITCHBURG THIS AFTERNOON

Local Christian Endeavor workers left this city today to attend the state convention of the Massachusetts Christian Endeavor union which opened in Fitchburg this afternoon and will conclude next Sunday. It is the belief of all who are to take part in the big series of meetings that this convention will be the greatest in the history of the young people's work in this state. Each Christian Endeavor society of this city received from the publicity committee an invitation to attend, together with several pieces of advertising matter, and every effort has been made for a record breaking attendance. Local young people responded in large numbers and there is no doubt but Lowell will be well represented at all sessions. The Fitchburg city hall has been secured for the big mass meetings, while meetings will be held in the various churches near the centre of the city. The Fitchburg Y. M. C. A. will be used as headquarters for the committee during the convention.

FIREMEN ON THE JUMP—HEARTS ALL A-TITUP—BRUSH FIRE GETS A HEAD

Dump fires on Princeton and Stackpole streets have kept the firemen on the move all day. Beginning early this morning this smoldering rubbish on both dumps occasionally blazed forth making it unsafe for the firemen to leave. A brush fire up at Tyler Park shortly before noon gave the Westford street chemical a little exercise but was shortly gotten under subjection. A few minutes after 5 o'clock smoke was discovered issuing from the large block at 127 Fletcher street and box 15 was hastily rung in by a passer-by. The firemen arrived in time to put out the flames before much damage had resulted. FOR REAL ESTATE MEN Also for Builders, Contractors, Furnishers and Home Equippers—A Fine Business Proposition The real estate and builders' page of The Sun, a Saturday feature which has enjoyed rapid growth and which has brought excellent returns to the advertisers, will be published in all editions on Saturday as usual, with its interesting reading matter and advertisements. The number of people who look for The Sun Builders' Page each week is surprisingly large. People interested in buying homes, building, altering or repairing their present property, making additions, installing heating apparatus, roofing, purchasing furniture, etc., should read carefully the advertisements on The Sun Real Estate page for the local real estate brokers, contractors, builders and dealers have interesting offerings. The contractors, by reading this page each week, can keep in close touch with the business operations throughout the city and vicinity, and this should be of great help to them. Now is the time to start your own advertising campaign on this page. Telephone 4100 and ask to have The Sun representative call. He will explain the rates, and assist in preparing copy if desired. EXCUSE ME grandmother and that she, the mother, had started to work and she said they would pay the bill in short notice. The constable, who sympathized with the family, told the woman he didn't come to collect but simply to see the babies, and he told her not to hurry about paying. "When I want money I will come around," said the constable, and then left the house convinced that the woman had given birth to four boys. Yesterday the constable told the story of the birth of the four boys to a Sun reporter and the latter proceeded to investigate. After interviewing the woman, the Sun man was convinced that the only child in the Perkins street house was an 18-months old boy and that the story of the birth of four was a joke at the expense of the constable.

It looks now as though the next battle that Jack Johnson will engage in will be against the Boston negro, Sam Langford. The latter declares that he is only too willing to accept the défi issued by Jack Johnson in which Johnson said he would take on the Boston man if the latter bet $20,000 on the side. Langford says he would be glad to bet that much money with Johnson, but seems to think that he ought to get the prevailing odds, which would be about two to one in case they clashed. Sam met the champion in Chelsea, Mass., April 26, 1906. He was practically a novice and not much more than a welter-weight. At that he gave Johnson the greatest battle of his career.

CECELIE'S CAPTAIN TALKS

Says He Will Not Budge an Inch Until He Receives an Official Guarantee From U. S.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Oct. 22.—Capt. Charles Polack, commander of the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecelie, which has been here since early in August when she returned to America, waters after being almost in sight of British shores, today, voiced his objections to any summary transfer of his ship to Boston by order of the federal court. "I will not budge an inch," Captain Polack said to J. H. Wilson, United States marshal for Maine, "until I have received further notice and an official guarantee that my ship will be safe from attack of belligerent nations, and that the United States will furnish adequate convoys and that my people will be immune from capture and imprisonment. I must look out for them." The captain said he would not trust the assurances of Great Britain and France that the ship's journey would not be interfered with and he declared that a United States torpedo boat destroyer would not be sufficient to guard the Cecelie if the British cruiser Essex or any other larger war vessel should halt the liner. "I must have an absolute guarantee," Captain Polack said, "that my ship will be safe from attack of belligerent nations, and that the United States will furnish adequate convoys and that my people will be immune from capture and imprisonment. SPLAWN IS EXPECTED TO PROVE STAR IN MICHIGAN U. FOOTBALL CONTESTS

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 22.—Larry Splawn is regarded as one of the stars of the Michigan football team this year. In the hard fought contest with the Michigan Agricultural college team he kicked a field goal from the twenty yard line, this being late in the final quarter after the teams had battled on even terms, neither side being able to score. Splawn plays fullback and is a hard fighter at all times. Galt is a substitute who has shown up well in practice.

GOV. WALSH URGES TAX

REFORM AT LYNN RALLY

LYNN, Oct. 22.—Fully 500 persons waited in Odd Fellows hall until after 11 o'clock last night for the arrival of Gov. Walsh, who was the chief speaker at the democratic rally. More than twice that number had attended the rally during the early part of the night.

The governor was given a splendid reception and his address was frequently interrupted by applause. Representative Charles H. McGhee presided.

Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Boynton praised the state and national administration, and Congressman Michael P. Thelander spoke on the currency bill, paying a tribute to the diplomacy of President Wilson in averting hostilities with Mexico.

The other speakers were Michael H. Cotter, candidate for representative; Abner S. McLand, candidate for senator in the 1st Essex district; and Henry F. Dunn, candidate for senator in the 5th Middlesex district.

Gov. Walsh said, in part: "The cost of government as represented in taxation is a large element in the present high cost of living, but the great injustice of our present taxation system lies in the excessive burdens which it places on the great masses of common people as represented in rent-payers and in small householders. If all the property in the Commonwealth which at the present time escapes taxation and which by law is subject to taxation were assessed the tax rate today would be little, if any, greater than it was a generation or two ago."

"For many years our legislature in its attempts to solve our problems of taxation has found its authority limited by the provisions of the constitution."

"This year I declared in my inaugural for a constitutional amendment to increase the powers of the legislature in this regard and personally went before the legislative committee on taxation to point out the injustice of the present system and the urgent need of a constitutional amendment."

"Thereafter in several conferences with the committee on taxation I used my influence to remove any partisan issue from the question so that results might be accomplished. For the first time after years of agitation the effort for taxation reform met with success, through the passage by the legislature of a constitutional amendment giving to the legislature the power to levy a real income tax."

"The amendment grants to the legislature the power to provide legislation for a real income tax. The amend-

CANDIDATE MCCALL

ANSWERS SEC. REDFIELD

HAVENHILL, Oct. 22.—At a republican rally in city hall last evening, Hon. Samuel W. McCall was the principal speaker.

Sec. Redfield, in a speech last night at Cambridge, is reported to have attributed present business conditions in New England to the lack of efficiency of its manufacturing plants.

"An orator who is equal to the assertion that 'the democratic administration and tariff had increased business and prosperity' hardly deserves a serious reply," Redfield said. "Statistics relative to our foreign and domestic commerce effectively dispose of Mr. Redfield's assertion."

"The truth is that the business men of New England have the brains, the splendid plants with modern equipment, and in fact everything but cheap labor and Mr. Redfield will point out a way in which with plants of equal efficiency our manufacturers can compete on equal terms with foreign manufacturers while the former pay double the wages that are paid abroad. He will make his position appear to be tenable."

"The remedy I have been attempting to present for extravagance in our state government at the different meetings before which I have spoken has been simply the old-fashioned remedy of keeping down expenditures. In order to keep down taxation we must keep down expenditure."

Discussing the amendment to the Boston city charter which was approved by the governor against the earnest protest of the mayor, Mr. McCall said that the present charter was the result of a long contest, originally carried on by leading men of all parties.

"The existing charter provides," he said, "for the election of a governing board under such conditions that the voters may easily make themselves acquainted with the candidates and their fitness and the men elected are responsible to the city at large. But it is proposed to increase the size of the board, to dissipate responsibility, and to have the members responsible only to limited sections of the city."

"The system proposed is an ideal one for log-rolling and political horse trading between the different wards. Such a measure should have received the veto instead of the approval of the governor."

ment has been specifically endorsed in the democratic platform and the democratic party is committed to its support and will use its best efforts to secure its passage for a second time in the next legislature in order that it may be submitted to the people for ratification.

PROGRESSIVE ENTHUSIASM

NATION-WIDE, SAYS WALKER

LEOMINSTER, Oct. 23.—About 100 attended the progressive rally at G. A. R. hall last night. Dr. C. S. Brigham presided. The speakers were Hon. Joseph Walker of Brookline and James E. Magenis of Boston. Rep. Alfred M. Fessenden of Townsend and Joseph Fessenden of Charlton, candidate for congress.

Mr. Walker and Mr. Magenis spoke in Peppercott earlier in the evening and did not reach here until 10 o'clock, by which time half of the audience had left.

Mr. Walker declared that no movement since the Civil war had taken hold of the people so strongly as the progressive movement. If its present leaders should retire, he said, others would take their places. Enthusiasm prevailed from one end of the country to the other.

From the movement is bound to grow a new liberal constructive party that will give America its purest democracy. Prosperity will not be for a favored few, but will be passed among the people; politics will be lifted from the mire; people will be taught that it is not a game to be played, but is intended to take the government from the special interests and give it back to the people for whom the progressive party stands.

Mr. Magenis reviewed his early life as a newspaperman and declared that in those days newspapers told the truth.

BIRD SPEAKS TWICE

ATTLEBORO, Oct. 22.—A big progressive rally was held last night in Armory hall. Dr. Clarence W. Kates, chairman of the progressive town committee, presided. The speakers were Russell A. Wood, candidate for secretary of state; Charles S. Bird of Walpole; Mrs. C. M. Tillinghast of Somerville and Arthur M. Huddell of Chelsea.

Mr. Bird again urged the advisability of the state establishing a central purchasing agency which, he claimed, could save nearly $1,000,000 yearly, and asked Gov. Walsh to explain why his administration had failed to take such a step.

In North Attleboro the same speakers took part at a progressive rally in Red Men's hall.

jecting the constitutional amendment will be one of the most important to come before the legislature which is likely that he will be able to put through considerable constructive legislation as promised in the labor party's program.

needs of the army, and large quantities of Virginia tobacco are being imported specially for the use of the British troops.

Philadelphia having been added to the roster of union cities by the International Ladies' Garment Workers, the latter are now making a search on to Cleveland in an effort to undecade that city.

The scope of the government's big clearing house for laborers and home seekers has been extended by the establishment throughout the country of distributing zones with headquarters in 18 cities.

In Youngstown, O., a 90 per cent organization of moving picture operators made it possible to obtain a double shift with a 7-hour day for each man, a slight wage increase and full union recognition.

The New York law requiring one day of rest in seven for workers in manufacturing and mercantile establishments has just been upheld for the second time in an important decision by Judge Fish of the Niagara county court.

The great national political contest in Australia has been concluded and the labor party has won a magnificent victory. The labor party will have 41 members in the house of representatives and 32 seats in the senate.

The Massachusetts state law which declares it unlawful to make false statements in advertisements was taken advantage of by union cigar-makers in Boston to end the practice of a non-union cigar manufacturer who was deceiving the public.

Twenty thousand British miners in Cannock Chase (Staffs) will give sixpence a fortnight each to the national relief fund and 10,000 men employed by Cannock Laird & Co. shipbuilders, Birkenhead (Cheshire) have agreed to the following weekly deductions from wages: Those paid 35s. and over, 6d.; between 32s. and 30s. 4d.; 50c. and 25c. 2d.; and less than 25s., 1d.

As a result of the bill passed by the Massachusetts legislature in 1913, continuation schooling in Boston is made compulsory, and all pupils between the ages of 14 and 16 who obtained their employment certificates since last January will be compelled to attend a designated continuation school.

Oscar F. Nelson, former president of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, now a state factory inspector, has been nominated by the democrats of the ninth Illinois district for congress.

Andrew Fischer, the miner, will again officiate as prime minister of Australia, and with a safe working majority of eight in the house and overwhelming odds in the senate it is likely that he will be able to put through considerable constructive legislation as promised in the labor party's program.

INDUSTRIAL AND STORE NEWS

The Paragon club holds forth tonight in their annual dance.

Walter Cleary of the Lowell Bleachery did a comeback stunt again last night.

James Keefe of the Stirling mills has returned from a two days' business trip to Boston.

William Tucker of the A. G. Pollard store is developing into quite a howler.

The Ideal Campers dance last night attracted a large gathering. A decided feature was the return of the old glide dances.

Joseph McGuire of the N. E. T. & T. Co., succeeded in snaring a pheasant this season. It is a large male and Joe has sent it to a taxidermist.

J. Paul Doherty of the A. G. Pollard store will have no opposition for the position of secretary of the Employees' Mutual Benefit association.

Director Labrie of the A. G. Pollard store, who is an all around athlete, will appear in many indoor meets during the winter months.

Jimmie Boland, the genial salesman at Pitts' supply store is making many new friends and customers. "Everybody knows Jimmie."

Danilo O'Day of the Balck salesrooms makes a grand appearance at the wheel of the latest models.

Mr. Archibald Kenefick of the Massachusetts mills has been elected president of the popular Woonah club which recently opened quarters in the Odd Fellows building.

Paul Chappelle and Harold Welcome, clerks at the Saco-Lowell shops, will journey to Wilmington tomorrow in quest of pheasants. Both are crack shots.

Frank Dawson, formerly employed at the Tremont & Suffolk mills is now connected with a Boston firm. He has been in Lowell the past few weeks demonstrating the company's lines, and renewed many old acquaintances.

Adam Bentley, chauffeur at the Massachusetts mills, has returned from a month's visit to Detroit. Enroute he took in many interesting points and was remarkably impressed with Niagara Falls, which he says at this time of the year are very beautiful.

Machinists' Helpers

The Machinists' Helpers union, composed of members employed at the Millieria car shops held a short meeting last evening in the union headquarters in the Odd Fellows building. Routine business was transacted. The secretary reported the treasury to be in a good financial condition.

Machinists' Local 829

The Machinists' union, local 829, held a largely attended meeting last night in Machinists' hall in Middle street. President Walter Phelps presided and called the meeting to order promptly at 8 o'clock. A list of important business was transacted and 8 new members were admitted. Several applications for membership were also received. Committee reports were accepted as read and communications from various sources were properly referred to the secretary. Several of the members spoke on the goal of the union and their remarks proved of much interest. The secretary's report showed the membership to be making large increases at every meeting and the treasury in a strong financial condition.

Silesia Worsted Co.

The mills of the Silesia Worsted Co., North Chelmsford, shut down last evening to reopen next Monday morning.

While information has been obtained to that effect, it is possible that the mill will only work four days a week for the next few weeks. The management hopes, however, that full time will be resumed very soon. The short week in the day department will have the night work, which will continue as at present. The Silesia mills have for the past few years been very busy and have been running overtime when similar mills were forced to work short time. The Silesia mills have the reputation of making the finest yarn in the country, a fact which has been responsible for its steady progress.

Printers Held Meeting

The members of the Printers' union held a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting last night in Carpenters' hall in the South building. Business of considerable importance was transacted and one new member was admitted. Three applications were received and turned over to the investigating committee who will report on them at the meeting to be held next Thursday night. Several committees submitted reports and they all denoted progress. Business Agent George P. Field read a report which showed the attitude of the employers toward union employees to be good and all members working. The secretary's report showed the financial condition of the union to be in an excellent standing. After the business session the usual informal musicale was given to which the members contributed.

General Labor Notes

The committee considering the advisability of holding the English Trades Union congress this year at Lowell announced that in the present condition of affairs it was impossible to fix a date.

The Tobacco Workers International union will have an extensive exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915.

Unions connected with the Woodworkers International union are taking a referendum vote on the question of affiliation with the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

New York Journeymen Tailors union No. 320 is conducting an agitation for the abolishment of home work, the establishment of an 8-hour day and higher wages.

French state tobacco factories are working day and night to supply the to bed, and when I came down I couldn't see Mrs. Variance. I wondered if she was in the doctor's office, so I went around the house and to the window looking upon the office. The shade was up a little way.

Q. That was the same window which was broken on the night of June 29 last, and through which a shot was fired? A. Yes, sir, the same window.

Watched Through the Window

Q. Well, what did you see on the night of the Variance incident? A. The doctor and Mrs. Variance were sitting facing each other, on two chairs close together. I saw them talk for a few moments, then the doctor made a gesture with his hands, palm upward. I saw him pick up a small object, he carried his money that way—stuffed in. He straightened out some bills and I saw him hand her $15. She put it in her purse. Both rose together, and as they did so she kissed the doctor upon the cheek.

Q. What did you do? A. I rapped on the window to let them know I had seen them, then went around to the office door, knocked and said: "Doctor, let me in." He opened the door. I went to her and said: "These are pretty dollars for a married woman with a young doctor." Then I said to the doctor: "So this is what you have been doing. This is the way you money goes." I knew he had a good practice and collected a good bit of money, and we lived modestly, but we never seemed to be able to save anything.

Would Not Be Halted

Q. Did you do anything at this time? A. Yes, I slipped her with the back of my hand like this (illustrating a fairly vigorous blow). Then Mrs. Variance said she was not giving me this money, but I found it in my pocket. I demanded it back. She asked him if he should give it to me and the doctor said: "Yes, if she wants it, it is her house." So she gave me the money and went away.

Q. Did anything happen between you and the doctor afterward? A. Yes, after she had gone he was very angry and gave me the most awful cutting down I ever got in my life. He said I was breaking up his practice and he—

The attorney attempted to interject another question, but Mrs. Carman was full of her subject and was not to be halted for an instant. She went on: "Now wait for a minute. He said he wasn't going to stand for it and I ever came into that office again there would be a fight."

Counselor Levy next brought up the matter of the dictagraph. The accused wife admitted that it was in the house on the night of the shooting and had been here since May 19. She was dis-

SLEEPYTIME TALES

BY VIRGINIA VALE

FOR THE LITTLE READERS OF THE SUN

THE LOST POCKETBOOK

Once upon a time Andrew was walking home one night in a great hurry. He was cold, tired and very hungry. Andrew was only fifteen and he had to work quite hard to help his mother and little sister Alice.

Just as he was turning the corner he stubbed his toe against something hard in the snow. As he stopped to see what it was he saw that it was a pocketbook and that it was filled with bills.

"What luck," he said, "I can now buy mother a new dress and Alice a warm coat to wear to school and perhaps there will be money enough for us all to go to the Movies some night."

Now Andrew didn't mean to be dishonest. He didn't stop to think that was all. "Look mother, see what I have found," he said opening the door with a shout. "A pocketbook full of money. Now we will have money to spend."

"My dear boy, don't you know it is not ours to spend and I am sure you do not want to keep anything that is not yours," replied his mother.

Andrew opened it and they looked at the bills inside and it seemed to them like a small fortune. While they were looking the door bell rang and Andrew went to see who was there.

"Did you find a pocketbook?" asked a lady. "I am afraid that I have lost mine. I am sure I had it just before I passed this house."

"Yes," said Andrew, "I found one and here it is."

"Oh I am so glad for I could not afford to lose it as I am quite poor and it has taken me a long time to save this money and I must use it to pay the doctor. My little girl has been lame and the doctor has just made her well and this was the money to pay him. I want you to take this dollar and buy you something with it," said the lady.

Andrew was very glad now that he was able to return the money and ran into the house to tell his mother so and show her the money he had been given.

"Anyway, mother, we can all go to the movies so let's have supper and get ready," he said cheerfully.

His mother patted his head and she said: "We can all go and enjoy that treat of yours I am sure."

He never heard anything except what was reassuring to her mind.

Q. Did you listen over the dictagraph on the night of June 29? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Did you ever listen to any strange women who were the doctor's patients? A. No, only to those who came regularly to see him.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Louise Bailey? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Did you ever see her? A. Not alive. I saw her body in the undertaker's place at Hempstead.

Deeds Firing a Pistol

Q. How did you happen to go there? A. I went because you, Mr. Levy, asked me if I would go and see if I could recognize her.

Q. Did you ever fire a pistol or a gun in your life, Mrs. Carman? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about pistols or guns? Did you ever have one in your hand? A. Only once, when I cleaned a drawer of the doctor's desk. There was a small pistol there, which was given to the district attorney. Don't you remember, Mr. Smith? (Leaning over and smiling upon the prosecutor.)

Q. You are the witness, Mrs. Carman, replied Smith. "You are the one to say."

Secures Counsel

Mr. Levy then brought out how he became connected with the case.

Q. Did Carman shoot the doctor the day after the shooting to offer his sympathy to the family and she had said to him: "I see my name in the newspapers. Will you advise me in case it should be necessary?" Whereupon Levy subsequently took up the case for the family.

Then the attorney took up, categorically, the story told on the previous day by Celia Coleman. Bit by bit he read Celia's testimony from the record of Wednesday's proceedings and asked Mrs. Carman about the truth or falsity of the woman's statements.

Q. You heard Celia Coleman testify yesterday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she tell the truth? A. She did not.

Q. Did you go out through the kitchen on June 29, when she was there? A. I did not.

Q. Did you fire a shot that night? A. No.

Q. Did you go back through the kitchen while Celia was there? A. No.

Q. Did you have any talk with her at that time? A. No.

Q. Did you say, "I shot him?" A. I did not.

Q. Did Celia see you in a kimono and a nightgown? I believe it was? A. (With a smile) No, sir.

Q. Did you show her a pistol? A. No.

Q. Did you go to Celia's room early the next morning? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say to her, "Oh Celia, why did I kill that woman? I hope God will forgive me?" A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Did you tell Celia you would take care of her boy as long as he lived? A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell her to lie to me when I questioned her about the night of June 29? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you wink at her on that occasion? A. (Smiling so broadly as almost to laugh) A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell her to get your father, as you wished to have a pistol put out of the house? A. I did not.

The lawyer then asked Mrs. Carman if she had been allowed to testify as she had wished to do before either of the two grand juries which indicted her, the first for manslaughter, the second for murder. She said she had not been permitted to testify.

Shows Condition of Her Arms

Then he asked her to do something entirely unexpected, the useful purpose of which was not clearly evident. "Will you take off your gloves, please?" asked Mr. Levy. She obeyed.

Then he asked: "What is the condition of your arms? Have you any cuts or bruises upon them?"

Mrs. Carman pulled her loose sleeves above her elbows, held her arms aloft so the jury might see them and then moved her hands about to show the palms and backs just as a magician does when he shows he "had nothing to deceive you."

"That was all," said Mr. Levy to the district attorney.

"My cross-examination is likely to be quite extended, your honor," Mr. Smith told the court, so Justice Kelly announced an adjournment until the morning.

HIGHLAND M. E. CHURCH

The Highland M. E. church was the scene last evening of one of the largest crowds of the season, the occasion being a supper and entertainment for the Sunday school.

The supper was served under the direction of Mrs. W. L. Leach and Mrs. A. O. Knapp, who were assisted by a large and competent committee. Following the meal, a splendid entertainment was staged by a kitchen orchestra, made up of 25 or 30 young people. The instrumental music was furnished after the ordinary kitchen utensils and the home-made orchestra was all to the good.

During the evening there were several readings by Donald Davis and Fred Timmins sang a number of selections.

ANNUAL HARVEST SUPPER

The annual harvest supper and entertainment by the members of the High Street Congregational church, held last night, was attended by a large number of people of the church.

Supper was served at 6:30 and at 8 o'clock an entertainment was given. It was in charge of Mrs. R. J. Corwin, chairman of the entertainment committee, and consisted of readings and songs by Miss Helen Casey, humorous reading by Miss Muriel Leach, and a monologue by Miss Mildred McKnight. Miss Helen Barnes was accompanist.

The supper committee was made up of Miss Martha Worcester, as chairman, assisted by several of the women of the church.

QUESTIONS ON BALLOT

In order to save the city unnecessary expense the city collector is preparing in brief form the questions to be voted upon at the coming state election, instead of having several thousand copies of them printed for distribution to all voters. Having prepared the questions in tabular form they will be displayed prominently in the newspapers.

A few questions on the ballot were explained at length in the Springfield yesterday's Sun.

MRS. CARMAN DENIES SHOOTING MRS. BAILEY

Woman Accused of Murder Contradicts Entire Story Related by Maid—Rehearsal of Her Movements on Night of Murder

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman took the witness stand in her own defense late yesterday and entered a sweeping denial of the charge that she murdered Mrs. Louise Bailey, on which she is being tried in the supreme court here.

Then by item she went over the story of Celia Coleman, the South Carolina negro, in her employ at the time of the tragedy in the Carman home in Freeport last June, and declared false every accusation made against her by the colored domestic in her testimony of the day before.

A fabrication from beginning to end was in the essence her characterization of the maid's narrative of the events of the night Mrs. Bailey was shot and killed in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman, husband of the defendant, and of subsequent happenings in the Carman home.

George Levy, Mrs. Carman's junior counsel, brought out first that she had been married to Carman in 1892 and had ever since resided in Freeport.

Q. Do you recall the day of June 30 last, Mrs. Carman? A. Yes, Mr. Levy.

Q. What did you do that day? A. Early in the morning I went to the city with my mother and Elizabeth, my daughter, and stayed.

We returned to Freeport in the early evening. We went directly home from the station. I went upstairs, took off the dress I had worn, washed up a little bit and then came down to dinner.

Mrs. Carman explained that at the dinner table, besides her, were the doctor, her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Conklin; her daughter, Elizabeth; her sister, Mrs. Ida Powell, and the latter's married daughter, Mrs. Helen Corby.

Asked to Speak Louder
Her voice was but little more than a whisper. Justice Kirby asked:

"Can the jurors hear?" They shook their heads negatively. Mr. Levy asked her to speak a little louder. She pulled her chair forward and leaned her arms upon the top of the paneled, her left hand resting upon it and her right slightly elevated, with the fingers extended. She did raise her voice for a brief time, but let it fall again, and then some iron workers building an extension to the court house began to toss beams around outside and it was extremely difficult to hear what she said.

Q. Did you leave the dining-room during the meal? A. Once, to go to the office door.

Q. Was any one there? A. Yes. Just inside the office a stranger man was sitting. He drew back his feet to let me pass. Two ladies were in the reception room, too.

Q. Did you recognize any of these persons? A. No, they were strangers.

Q. How were you feeling that night? A. Badly. I had told them in the city I was going right to bed after dinner.

Q. What did you do after dinner? A. I had a bad headache, and so I went right to my room.

Q. What did you do there? A. Put away the clothes I had been wearing, opened the bed and got into it.

Q. Was there any sound about the house? A. Yes, I heard Elizabeth practicing on the piano and told her to stop.

Q. Only because of your headache? A. Yes; that was all.

The contention of the state is that Mrs. Carman had her little daughter cease playing because the sound of the music interfered with her perfect hearing over the dictaphone.

Q. What happened next? A. I heard this there was just an instant's hesitation—this noise downstairs.

Q. What did you hear next? A. I heard my mother and sister pass my room and run downstairs.

After Hearing "Noise"
Q. What did you do? A. I went to my clothes closet and searched for a kimono, which I put on. Then I found a pair of slippers and put them on. Then I went downstairs to the doctor's waiting room.

Q. What did you do there? A. I stood beside the mantel until I heard the doctor's voice speaking. Then I went right upstairs again.

Q. Did you see into the inner office and observe what was there? A. No.

Q. Why not? A. Besides having a door, the doctor's office has also a heavy curtain extending from the top of the door to the floor and the width of the door frame. I could not see because of this.

There was more banging about of iron girders outside, the court house and the justice ordered an attendant to see that it stopped as the jury couldn't hear a word uttered by the witness.

Q. Did any one go up stairs with you? A. Yes, I saw Elizabeth downstairs and took her up to my room.

CELIA COLEMAN

Q. Did you see into the inner office and observe what was there? A. No.

BRITISH WARSHIPS KILL MANY GERMANS ON COAST

Allies' Airmen Directed the Aim of the Marine Guns Which Caused Great Execution Against German Trenches—General Von Trip and His Staff Among Those Killed

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The British monitors offshore in the fighting along the coast did great execution against the German trenches, among those killed being General Von Trip and his staff. While the allies' airmen cleverly directed the aim of the marine guns the German submarines lying in wait attacked the monitors but without result because the latter were so far in shore. Here again the critics remark that the attempt of the Germans to turn the allies' left and reach the French coast has been defeated, and the Germans again have been forced to resort to frontal attacks.

The gains made by the allies on the road to Metz, it is thought, must draw the attention of the Germans seriously to a quarter where they are menaced, not only from the direction of Verdun but by the renewed successes of the French on the eastern slope of the Vosges.

The news from Bordeaux today indicates that parliament is not to be called to meet there but in Paris. The employees of both the chamber and the senate have been notified that they may return to Paris at the end of this month, which is taken as a sign of confidence in official circles and is making a good impression.

The French continue their preparations with prospective recruits to fill the gaps in the army. Baron Pierre De Comberth, president of the French Olympic games committee, it has been announced, has been charged by the government to care for the physical training of young men from 15 to 19 with a view to their entry into the service.

The military authorities are more and more watchful of stragglers. Every man arriving at the Paris terminals of age to bear arms is required to show papers on arrival and if these are not in order arrests are made. Some of the soldiers, not in the habit of being fêted as have been the men returning to the front, succumbed to temptation and over-stayed their permission. These stragglers included Turcos and Zouaves. Now even soldiers in uniform are required to produce a permit or failing in this they are ordered to fall in by the patrols.

BRITISH WARSHIPS CAUSE GREAT LOSS ALONG COAST—KILL GEN. VON TRIP
British warships' fire causes great loss to German army along Belgian coast, and kills Gen. Von Trip.

French declare German attacks failed along the whole line. Neither side has been able to force a passage of the Yser river in Belgium.

Germans claim they put a British torpedo boat out of action and that English lost machine guns near Lille.

Interest begins Saturday, Nov. 7 at the Central Savings bank.

Q. Did you have any reason for not going into the office after the shooting was fired? A. I had several reasons. When the doctor and I had this time about Mrs. Variance (when Mrs. Carman caught the nurse kissing her husband and entered the office and slapped both) he was very angry. He said I must keep out of his office; that I would injure his practice and that I must never go in there again.

She continued: "One night a man was brought into the office, who had been shot and was badly injured. After the doctor treated his wounds he started to go out, but fainted and knelt over an instrument, case as Mrs. Variance said, 'perfect hearing over the dictaphone'."

Q. What happened next? A. I heard this there was just an instant's hesitation—this noise downstairs.

Q. What did you hear next? A. I heard my mother and sister pass my room and run downstairs.

QUANTITY OF BLANKETS FOR GERMAN ARMY SEIZED AT CERBERE

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Madrid to the Exchange Telegraph Co. under Thursday's date reports that a Barcelona message states that the French customs officers at Cerbere, near the southeastern boundary, between France and Spain, seized as contraband a quantity of blankets which were made in Catalonia and were addressed to Swiss factories but which, it is believed, were destined for the German army.

The Spanish government, the despatch also states, has prohibited the export of horses and mules, which had been started on a large scale.

GOVERNOR OF BERLIN HAS ISSUED A PROCLAMATION TO THE BELGIANS

BERLIN, Oct. 23, (via The Hague and London). Field Marshal Von Der Goltz, military governor of Berlin, has issued a proclamation to the Belgians, declaring that the Belgian government's orders summoning three military classes to the colors is without validity. The relatives of those who obeyed and left their homes, are, therefore, made responsible.

The war session of the Prussian diet, Thursday, saw many members present who had returned from the battlefields. They wore their uniforms at the meeting and many were adorned with iron crosses, some of 1870 and other of 1914.

Nothing special was announced as coming from the battlefields up to an early hour today.

GERMANS LEAVING ANTWERP AND GREAT FORTS ARE NOW WITHOUT GUARDS.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A Star despatch from Rotterdam says: The movement of German troops westward from Antwerp has left only a few hundred men in the town. The last batch left yesterday morning and most of the great forts are now without guards. The German wounded from the front are being quartered at the Zoo.

A traveler who has just left the city says that someone restored the Belgian flag to the town hall and the Germans did not bother to take it down.

The whole Belgian coast is now deserted by the population, the military being in sole possession. At Ostend over a hundred Belgian locomotives had been collected.

The correspondent hazards the guess that they are for use in a retreat.

DEATHS

PAIGE—Elijah T. Paige died yesterday at his home in Billerica Centre, aged 82 years and 9 months. He leaves one daughter, Fannie Paige.

BIRD—Mrs. Mary A. J. Bird, formerly of Lowell, died yesterday in Quincy, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Williamson, aged 64 years. She leaves, besides her husband, Henry E., five daughters, Mrs. Carrie Williamson, of Quincy, Mrs. Minnie Weymouth, Mrs. Martha D. Bird, Mrs. J. H. Bird, and Mrs. Pearl Bird; two sons, H. C. Bird, of Detroit, Mich., and George, of this city; also three sisters, a mother, one brother and four grandchildren. The deceased was a member of the Calvary Baptist church and of Pilgrim Fathers colony, 170. The body was brought to this city and taken to the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Weymouth, 37 Epping street.

PERRY—The death of Miss Susan A. Perry occurred suddenly yesterday at the home of her brother, George Perry on the Lowell road, Chelmsford. Miss Perry had been in poor health for some time, suffering from heart trouble.

FUNERALS

GERMAN—The funeral of Frank German took place yesterday at 10 o'clock from his home, 50 Salem st., and was largely attended. A funeral mass was sung at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church by Rev. Edouard J. Chaput, O. M. I. The bearers were Ferdinand Piche, Joseph Marcotte, E. Bordeau, Edouard Piquin, Danasee Rose and A. Lord. Burial was in the family lot in St. Joseph's cemetery, where Rev. Joseph Bolduc, O. M. I., of Tewksbury, read the committal prayers. Undertaker Joseph Albert had charge of funeral arrangements.

SILVA—The funeral of Mary Silva was held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home of her parents, 46 Lincoln street. Services were held at St. Anthony's church at 3 o'clock. Bishop Henry da Silva officiating. Burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker J. H. McDermott.

MATRIMONIAL

Mr. Frank J. Twohey and Miss Mary A. Perreault, both of this city, were married last evening at 7 o'clock at St. Joseph's rectory by Rev. J. H. Racette, O. M. I., pastor. Dr. Daniel P. Dilworth of Nashua, N. H., and Mr. Edouard Houle, brother-in-law of the bride, were the attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Twohey left later in the evening on a 10 days' honeymoon to Boston, Lynn, Springfield and other surrounding cities at the close of which they will make their home at 31 Merrill street, this city. They were the recipients of many beautiful wedding gifts.

SAYS HE KEPT PRISONER FROM KILLING HIMSELF

Rosenfield Asks Shorter Sentence—Must Serve Full Term for "De Luxe" Book Swindle—He and Farmer Taken to Prison

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—The sentences of six to eight years imposed upon Samuel Rosenfield and three to five years upon Glen Farmer, the "de luxe" book agents, for the larceny of $57,075 from Mrs. Mary Rogers of Beacon street, went into effect yesterday.

They had been stayed during the pendency of the case before the full bench of the supreme court, which recently overruled their exceptions. Judge Quinn in the superior criminal court yesterday removed the stay and again imposed the sentences. Farmer had been out on bail and when notified to come in for sentence did so. Rosenfield was in jail.

Louis Marks, counsel for Rosenfield, read a letter from Sheriff Quinn, commending the prisoner for assistance rendered at the jail in preventing despondent inmates from carrying out plans of ending their lives. "One of the men who contemplated suicide, according to the letter, was Joseph Duddy, confederate of Lawrence Robinson.

Robinson ended his life while on trial of the murder of Inspector Norton. When Duddy learned of the suicide of Robinson he procured a rope in some manner and planned to use it to kill himself. Rosenfield heard of the plan and talked to Duddy, inducing him to abandon it.

Counsel for the defendant urged the judge in view of the information contained in the letter, to take off seven months which he has been in jail from the sentence. Judge Quinn refused to do so, remarking his imprisonment while exceptions were pending was "one of the fortunes of war."

Rosenfield seemed surprised when allowance was not made for the seven months he had been incarcerated in the Charles street institution. He rushed a little. Farmer accepted his sentence stolidly.

Both were taken to the state prison to begin their sentences.

Read the Discussion of the Political Parties in the Spellbinder—Real Estate Page and Others

The state campaign will be discussed by the Spellbinder in Saturday's Sun and the comparative strength of the three contending parties will be set forth as indicated by the vote of last election. There will be an account of Candidate McCall's efforts to revivify the G. O. P. by the use of a political pulpit. Incidentally there will be a number of questions for Mr. McCall to answer relative to the democratic administration at Washington.

SATURDAY'S SUN FEATURES

Best printing: Tobin's. Aaso. bldg.

The attitude of the candidates in reference to national prohibition will also be discussed.

Another big Saturday feature will be the Real Estate and Builders page, containing all the latest news of the building activities and real estate transactions in this city. The way to show the men of this industrial city that better and cheaper clothes are made within this state than any that are shipped into it—is to show them. Our brass tack price of $15 on Shuman's and other high class makes as displayed in our show windows today is done by us for the purpose of booming Massachusetts goods—by the low price giving them wider distribution.

We want you to submit them to the acid test of wear and prove them up for your self.

You're in sympathy with our efforts to be sure, besides saving yourself $5 on a purchase, but don't think the opportunity will wait on you. This brass tack sale will last long enough to give you a reasonable opportunity to take advantage of it, but no sizes can be replenished after present offering is exhausted. At present we have sizes to fit almost any man that walks.

Strange Tragedy in Which Youth

Turkish Baker Firing 3 Shots
—Assailant Held for Grand Jury on Charge of Murder

Ghivont Moordan, the 16-year-old youth who has confessed to the killing of Zolof Alla by shooting yesterday afternoon at Mountain Rock, was arraigned in police court this afternoon charged with murder. Although the autopsy had not been returned at the time of the arraignment the warrant was made so as to cover either of the two bullet wounds, one of which killed Alla. Moordan did not appear in the least daunted by his terrible deed of yesterday and faced the court with smiling countenance. Judge Earlight ordered him held for the next session of the grand jury. The young defendant did not seem to be at all alarmed this morning by the

CARMAN MURDER TRIAL

Daughter of Mrs. Carman Says
Mother Was in Bed When Shot Was Fired

MINEOLA, L. I., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman on trial for the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey passed through the ordeal of cross-examination today. Her story denying all participation in the crime was unchanged. When she had concluded, members of her household followed her on the stand and gave corroborative evidence.

Mrs. Sarah Conklin, Mrs. Ida Powell, Elizabeth Carman—mother, sister and daughter—one by one affirmed that Mrs. Carman was in bed when the shot was fired; that she donned kimono and slippers, went downstairs into the waiting room, learned for a minute or two against the mantelpiece and then returned to her room. Ten-year-old Elizabeth testified that she, too, went downstairs behind her mother, stayed there but a moment, returned and in a minute or two went into her mother's room.

"My mother was there," she said.

Against the testimony of the Carman family, the state has the evidence of Celia Coleman, maid of all work in Mrs. Carman's home and Frank Farrell, a former stationary engineer. Celia has testified that Mrs. Carman went out of the kitchen a short time before the shot was fired, disappeared a few seconds after it was fired, produced a revolver from the folds of her kimono and said: "I shot him."

Farrell has testified that he saw a woman dressed as Mrs. Carman was fleeing from the window into the house after the shot.

Mrs. Carman faced her ordeal with lips parted in a smile. Once as a district attorney thrust home intimate questions as to the jealousy that had stirred her heart concerning her husband's relations with women she appeared to lose her self-control and falter. But smiling calmly, self-administered, soon revived her.

She broke down after it was all over and cried. The reaction came when her aged mother was on the stand.

MRS. CARMAN QUESTIONED
MINEOLA, L. I., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman, on trial as the slayer of Mrs. Louise Bailey, smilingly stepped into the witness stand today for the ordeal of cross-examination by the district attorney. She faced a

FRENCH WARSHIPS JOIN BRITISH NAVAL FORCES

Germans and Allies Continue Their Desperate Game of Give and Take in West Flanders and Northeastern France — Reinforcements for Germans—London Says Allied Forces Have Not Yet Succeeded in Stemming the "Hacking Through" Tactics of the Germans—The Russian Reports Insist That the German Advance on Warsaw Has Been Turned Into Retreat

The Germans and allies continued their desperate game of give and take in West Flanders and northeastern France today, neither side claiming a decisive advantage.

French warships are said to have joined the British naval forces forming the extreme left of the allies and fresh German reinforcements are reported constantly coming up. Not since the opening of hostilities have the warring forces appeared to have been so evenly matched.

The allied warcraft in the straits of Dover are shelling the German right without stopping the onslaughts of the German land forces. The allied armies have gained ground at several points and been forced to fall back at others.

This afternoon's French official statement says that violent attacks are being made by the Germans all along the line of the canal LaBasse. Generally, the allies have held their own, though pushed back from some positions. They have progressed to the north and on the south of the river Somme and in the regions of Verdun and Pont-A-Mousson.

The Germans appear to be making a new effort with new organizations between the North Sea and the Oise.

Paris learns unofficially that fresh troops have given a new impetus to the German attack on the French right wing.

Russian advices continue to insist that the German advance on Warsaw has been turned into a retreat. It is admitted, however, that Germans and Austrians still hold the Vistula south of the Pila river. Berlin and Vienna report Austrian successes south of Przemyśl.

The fast German cruiser Karlsruhe has become a rival of the Emden as a destroyer of enemy merchant vessels. Word comes from the Canary Islands that the Karlsruhe has sunk 13 British merchantmen in the Atlantic. The report is confirmed by London.

A despatch from Peking says that a German torpedo boat destroyer which escaped from Kiaow Chow bay was captured by warships of the allies.

The German press generally charge outrages against the allies troops. The Vorwarts, the socialist organ of Berlin, is an exception. It states that upon investigation it has found no basis of truth in the allegations of cruelties inflicted upon German soldiers and civilians.

A news despatch from Copenhagen says that the shipyards at Kiel are constructing a fleet of 50 armored lighters which may be used in transporting a German land force to the shores of England.

SUPERIOR COURT

When the civil session of superior court was resumed this forenoon, a jury was empanelled and sent out to take a view of the scene of an accident, which occurred at a railroad crossing in Forge Village and resulted in a suit for $5000 being brought against the Boston & Maine company by Herbert W. Flavel of Groton, Conn. and Learned appear for the plaintiff and Trull and Wier for the defense.

The plaintiff, Herbert W. Flavel, is a Groton milkman who had a route in Forge Village, a part of Westford. As he was driving his milk wagon across the tracks, which span a public highway, he claims that the vehicle was struck by a speeding locomotive. The wagon was completely demolished and the plaintiff thrown to the ground, sustaining severe injuries which required him to remain at home and give up his work on the milk team.

The accident occurred on February 3, 1913, when a flagman was stationed at the crossing. The plaintiff alleges that no signal warning the approach of the train was given by the flagman or no whistle blown or bell sounded within at least 50 rods of the highway. He also states that the train was going at an excessive rate of speed when his wagon was struck.

The defense denies the allegations of the plaintiff.

The case of Mullan vs. Whitney, an action of contract, was continued today, the evidence being concluded this afternoon.

RAID IN MANCHESTER

POLICE CARRY AWAY A WOMAN WRAPPED IN SHEET—MAY BE MILDRED SULLIVAN

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 23.—In a raid yesterday on an isolated house on Belmont street in East Manchester, occupied by Mrs. E. J. Harris, who advertises as a nurse, the Manchester police carried away in an ambulance the form of a woman wrapped in a sheet.

Last night the office of Chief of Police Michael J. Healy was the scene of a star chamber session in which more than 20 people were rigidly examined. Chief Healy declared late last night that there was nothing to make public in the case, but that developments are expected.

Rumors were thick in East Manchester to the effect that the girl removed from the missing house was Mildred Sullivan, missing Maine girl. This could not be confirmed up to midnight. Where the girl is now the police decline to state.

It is known also that several arrests have been made, but what the charges are and who the parties are is a closely guarded secret.

Second Edition QUESTIONS ON BALLOT AT STATE ELECTION

City Council Votes to Change the Method of Notifying Voters—Jesse D. Crook Re-elected to the City Planning Board—Land
Case Settled Out of Court

The municipal council held a brief meeting of the council on Tuesday meeting this forenoon and voted to publish in the newspapers the questions to be voted upon at the coming state election in the daily papers instead of notifying every voter by letter as was done last year. The law permits notification to be made either way and the mayor, in introducing the subject, said that to send out individual notices would mean an expense of from $350 to $500, while the expense of publishing the questions in the papers will not amount to much. The following vote was passed:

Voted, that, pursuant to section 4, chapter 408, Acts of 1913, the provision of law requiring copies of proposed laws to be sent to voters is hereby suspended and made inapplicable insofar as the same relates to the proposed laws that are to be voted upon at the current state election to be held November 3, 1914, and it is voted further that pursuant to section 2 of said chapter 408, Acts of 1913, the city clerk and he is hereby directed to publish in the daily newspapers of the city the following abstracts of said proposed laws which are to be placed upon the ballot at the coming state election:—

Chapter 217, Acts of 1914.
Shall all persons classified as laborers, or doing the work of laborers, and regularly employed by cities and towns for more than one year be granted a vacation of not less than two weeks during each year of their employment without loss of pay?

Chapter 688, Acts of 1914.
Shall an act passed by the general court in the year 1914 to make Saturday a half-holiday without loss of pay for laborers, workmen and mechanics employed by or on behalf of the commonwealth and otherwise regulate their employment, be accepted?

Chapter 739, Acts of 1914.
Shall the act passed by the general court in the year 1914, providing for the abolition of party enrollment at primary elections, be accepted?

Chapter 153, Acts of 1914.
Shall the city of Lowell acquire and rent suitable structures for a municipal market?

Mayor Murphy announced that Jesse D. Crook's term as member of the city planning board had expired and on his motion the council proceeded to ballot for a planning board member for a term of five years. Mr. Crook was re-elected. He got four votes and would have had five but for the fact that Commissioner Morse was absent. Everybody had forgotten about the planning board until the mayor recalled it. It is a comparatively new board but it seems to have already gone into disuse. The board held two or three meetings but that's "some time back." Perhaps the reelection of Mr. Crook will give it new life.

Another old bill.
Commissioner Donnelly called the council's attention to an old bill that had been presented to him by William H. Fuller, contractor. The bill was for work done in 1911 and the amount was $35. It was voted to give Mr. Fuller a hearing on the bill at the regular

SEN. BOIES PENROSE, CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION, FACES STRONG OPPOSITION

U.S. SENATOR BOIES PENROSE

United States Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania is a candidate for re-election, and the democrats and progressives are making a hard fight to take away his seat. He has been in the senate since 1897 and has been under fire often from his political enemies. The senatorial contest in Pennsylvania is one of the bitterest in the coming November election.

LETTER FROM AUGUSTE SARRE

Auguste Sarre, Sr., father of the Sarre brothers, prominent business men of this city, has written an interesting letter to his sons relative to the present conditions in Veyre, Minn., Auvergne, France, where he now resides.

Among his subjects he describes the march of 30,000 French cavaliers through Veyre. The railroads, he says, are used exclusively by the troops and travel is impossible. Congressman John Jacob Rogers was an important factor in the receipt of the letter, as the local sons had made many queries for mail and had been unable to locate it. Mr. Sarre, Sr., is a former resident of Lowell, having resided here a number of years.

JOHNSON IS PRESIDENT

Manufacturers' Export Association. Closed Convention With Banquet in New York City

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—American trade conditions with foreign countries were discussed at the closing business session yesterday of the fifth annual convention of the American Manufacturers' Export Association. Albin B. Johnson of Philadelphia was elected president.

Resolutions were adopted in support of Postmaster General Baileys' efforts to establish two-cent postage between the United States and Argentina and Uruguay; complimenting the steamship lines which transferred their ships to American registry and appointing a commission to cooperate with the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in holding an exhibition at Washington at which South American countries would be represented. The convention closed last night with a banquet at which speeches were made by James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation.

DISCONTENT IN ALL AGES

A girl of 26 years, says the Woman's

Home Companion, writes:

"I've just got to endure the conditions now and stay here in this stuffy little town; but some day I am going to shake the dust of it from my feet and go to a big city and make something of myself."

A middle aged woman writes:

"There is no use trying to get my children to see things differently. I guess if I wasn't their mother they wouldn't even respect me. They think I'm an old fogey. Maybe I am, but I will tell you this—I am going to stay so I don't approve of now fandangies and I never shall. I don't know what the world is coming to."

An aged woman writes from an "old ladies' home":

"If I could only get away from here!

The old ladies quarrel among themselves and are a fearfully selfish lot. I used to have such a different life.

Why, I had a Sunday school class of 23 girls, and they all loved me, and I used to help them to be good and sweet and happy. I know I did; they used to tell me so. We had beautiful times together. It seemed then as though I was doing something worth while, and now here I am, useless and without a chance to do any of the worth while things."

SIGNS WAR TAX BILL

President Signs Papers—Taxes on Beers and Wine in Effect—Congress Did Not Adjourn

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Congress met today with the program for adjournment completely upset as the result of obstructive tactics on the part of the southern democrats who are demanding legislation to relieve the cotton situation. The plan to adjourn at 6 o'clock last night immediately following the adoption of the conference report on the war revenue bill was frustrated by the filibuster which prevented action in the senate on a joint resolution calling for adjournment at that time and to which the house had agreed.

Meantime the war tax bill, estimated to bring in $90,000,000 of revenue, has received the signature of President Wilson. The taxes on beers and wine were in effect today but the levy on tobacco will not go into effect until November 1st. The stamp taxes will date from Dec. 1. Although the president stayed at the capitol for a few minutes after he had signed the bill he had nothing to say regarding the failure of the adjournment program.

The question of the adjournment was still further complicated today by reason of the fact that many members of both houses had already left for their homes in anticipation of the plans for adjournment last night being carried out. Majority Leader Underwood was of the opinion that under these circumstances it would be impossible to have a quorum on hand again to pass an adjournment resolution until after the elections. The question of whether congress would remain in session indefinitely without a quorum of either house hinged upon whether an agreement could be reached today for a recess until after the November elections.

Although Majority Leader Kern and other democrats in the senate has expressed doubts regarding adjournment at this time it was believed that the recess plan might be agreed today by democrats from the cotton states if they had assurances that measures designed to afford relief in the cotton situation would be considered following the elections. Senator Hoke Smith, who led the fight in the senate in behalf of such legislation had signified that he might agree to such a plan.

125 YEARS OLD RAP BULL MOOSE

Dinner in Honor of the Prohibitionists Urge Supreme Court Given Drys to Vote for Their Own Candidates

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—A dinner last night in honor of the United States supreme court and commemorative of its 125th anniversary, presided over by former President William H. Taft, and attended by Chief Justice White and the associate justices of the court closed the annual meeting of the American Bar association. Peter W. Meldrum of Savannah, Ga., had been elected president at the final business session.

The compromise of the race question as to membership in the association in the closing hours of the meeting permitted adjournment without a single contest on the floor. Moorfield Storey of Boston had introduced a resolution to rescind the 1912 resolution declaring it had never been contemplated that negroes should become members. A substitute by Henry St. George Tucker of Virginia, before debate of the Storey resolution was taken up, offered a resolution rescinding the 1912 resolution, but setting forth that, whereas it is important that full information should be furnished to the executive committee as to application for membership, it was resolved that all applications for membership should state the race and sex of the applicant and such other facts as the committee should require. The Tucker resolution was adopted almost unanimously. Mr. Storey grasped Mr. Tucker's hand and the entire audience broke forth in applause.

The Tucker resolution not only settled for the time being the negro question but empowered the executive committee to pass upon the admission of women, three of whom have applied for membership. Invited as special guests at the dinner last night were representatives of the families of former chief justices. These included William Jay of New York, Benjamin H. Rutledge of South Carolina, Ernest Bradford Ellsworth of Connecticut, Burwell Keith Marshall of Kansas City, Roger B. Taney Anderson of New York, Franklin Chase Hoyt of New York, Morrison R. Waite of Ohio and Melville W. Fuller of Washington.

ERUPTION ON WRIST SPREAD TO ELBOW

Child's Arms Itched, Could Not Sleep, Grew Worse, Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Healed.

R. F. D. No. 2, West Burke, Vt.—"My little daughter's trouble began on her wrists and I thought it was chapped by playing out of doors. It spread on her arms half way to the elbow and her little arms itched so she would rub them until they would bleed. Her arms were red and rough and as they grew worse I used to have to get up with her nights for they itched so she could not sleep. I had to keep her arms bandaged for about two months. They would look as if they were raw at times and she would rub them nights until they would bleed.

"I used some ointment but it would not cure her so I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed her arms with the Cuticura Soap then put the Cuticura Ointment on and bandaged them. The second time I used them I could see a change so we bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap. We had only used about half of them when she was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Lilla Boano, Jan. 31, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail
It is so easy to get rid of skin troubles by using Cuticura Soap exclusively and a little Cuticura Ointment occasionally that it is a pity not to do so in all cases of pimples, rashes, roughness, itching and irritations. A single set is often sufficient when all else fails. Although Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each with 32-p. Skin Book will be sent free upon request. Address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. 7, Boston."

FOUR GARTERS ENOUGH

GIRL WHO WANTED SIX ON CORSETS HAD MERCHANT IN COURT—EXPERTS TESTIFY

YONKERS, Oct. 23.—Half a dozen prettily and modishly attired expert witnesses yesterday have settled the question as to how many garters there should be attached to up-to-date women's corsets.

Four is enough, they testified, and City Judge Joseph H. Beall dismissed the complaint of Miss Edna Smith against a local merchant. He sold her corsets with that number, but she claimed there should be six at least. The merchant contended that two garters for each stocking were sufficient to obtain the desired result and said he had several expert witnesses who would testify and demonstrate. He indicated half a dozen young women in the court room who certainly were wearing silk stockings and who, the merchant said, had been harnessed into corsets only waist high but nearly knee deep.

Miss Smith, who had said that she was willing to show that four garters on a corset were not sufficient, became dismayed by the array of expert testimony and, throwing the disputed corsets upon the judge's desk, she flew from the court room saying she wouldn't think of wearing corsets that had only four garters.

Judge Beall then dismissed the complaint against the merchant and adjourned court.

IDEAL CAMPERS DANCE

The annual dance of the Ideal Campers was held in Associate hall last evening and proved a most enjoyable affair. A decided feature was the giving away of Teddy bears, an idea that caught on well with the crowd.

Twenty numbers comprised the dance order, and it was pleasant to note that they were largely old time dances, which seem destined to win

THE HABIT OF SWINGING THE ARMS

If you will observe the numbers of women swinging their arms as they walk along the avenues, you will give the topic more thought in the future I am sure.

There should be a slight movement to the arms if you have nothing to carry in them, so as to give a sort of rhythm to the figure as you walk. But this little backward and forward movement should never develop into a swing.

If you find difficulty in overcoming the "swing" cultivate the habit for a brief while, at least, of carrying something in both hands. When the arms are burdened even slightly there is very little tendency to movement. Your handbag held in one hand and possibly a book in the other will act as weights and you will soon lose the desire to swing the arms back and forth.

Another serious defect in connection with the arms is that of pointing the elbows out instead of in. To be graceful women should hold their elbows close to the body, although in the act they must not be stiffened. At first the position will be more or less difficult, but in time it will become easy and natural, just as in cultivating the short step.

The rolls of fat under the arms are apt to ensue the holding out of the arms, but a firm massage daily and a pressing of the arms against the sides will overcome the difficulty, help.

ATTEMPT TO KILL OFFICIAL

PISTOL TAKEN FROM MAN WHO ATTACKED DEPUTY HARRISON OF THE DOCK DEPARTMENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—An attempt to assassinate Richard C. Harrison, first deputy commissioner of the department of docks and ferries, as he was about to enter his office yesterday morning, was frustrated by the quick action of spectators, who overpowered Mr. Harrison's assailant and took from him a pistol. The assailant was John O'Connor, a discharged employe. He was locked up. O'Connor was a ship's carpenter in the employ of the dock department. He was discharged several weeks ago after trial on charges before Mr. Harrison. Since then he wrote letters to the mayor asking him to dismiss him.

TO SCALP THE SCALPERS

Plan to Stop Scalping of World Series Tickets Brought Forth by New York Man

Shortstop in the New York Press has the following to say as to stopping the scalping of world series tickets:

During the recent world's series the writer met a dyed-in-the-wool Giant fan who had been neatly tricked by a Philadelphia scalper. He purchased a ticket for the second game in Philadelphia for $7. Only to find when he presented it that it had coupon No. 2 torn off, and was good only for the third game.

By coughing up $5 more and throwing in his third game ticket to clinch the bargain he got a pasteboard from another scalper for the second game. It was the game in which James Duffield Plank, 1 to 3, and the fan decided it was well worth $12.

"I don't mind telling you this," he said, "because you are a stranger, but if any of my friends heard a Philadelphia skinned me I would never hear the end of it."

"Still, I don't mind buying a ticket for a good seat from a scalper when I see a game in Philadelphia. I am not an Athletic fan, nor a patron of Shibe park, but it does hurt me when, after patronizing the Giants all season, I want to see a world's series game, I am forced to buy my tickets from speculators."

"I have not the time to stand in line for tickets, neither do I like to be compelled to reach the grounds at 10 in the morning for a game which starts at 2. I sent money for tickets in 1911, but got the money back after the series was over. I had to buy my tickets from speculators."

"However, I have thought over this ticket speculation business, and there is a way of circumventing it. At least I have a scheme by which a club can protect its own patrons during a world's series, and I think that is what all the clubs are working for, or, at least, intend to do."

"Out with the scheme," Shortstop replied. "It is worth real money if you can sell the national commission how to avoid the annual ticket scandals."

"The scheme presented by the fan is plausible, and would enable a fan who has supported his club all year to have first chance at purchasing world's series pastebards. The proposition is, therefore, not forth and will be sent to the national commission for its approval."

At the start of each season each one of the 16 major league clubs shall issue a set of cards at the first game he takes in, and thereafter the ticket taker punches a hole in his card with every game.

This arrangement would be continued until a club is hopelessly out of the running, though the work of the Braves last season shows that there is no such thing as counting a club out of the hunt until it is actually stopped for the count.

When it came time to sell the world's series tickets all fans having 15 or more punches in their cards would be invited to send them to the club with an application for world's series tickets. Fans with the greatest number of punches could be considered first, and everybody would be taken care of until the supply was finished.

The fan argues that it would not be necessary for a club to hire extra help to punch the tickets, as the gatekeepers could punch same while taking the regular admission tickets.

In order to prevent such cards from falling into the hands of speculators around the time of the world's series ticket sale, it is suggested that each fan send an application for a commutation ticket at the start of the season. He must advise the club of any change of address, and at the time of the ticket sale the world's series tickets would be sent to him only at that address.

The idea of having a commutation ticket sent to Shortstop to answer the question best, and would enable a club to take care of all its regular patrons, and their welfare should be a home club's first consideration. It might also help the attendance at games when a fan knew that his patronage would be rewarded if his club won the pennant.

It may appear foolish for clubs like Cleveland, Cincinnati or the Browns to sell such a ticket, and their fans, perhaps, would take it as a joke. It might also have appeared very foolish if the Braves had issued such a ticket last spring, especially when their club was last in July.

It would do no harm if the leading clubs of last season—the Braves and Giants in the National league and the Athletics and Red Sox in the American league—tried the scheme next season.

THREE MAJOR LEAGUES

Bradley, Former N. E. Leaguer and Now With Pittsburg Feds, Thinks Outlaws Will Stay

According to Hugh Bradley of the Pittsburgs the Federal league has done a world of good for baseball players throughout the country. He said: "Before the Federal league was organized the managers of organized baseball teams told their players what they would work for—and if they didn't they were blacklisted. Now, it's a different story."

"If a ball player doesn't like the terms submitted to him by his manager he can dictate his terms and then stand pat. Provided the O. B. head comes through all in well. If he doesn't come through the ball tosser can do business with the Federal league and get paid what ever he is worth. Ask any ball player whether the Federal league has helped ball tossers in general or not, they'll soon tell you it has," concluded Bradley.

Room for Three Majors

"Some people declare there isn't room for three major leagues in this country," said Bradley. "I insist there is—in fact the Federal league has demonstrated this fact. Why should there be but one major league ball team in Cleveland, Detroit, Washington and Cincinnati?" queried Bradley. "Other cities in the National and American leagues support two teams," he continued, "why not all of them. The Federal league moguls assert there is room for three major league teams—and they have proved it," said Bradley.

According to Bradley Cleveland took in an American Association league team this season and the team outdrew the Naps—the American league club. "If there is money for that team in Cleveland why shouldn't the Federal league thrive there—with major league ball players in its roster?" asked Bradley. "There are two major leagues without the cities mentioned above—why not three major leagues including these cities?" he asked further.

Bradley states the Pittsburgs came pretty near splitting even this season. The club used the old Pittsburg National league ball field—Exposition park. The club drew good crowds in the first and middle sections of the season when it was in fourth place. At one time about midseason the club was within five games of the top rung of the ladder, after taking five straight games in Pittsburgh, from Indianapolis team, which later won the pennant. But after that series injuries crippled the Pittsburgs and the club finished the season in seventh place—two games behind Kansas City. St. Louis won the cellar championship.

"We had our full strength in only 25 games throughout the season," declared Bradley.

Suggs Heated Bradley

On Sept. 1 Bradley was struck in the face with a pitched ball. The injury made him lay off for one week and gave him his first chance to see his daughter, who was born on July 31. George Suggs, pitching for the Baltimore team, the former Cincinnati twirler, was the hurler who heated Bradley. Bradley will shortly undergo an operation to get relief from that injury. The ball caused the cartilage in Bradley's left nostril to harden.

Bradley broke into organized baseball with the Climbers in 1906. He Bradley was bumped by "Vin" Campbell and was on the injured list several days. Bradley was bothered with a Charley horse and a twisted ankle following his bump by Campbell. Then followed his injury at the hands of Suggs.

Childs Lost Plan

According to Bradley the Federal league does not want to go into organized baseball at this time. He says the Feds will raid the major leagues of several stars before the 1915 season opens and then the Federal league will be ready to listen to any terms organized baseball may submit. "If the terms suit the Federal league officials," states Bradley, "it will be well. If they do not, the Federal league will do the dictating."

Bradley declared that if the Chicago Federal league team won the pennant this year, its president, Charles Weeghman, would have given the players $25,000 or about $1000 per man, Indianapolis defeated Chicago for the flag by a few points.

It is likely the Pittsburgs will do their spring training in Mississippi or near the home of "Rebel" Oakes, the manager of the club, at Homer, La.

Asked if the reported signing of Ed Konetchy by the Pittsburgs would make any difference with his plans, Konetchy being a first baseman this year for the Pittsburg National league team, Bradley said he isn't afraid of any first baseman taking his place from him. "I had a fine season this year and I will go better next year as I guess I have had all the accidents that are going to befall me," he concluded.

Bradley claims that two teams, which were in the Federal league this year, both money losers, will be replaced next season. He declares Toronto and Cleveland will be added to the Federal league circuit in 1915. "Next year," said Bradley, "the Federal league will publish its schedule first and the National and American league managers can arrange their cards thereafter to suit themselves."

O'Brien's Policy and Nationally Advertised Products

We consider it timely, during this week, devoted to the display of Nationally Advertised Products, to call attention to the merchandise policy at O'Brien's, as announced when we started in business.

In a broad way, that policy is: To identify O'Brien's with those brands of men's wear that the consumer knows and has confidence in; that have stood the test of time and publicity; which publicity proves the merit of the article and the progressive methods of the maker.

These are the makers and brands we wished to identify with our name. The makers' name backed by our own label is your safeguard in trading. The policy is sound, for it is winning out in the face of competition.

"Whose make is this?" is a question that is becoming very familiar to our salesmen. It is an evidence of the education resulting from national advertising to the consumer.

We append a list of nationally advertised makes and brands that are carried at O'Brien's and constitute the big bulk of our stock. It is worthy of perusal.

BIG FIGHT IN ILLINOIS

R. C. SULLIVAN IS SEEKING
ELECTION AS UNITED STATES
SENATOR.

ROGER C. SULLIVAN

Roger C. Sullivan, one of the most prominent democrats of Chicago, is seeking election as United States senator from Illinois. He is opposed by Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, who seeks re-election. Mr. Sullivan has long been in the political limelight, both locally and at times nationally. He captured the nomination in spite of the opposition of Secretary Bryan, Governor Dunne and Mayor Harrison of Chicago. A third very busy contestant for the senatorial toga in Illinois is Raymond Robins, a noted social worker, who is a progressive.

KENTUCKY WARMS ON ILLITERACY

In a proclamation characterized by Dr. P. F. Claxton, U. S. commissioner of education, as "one of the most important issued by the governor of any state since the beginning of our national life," Governor McCreary, of Kentucky, announces the appointment of a state illiteracy commission and the beginning of a campaign to eliminate illiteracy from his state. A thousand volunteer teachers are already at work in the "moonlight schools," teaching Kentucky's 235,000 adult illiterates how to read and write.

The members of the illiteracy commission are: Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, through whose efforts as superintendent of schools illiteracy has been entirely wiped out in Rowan county during the last three years; Miss Julia Lewis, superintendent of schools for Grayson county; Dr. J. G. Crabbe, president of the Eastern Kentucky state normal school; and H. H. Cherry, president of the Western Kentucky state normal school. The commission is receiving valuable aid from the Kentucky educational association, the Kentucky Press association, the state federation of women's clubs, the society of Colonial Dames, and other public-spirited organizations.

Of special importance, in the opinion of Commissioner Claxton, will be the effect of Kentucky's example on other states. Illiteracy is a national problem, and few states are free from it.

Says Dr. Claxton: "This proclamation will have far-reaching results. It marks the beginning of a new era in Kentucky and for all the country for the idea will be taken up by other states, and the work will go on till the curse and shame of illiteracy have been lifted from every state in the Union."

"It will be a part of the lasting glory of the state of Kentucky that it has taken the lead in this movement. It is the first state to undertake to offer to all the people of whatever age, an opportunity to learn to read and write, and thus break away from the prison walls of sense and silence within which the illiterate man and woman must live. Whatever else Governor James H. McCreary may do for his state, this proclamation and his recommendation to the legislature that it provide for the appointment of this illiteracy commission must always be accounted among his wisest and most important acts."

Bureau of education officials point out that work such as has been begun in Kentucky will make much more rapid progress when the illiteracy bill introduced by Congressman Abner Crombie, of Alabama, becomes law. This bill (H. R. 15470) requires the bureau of education and the commissioner of education to devise plans for teaching adult illiterates, and to cooperate with state and local authorities in the work when requested to do so.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

THE OPERA HOUSE

Tonight is the big tango contest at the Opera House between Mack and Hickey who have been appearing all this week with the Raymond Teal Musical company, and Mr. Sheehy and lady of this city. Mack and Hickey have appeared in all of the leading theatres of the east, meeting with success and have not yet been defeated. Mr. Sheehy and lady have proven beyond a doubt that they are the best in their line in this vicinity, which should make this contest the best of the season. The audience will act as the judges, and the prize, which amounts to $50, will be awarded according to their verdict. The prices will remain the same, namely 10, 15 and 20 cents, and all seats may be had in advance by calling at the German street box office or telephone 261.

Washing Won't Rid
Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arsenic, apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arsenic at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

the" which will be presented the coming week by the Merrimack Square Theatre Stock Co. is said to teach a great moral lesson to parents who are remiss in their duties to their children by their failure to properly instruct them in the many things which they should know in order to be fully equipped for their part in life's battle. Incidentally it will mark the first appearance of Miss Frances Shannon who will be the new leading lady, and it might also be added that the role in which she will make her debut to local theatregoers is one well suited to allow her an opportunity to display her versatility. Seats for all performances are now selling at the box office and the subscription list is still open.

THE ROYAL THEATRE

A remarkable program has been arranged for Friday and Saturday at the Royal theatre. Three good special features have been secured besides the regular releases. "The Lord of the Jungle," is one of the most thrilling three-reelers ever played. It is an animal drama, with most unusual settings. Others on the program are "The Dance" with Verana Mersereau, the dancer in the companion piece of the "Vampire." It is a Kalam special production, that will attract considerable attention, with its wonderfully realistic scenes "Dig It Up Love Her" and "Between One and Two," two of the funniest Lubin comedies ever produced are billed. The other special play is a Vitaphone called "The Mysterious Lodger" with Maurice Costello in the leading part. "The Thief," a biograph play is also on the program.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm of Germany and his dreaded "Death Head Hussars," King Albert of Belgium and his flying cavalry, and a number of other big figures in the present European mixup will all appear on the screen today and tomorrow for the benefit of the patrons of the Academy of Music. There will also be a number of important events which have taken place in the theatre of war within the last few weeks. The management of the Academy of Music has secured the exclusive right to exhibit the Mutual Weekly War pictures in Lowell and they are all guaranteed strictly authentic.

Every man of voting age and every woman of Lowell should see the big political melodrama entitled "The Boss of the Eighth," which will also be a part of the show.

THEATRE VOYONS

news giving all the latest events. They were college boys and the manhunters complete a great show. Coming Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "An American Heiress," fourth of "The Beloved Adventurer" series. "His Unknown Girl," a two act drama. Per Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week we will have John Bunny and Flora Finch in "Hearts and Diamonds," and "Broncho Billy" in a great western drama.

THE OWL THEATRE

The Owl offers another great array of good features for Friday and Saturday. The sixteenth episode of the "Perils of Pauline" showing the villainous ex-secretary trying to poison

Pauline, is one of the many good pictures to be shown. His scheme is foiled at a critical time, and again Pauline escapes from death. This serial is drawing to a finish as there remain only a few more releases to be sent out and the management is contemplating the use of another well-known serial for their numerous patrons. Other pictures on the program for today and tomorrow are "The Father's Sin," a powerful sociological two-part feature with Blanche Sweet in the leading part. "Our Mutual Girl" is a most interesting young lady, and her admirers will again have the chance to admire her in her weekly appearance. "Through the Dark," another two-part extra feature, is also booked, and as can be seen, the variety of the subjects are specially commendable. "Zip, the Dodger," is another of those Keystone farical plays, with no end in view, except to raise a laugh.

THINGS DOING IN DRACUT

Planning Board Makes Helpful Suggestions—Road Work in Progress—Other Town News

The town of Dracut has a planning board made up of real live wires. This board was appointed at the last town meeting and it is composed of J. H. Cunningham, chairman; James Walsh, Jr., secretary; John Flynn, Mr. Harrison and Peter Bolton, all prominent citizens, who have the interest of their fellow-townsmen at heart and who are willing to devote time and energy for the welfare of the town in general.

Harry Walker was one of the first members of the board but a short time ago he removed to Lowell and accordingly a vacancy was created on the board. Mr. Bolton being elected to fill the position. The board members have held several meetings since their appointment and already they have made valuable suggestions to the selectmen.

In order to know the wants of the residents of the various districts of the town the members of the board recently voted to hold public meetings in Collinsville, Navy Yard, the Centre and Kenwood, and the first of this kind was held last night at Harmony hall, Collinsville. The attendance was fairly large and the meeting was presided over by Chairman Cunningham. The main topic of discussion was the project of improving and beautifying the land at the cross section of Lakeview avenue and Mammoth road.

This is a beautiful little park owned by the city and sometime ago Road Commissioner George H. Stevens appeared before the county commissioners and asked them to put the park in proper condition. After hearing Mr. Stevens' arguments the commissioners decided to supply the town with curbing to surround the park and put the plot of land in good condition.

This was explained to the gathering by Mr. Stevens and several other important questions were brought before the meeting. The meeting was

THE NEW COIFFURE

"Oh, Marie, please show me how to do my hair the new way?" pleaded Marie. "All the girls are doing it that way and I want to be in style."

"Well," began Marie without preamble, "first part the hair at each side of the temple through the 'cow-hicks' to a point at the centre of the head. Then part off side sections of the hair and some of the strands at the back of the head."

"Draw the remaining hair up into a knot at the centre of the head and tie it with a rubber elastic or stout black string. This knot helps to give a foundation for the height of the head-dress."

"The next operation consists in drawing the part of front hair over to one side and around into the knot at the centre. This hair should be knipped slightly at the centre of the forehead, where it may pepper forth beneath the hat."

"Now draw the hair at the right side of the head up into the knot at the centre, and pin it securely about the twist. The section of hair still hanging from the left side is then brought up, is clasped to the coilure by a large amber pin, and the strand brought around to cross the front of the head."

"Of course, it goes without saying that the hair must now be brought up a thin face graceful lines."

PINS WENT DOWN TEXTILE ELEVEN

Before Bowlers Last Went Through a Hard Night on All of the Scrimmage With Second Team Yesterday

Donovan's Pins took O'Brien's Pins into camp last night on Kiltredge's alleys when the spirited on the last string and overtook a ten pin lead. P. Monahan was the champion in this match.

The Night and Day Bakers of Friend Brothers rolled a game last night with the boys who bako at night easy winners. Nearly a hundred pins separated the two teams at the conclusion of the match.

Two teams from J. L. Chalfour's went at each other on the alleys last night. Joe Gagnon's Shoe Dept. team winning over the Gents' Furnishings. The boys who sell shoes had a clear title to the victory.

In the Mercantile League Saunders' Market Five rubbed it into the quintet from Kreege's by over 50 pins. Viggo and Daley of the winners did good rolling.

Two matches were rolled off in the Y. M. C. A. league last night. The Sioux beat the Aztecs in a very close game and the Cherokees won from the Wannalancits by ten pins. Gillham and Wood performed well. The scores:

Diamond for Cather
CHESTER, Pa., Oct. 22.—Two hundred and fifty fans gathered in Masonic hall last night to honor Ted Cather, born and bred in this city, who helped the Boston Braves win the world's championship. They gave him a diamond ring valued at $150.
Cather was buried under an avalanche of encomiums at the dinner and many speakers told of his work as a player. Cather predicted that the Braves would carry off both pennants again in 1915.

Board of Trade Discussed the Question—Trip to Washington on River Project
The matter of establishing a public market in this city was thrashed out in all its details at a meeting of the municipal affairs committee of the Lowell board of trade held last evening in the board rooms in the Central Bank.
Present at the meeting were Representative Dennis A. Murphy, who introduced the bill into the legislature; J. A. Richardson, one of the leading produce dealers in this vicinity and the following members of the municipal affairs committee: Patrick O'Leary, A. E. O'Hair, Dr. Frank McAviney, William H. Penn, Milo D. Clay, J. A. Gallagher, A. S. Walsh and Secretary John H. Murphy.
After a discussion which lasted over two hours, it was finally decided not to take any definite action on the matter but to have published a series of articles explaining the benefits and disadvantages of a market, so that the voters of Lowell will be more enlightened relative to the question when it is put before them at the coming election. George W. Trull of Towlebury was to have been present and talk on the subject but he was unavoidably delayed and obliged to cancel his engagement.
Rep. Dennis A. Murphy was the principal speaker and explained why he introduced the bill by saying he believed there is a certain demand for a public market in Lowell and wished the voters to have an opportunity to use their own judgment. Rep. Murphy outlined in detail the success of public markets in other cities of the commonwealth and felt that the city of Lowell could support one profitably if conducted in the proper way. The executive committee also told of the difficulties that would have to be overcome before the market could be operated on a basis that would not mean a loss to the city.
The matter of a 30 days' trial did not seem to meet with the favor of the speaker or the other members present, it being their opinion that if one were opened it would have to be given a thorough tryout in a central location. Whether one public market located in the downtown district of the city would be of any benefit to the residents of the Highlands, Pawtucketville, Belvidere or Centralville, was also discussed pro and con a number of the committee joining together in the opinion that more than one market should be conducted if any such problem is undertaken in any way. However, the committee agreed that the local board of trade should not bind itself either way and hence the articles to follow in the daily papers will be awaited with interest.
Membership Committee
The recently appointed membership committee of the Lowell board of trade will hold its first meeting in the board rooms Monday evening at 6:30 o'clock. At that time a membership campaign of some sort will be planned for the purpose of boosting the board of trade. Although it is not known what action the committee will take, it is stated that the old spirit will be revived during the coming months.
The members of the new committee are as follows: Will Rounds, A. S. Goldman, Henri Ashin, Jr., Robert F. Marden, Henry Reynolds, Arthur H. Ruckney, Jesse D. Crook, Joseph A. Smith, Arthur L. Eno, Andrew McCarthy, Dr. Joseph A. Meenan, William Scott, Harry Dunlap, Charles E. Cooke, Thomas L. Dickey, Thomas J. Goyette, Frederick F. Haywood, Haven G. Hill, Robert Kennedy, Charles T. Kilpatrick, William C. Purcell, William D. Whittey, William Lamson and John A. Murphy.
The executive committee will meet Monday at 12 o'clock.
Trip to Washington
Next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the secretaries of the Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill and Newburyport boards of trade will assemble in the rooms of the Lawrence board in the Bay State building for the purpose of making final arrangements for the trip to Washington. For several weeks past the boards of trade and chambers of commerce in the four cities along the Merrimack valley have been inflicting considerable enthusiasm into this trip to Washington and it is expected that a large delegation will make the journey for the purpose of boosting the Merrimack river project. At the meeting Tuesday all details will be discussed. The hearing in Washington is dated for Dec. 10.

WARM FOR AN OCT. 22
TEMPERATURE FOR THE DATE THE HIGHEST IN 14 YEARS—FAIR TODAY AND TOMORROW
BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Yesterday was the warmest October 22 in 14 years, with a maximum temperature of 71 at 1 o'clock. The record for warmth on an Oct. 22 was in 1900, when the thermometer registered 77. But for a strong wind from the northwest yesterday afternoon the 1900 record would easily have been reached and passed.
Clear weather is prevailing over the country except in the Rocky mountain district, where local showers are falling. It is unseasonably warm in the middle west while the Great Lakes region and Western Canada are having a touch of cold weather.
The forecast is fair today and tomorrow, with moderate northeast to north winds.

Freddie Welsh to Meet Matty Baldwin in Boston
New England boxing "fans" will have the first opportunity of witnessing the new lightweight champion of the world, Freddie Welsh, in action at the Atlas A. A. of Boston, next Tuesday night. Welsh is to box Matty Baldwin of Charlestown, 12 rounds. Baldwin is the recognized champion of New England, having defended his title against all comers during the past year, and is just the fellow to make the new champion extend himself to the limit to win the referee's decision.
The match has stirred up more genuine interest than any boxing bout that has ever been staged in New England. When a champion is billed to appear at any club, the promoters naturally look for a big attendance, but when the boxer happens to be champion of the world, the interest is doubled, and there is a rush to the box office for ringside seats. The sale, already is greater for this match than for the Langford-Smith match, and a bigger crowd is expected than was in attendance at that show.
The members are displaying keen interest in this match, as they are very anxious to see the boy who sent the American champion, Willie Ritchie, down to defeat. Ritchie was a popular champion in the eyes of the American sporting public, being willing at all time to match up with any boxer entitled to a bout, and for that reason they will pay any price to watch any lightweight whom they think will have a chance to bring the championship back to this country. Matty Baldwin beat Ritchie in a 20-round bout in California, and as the Bunker Hill boy is boxing better now than at any time in his life, the spectators can rest assured of witnessing a contest they will long remember.
The eight-round semi-final between George Robinson of Cambridge and Dan McDonald of Halifax, is a fitting semi-final to the international bout between Baldwin and Welsh. They boxed at this club two weeks ago, putting up the hardest bout seen this season. Robinson winning a close decision.
Jack Donnelly of Providence meets Dave Powers of Malden in one of the six-round preliminaries. The other six-round affair is between Tommy Doris and Howard McRae, rival Cambridge featherweight boxers.

WILL SELL TOWN FARM CLOSING OUT SALE

Conducting a Large Farm for the Benefit of Two Paupers Not a Paying Investment

The story published in The Sun last week to the effect that a number of citizens were advocating the sale of the Tewksbury town farm is the topic of discussion among the voters of the neighboring town and several influential residents of the district informed a reporter for The Sun yesterday that the matter of disposing of this valuable piece of property will surely be brought to the attention of the voters at the coming town meeting. The story was published exclusively in The Sun and a few days later it was picked up by Boston papers.

A large farm is being conducted for the benefit of only two paupers and some of the citizens claim the farm is not self-supporting and should be sold. George W. Trull, a prominent citizen, who has served the town three years as overseer of the poor, in conversation with the writer yesterday said he has been advocating the sale of the farm for the past 30 years. He said the disposal of this valuable piece of property is a business proposition for the town and the transaction should be made at once. He said the interest on the money received would be sufficient to support the paupers and the taxes on the property would be clear money for the general treasury. Mr. Trull feels that a small building could be purchased in the Centre with a small garden and a matron be placed in care of the place. He said there is no fear of having a large number of paupers on hand and inasmuch as the surrounding towns have disposed of their farms he sees no reason why Tewksbury should not follow suit. Mr. Trull has another plan and that would be for all the towns surrounding Lowell to combine and conduct but one place for all paupers. He believes this would be a cheaper proposition and in this manner the welfare of the poor people could be looked after properly. Mr. Trull believes the superintendent of the farm and his wife are very efficient and they economize as much as possible, but nevertheless the farm is a burden to the town and should be disposed of.

Frank A. Haines, another prominent citizen of West Tewksbury, also favors the sale of the property. He said the farm is not self-supporting for each year the town appropriates several hundred dollars for the upkeep of the place. He said the farm is running the town in debt and the quicker the sale is made the better for all concerned.

Twentieth Century Club

The first meeting of the season of the Twentieth Century club will be held this evening in the vestry hall of the Congregational church. The affair will consist of an organ recital from 6:30 to 7 o'clock by Miss Theresa Small, a supper at 7 o'clock followed by an illustrated lecture on "Jamaica," the speaker to be Hon. Herbert Fletcher of Westford. Miss Wardell of this city will render vocal selections. It is expected a large number of members will be on hand. The committee in charge of the meeting consists of the following: Mrs. H. M. Billings, chairman; John Henderson, Mrs. Melvin Rogers, Mrs. William Perley, Mrs. H. M. Larrabee, Miss Ethel Fairbanks, Miss Amy Thayer, Mrs. William H. Lee and Miss Edith Forestall.

State Infirmary

The number of inmates at the state infirmary in Tewksbury Centre is 2331, the largest on record, according to Dr. Pierce, assistant superintendent. Last summer there were more inmates at the institution than in any other summer in the history of the infirmary and the drop in the early fall was hardly noticeable.

It is reported that about a dozen men employed as day men at the infirmary, this including carpenters and other craftsmen will be laid off in a short time on account of lack of money. When the appropriations for the year were voted the usual sum for repairs was omitted and the men are now working on the old appropriation and when this runs out, unless a special appropriation is voted, the men will be discharged. These employees are all residents of the town. This evening graduating exercises will be held in the assembly hall of the infirmary, when 12 young women will graduate as nurses. The exercises will be attended by the parents and close friends of the graduates and in the course of the evening the superintendent of the institution, Dr. John H. Nichols will deliver a lecture on the work of nurses. An entertainment will be provided and dancing will be enjoyed.

The young women who are to graduate and their residences are as follows: Miss Ella M. Jacques, Eastford; Miss E. M. Sargent, Medford; Miss M. C. Chisholm, Providence; R. L. Miss E. Williams, Tewksbury; Miss B. M. McPhee, Providence; R. L. Miss B. P. Wilson, North Wilmington; Miss H. C.

School Work

On account of an overflow at the Shawheen school a second room was opened recently and the total number of pupils at this school is now 81, forty-five in the first room and 36 in the other. Miss Mildred Murray of Woburn has been placed in care of the second room and the state is sending its supervisor to the school. The school is not strictly a state training school for the Normal school is not sending pupils there, but nevertheless the state is doing as much for the Shawheen school as for any other school of its kind. Miss Rebecca Cameron who had charge of grade five at the Foster school has resigned and her place is being filled by Miss Gladys Arnold, who is now in charge of grades four and five. Miss Elizabeth Flynn, who was assistant last year is now at the head of grades two and three. The teachers of the school are preparing a Halloween party for the pupils and parents, the proceeds of the affair to be devoted to the school fund. Through the courtesy of the vocational school of Lowell two sessions for the benefit of the children have been placed in the field adjoining the Foster school.

BRITISH WARSHIPS KILL MANY GERMANS ON COAST

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The British monitors offshore in the fighting along the coast did great execution against the German trenches, among those killed being General Von Trip and his staff. While the allies' attack cleverly directed the aim of the marine guns the German submarines lying in wait attacked the monitors but without result because the latter were so far in shore. Here again the critics remark that the attempt of the Germans to turn the allies' left and reach the French coast has been defeated and the Germans' again have been forced to resort to frontal attacks.

The gains made by the allies on the road to Metz, it is thought, must draw the attention of the Germans seriously to a quarter where they are menaced, not only from the direction of Verdun but by the renewed successes of the French on the eastern slope of the Vosges.

The news from Bordeaux today indicates that parliament is not to be called to meet there but in Paris. The employees of both the chamber and the senate have been notified that they may return to Paris at the end of this month, which is taken as a sign of confidence in official circles and is making a good impression.

The French continue their preparations with prospective recruits to fill the gaps in the army. Baron Pierre De Coubertin, president of the French Olympic games committee, it has been announced, has been charged by the government to care for the physical training of young men from 15 to 19 with a view to their entry into the service.

The military authorities are more and more watchful of stragglers. Every man arriving at the Paris terminals of age to bear arms is required to show papers on arrival and if these are not in order arrests are made. Some of the soldiers, not in the habit of being fêted as have been the men returning to the front, succumbed to temptation and overcame their patriotism. These stragglers included Turcos and Zouaves. Now even soldiers in uniform are required to produce a permit or failing in this they are ordered to fall in by the patrols.

Terrific Artillery Duel

The Germans are hurrying forward fresh troops and heavy guns, the latter to make reply to the damaging fire of the ships and although they have been pushed back at certain points they appear to be holding their line between the sea and La Bassée without, however, making noteworthy progress. The fight, so far as Belgium is concerned, has now resolved itself into a terrific artillery duel in which it is claimed that the allies by reason of their long range guns has been having the advantage. The muddy roads and the canals doubtless have hindered the invaders in getting their guns equal or greater range into position.

VALUE OF HYOMEL

It's the Safe Catarrh Remedy—
Nothing Better for Head Colds or Bronchitis

Do not endanger your health by taking strong drugs into the stomach in the hope of curing catarrh, coughs, asthma and head colds. At the best they usually do little more than upset the digestive organs.

Use Hyomel, which is nature's own remedy for all such diseases. It is a combination of healing oils, gums and balsams, which when breathed through the Hyomel inhaler, saturates the air you breathe with its curative and health-giving medication—it clears stuffed up head like magic. Hyomel quickly goes to all sore and inflamed tissues lining the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Its antiseptic healing begins at once—dull headaches, distressing choking, constant sniffling, and unclean discharges of the nose surely cease.

Hyomel is not only the most pleasant, but the most natural treatment, and very inexpensive. Be sure to get the complete outfit that contains inhaler and bottle of liquid. All druggists sell Hyomel and are authorized by Booth's Hyomel Co. of Buffalo to refund the money if you are not benefited—you be the judge. Surely try it today—you have nothing to lose on this generous offer.

THE MILLINERS 35 JOHN STREET

when they do accomplish this the situation will be even more acute. Up to the present time the British naval losses have been negligible, although both sides must have suffered heavily on land.

The Germans claim to have put a British torpedo boat out of action.

Report Von Moltke Killed

Albert, king of the Belgians, who since his retirement from Ostend has been reported at various points in northern France, appears to be actually at the scene of fighting. This information is on the authority of the British admiralty. Despatches say that the queen also is with the Belgian army, but this must be classed as a rumor, much the same as the reports that General Von Moltke, chief of the German general staff, is seriously ill or the statement that Emperor William again has moved his headquarters. The report that General Von Moltke's son has been killed is also received.

That the German line south of Ostend has been cut and that a retirement has set in figures among a number of other unconfirmed news reports this morning. On the other hand, a correspondent of the Times points out that the Germans have not left Bruges and that they are still in great force in the neighborhood of Ostend. What withdrawal of troops there has been toward Bruges, the correspondent says, is only a precautionary measure.

Alleged Atrocities

A message from Havre says the Belgians have regained the right bank of the river or if preferred the canal Yser and this is the first known that they were forced to give during the recent fighting. All official statements given out by the allies have insisted that they were valiantly resisting the German assaults. The use of the word "regained," however, would seem to indicate that the Germans at times have made advances. The dikes of this waterway have now been cut, making the situation for the Germans more difficult.

The German press is branding the round-up of alien enemies in the British Isles as fanciful persecution and in late despatches from Berlin there have appeared allegations concerning atrocities committed by French soldiers although later despatches say that none of these has been substantiated.

Firing Point Along Vistula

The reported German defeat before Warsaw still dominates the news from the eastern field and again today there came what is becoming a time-worn report, that the Russians have taken Przemysl. A despatch to the Central News from Petrograd says this is persistently reported by not confirmed.

In the reported German rout at Warsaw, the British press professes to see the turning point along the Vistula. While the Germans apparently are holding their positions along the river Pilloa and San Domin, it is claimed that the line is nearing for Russia to carry the war into Germany.

BRITISH WARSHIPS CAUSE GREAT LOSS ALONG COAST—KILL GEN. VON TRIP

British warships' fire causes great loss to German army along Belgian coast, and kills Gen. Von Trip. French declare German attacks failed along the whole line.

Neither side has been able to force a passage of the Yser river in Belgium.

Germans claim they put a British torpedo boat out of action and that they lost machine guns near Lille.

French push back invaders in Argonne region and north of Verdun. German war office says Germans are pursuing Russians toward Ossowetz.

Russians say Germans retreat rapidly west of Warsaw.

QUANTITY OF BLANKETS FOR GERMAN ARMY SEIZED AT CERBERE

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Madrid to the Exchange Telegraph Co. under Thursday's date reports that a Barcelona message states that the French customs officers at Cerbere, near the southeastern boundary between France and Spain, seized as contraband a quantity of blankets which were made in Catalonia and were addressed to Swiss factories but which, it is believed, were destined for the German army.

The Spanish government, the despatch also states, has prohibited the export of horses and mules, which had been started on a large scale.

GOVERNOR OF BERLIN HAS ISSUED A PROCLAMATION TO THE BELGIANS

BERLIN, Oct. 23. (Via The Hague and London).—Field Marshal Von Der Goltz, military governor of Berlin, has issued a proclamation to the Belgians declaring that the Belgian government's orders summoning three military classes to the colors is without validity. The relatives of those who obeyed and left their homes, are therefore, made responsible. The war session of the Prussian diet Thursday saw many members present who had returned from the battlefields. They wore their uniforms at the meeting and many were adorned with iron crosses, some of 1870 and other of 1914. Nothing anecdotal was announced as coming from the battlefields up to an early hour today.

GERMANS LEAVING ANTWERP AND GREAT PORTS ARE NOW WITHOUT GUARDS

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A Star despatch from Rotterdam says: The movement of German troops westward from Antwerp has left only a few hundred men in the town. The last batch left yesterday morning and most of the great forts are now without guards. The German wounded from the front are being quartered at the Zoo.

A traveler who has just left the city says that someone restored the Belgian flag to the town hall and the Germans did not bother to take it down.

The whole Belgian coast is now deserted by the population, the military being in sole possession. At Ostend over a hundred Belgian locomotives had been collected.

The correspondent hazards the guess that they are for use in a retreat.

MRS. CARMAN DENIES SHOOTING MRS. BAILEY

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman took the witness stand in her own defense late yesterday and entered a sweeping denial of the charge that she murdered Mrs. Louisa Bailey, on which she is being tried in the supreme court here.

Item by item, she went over the story of Celia Coleman, the South Carolina negro, in her employ at the time of the tragedy in the Carman home in Freeport last June, and declared false every accusation made against her by the colored domestic in her testimony of the day before.

A fabrication from beginning to end was in the essence her characterization of the maid's narrative of the events of the night Mrs. Bailey was shot and killed in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman, husband of the defendant, and of subsequent happenings in the Carman home.

George Levy, Mrs. Carman's junior counsel, brought out first that she had been married to Carman in 1892 and had ever since resided in Freeport.

Q. Do you recall the day of June 30 last, Mrs. Carman? A. Yes, Mr. Levy. Q. What did you do that day? A. Early in the morning I went to the city with my mother and Elizabeth, my daughter, and shopped. We returned to Freeport in the early evening. We went directly home from the station. I went upstairs, took off the dress I had worn, washed up a little bit and then came down to dinner.

Mrs. Carman explained that at the dinner table, besides her, were the doctor, her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Conklin; her daughter, Elizabeth; her sister, Mrs. Ida Powell, and the latter's married daughter, Mrs. Helen Corby.

Asked to Speak Louder

Her voice was but little more than a whisper. Justice Kirby asked: "Can the jurors hear?" They shook their heads negatively. Mr. Levy asked her to speak a little louder. She pulled her chair forward and leaned her arms upon the top of the paneling, her left hand resting upon it and her right slightly elevated, with the fingers extended. She did raise her voice for a brief time, but let it fall again, and then some iron workers building an extension to the court house began to toss beams around outside and it was extremely difficult to hear what she said.

Q. Did you leave the dining-room during the meal? A. Once, to go to the office door.

Q. Was any one there? A. Yes. Just inside the office a strange man was sitting. He drew back his feet to let me pass. Two ladies were in the reception room, too.

Q. Did you recognize any of these persons? A. No, they were strangers.

Q. How were you feeling that night? A. Badly. I had told them in the city I was going right to bed after dinner.

Q. What did you do after dinner? A. I had a bad headache, and so I went right to my room.

Q. What did you do there? A. Put away the clean evening wear, opened the bed and got into it.

Q. Was there any sound about the house? A. Yes, I heard Elizabeth practicing on the piano and told her to stop.

Q. Only because of your headache? A. Yes; that was all.

The contention of the state is that Mrs. Carman had her little daughter come playing because the sound of the music interfered with her perfect hearing over the dictaphone.

Q. What happened next? A. I heard this (there was just an instant's hesitation)—this noise downstairs.

Q. What did you hear next? A. I heard my mother and sister pass my room and run downstairs.

After Hearing "Noise"

Q. What did you do? A. I went to my clothes closet and searched for a kimono, which I put on. Then I found a pair of slippers and put them on. Then I went downstairs to the doctor's waiting room.

Q. What did you do there? A. I stood beside the mantel until I heard the doctor's voice speaking. Then I went right upstairs again.

Q. Did you see into the inner office and observe what was there? A. No.

Q. Why not? A. Besides having a door, the doctor's office has also a heavy curtain extending from the top of the door to the floor and the width of the door frame. I could not see because of this.

There was more banging about of iron girders outside the court house and the justice ordered an adjournment to see that it stopped as the jury couldn't hear a word uttered by the witness.

Q. Did any one go up stairs with you? A. Yes, I saw Elizabeth downstairs and took her up to my room with me. Then in a little while my sister, Mrs. Powell, came up and I asked her if she knew what it was (meaning the commotion). She said: "Somebody has been shot in the doctor's office—a woman." She said she didn't know who the woman was and neither did the doctor.

Q. Was Elizabeth there when Mrs. Powell gave you that reply? A. I don't remember. She may have gone away.

Q. Who else came upstairs after that? A. Mrs. Corby, my niece, came with me. Then in a little while my sister, Mrs. Powell, came up and I asked her if she knew what it was (meaning the commotion). She said: "Somebody has been shot in the doctor's office—a woman." She said she didn't know who the woman was and neither did the doctor.

Not a single class of incomes lived up to the hopes of the estimators. In the $5000 to $10,000 class, however, the discrepancy was greatest, the estimates being 175,000 and the returns 101,715. Incomes from $4000 to $5000 were only found to number 111,431, while the estimate was 126,000.

The announcement showed that 44 returns were made on incomes over $10,000, 91 on incomes between $5000 and $10,000, 222 on incomes between $2500 and $5000 and 1241 on incomes between $1000 and $2500. In no instance were these figures near the estimates, which put the $10,000 incomes at 100, the next at 430, the next at 500 and the $100,000 to $250,000 at 250.

The lack of incomes between $10,000 and $15,000 and between $15,000 and $20,000 was shown by the fact that there were only 26,515 returns of the first-class with estimates of 52,000, and 11,977 of the latter with estimates of 24,500. Incomes between $20,000 and $25,000 were not far wrong in the estimates, only about 4000 less than anticipated. Those between $25,000 and $30,000 actually returned were 11,144, while the estimate was 21,000. The remaining incomes, those between $30,000 and $100,000 were found to be 3515, while the estimate was 3500.

There were 6682 married women who made separate returns; the total of married persons making returns was 28,331; the single men numbered 55,212 and the single women 23,551.

and went to Lowell, where some of it was disposed of at pawnshops and other places.

The men landed in Manchester yesterday morning and Patrolman Hacklett got one of them. A little later Inspector Mohr caught the other. At the station they admitted the police say, that they had taken the stuff. The authorities at Lawrence were notified and came here last night for the men.

PHEASANT AGAIN

Vice President of Fish and Game Association Acts

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—The first definite step to stop the slaughter of pheasants in Massachusetts was taken yesterday when Frank Murphy, vice president of the Massachusetts Fish and Game association filed at the state house for the consideration of the next legislature an act authorizing the governor to proclaim a close season on pheasants.

In filing his bill Mr. Murphy said: "There are 65,000 hunters in Massachusetts. If they were allowed only one pheasant apiece an instead of six they would practically drive the bird out of Massachusetts."

"While it is quite true that they may not all get one bird each, the chances are that the average would easily be one bird for each individual."

"This does not take into consideration that the birds are left wounded in the bushes."

"The bill that I have filed provides for an emergency case, and gives the governor the right to step in and prevent unnecessary slaughter, such as is now going on among the half tame pheasants that will feed from a hunter's hand."

FEWER PRISONERS IN JAIL

Sheriff Eveleth Explains How the New Drunk Law Operates to Reduce the Number—Bill of Fare at Local Jail Not Bad

A noted decrease in the number of prisoners confined at the Lowell jail is being noticed and Sheriff Eveleth in conversation with a Sun reporter stated he has hopes of closing the institution before a great length of time. At the present time the list of prisoners at the local institution includes the names of 69 men and seven women, which is a big reduction from last year's list.

Of course the small number of prisoners at the Lowell jail does not mean that Lowell is now spotless or that no crime is being committed in the good Spindle City. The police court docket is as large every morning as it ever was, but the judge of the police court was given more leeway two years ago by the enacting of a bill at the legislature by which the judge of the police court has the privilege of placing a third offender for drunkenness on probation and many of the justices take advantage of this privilege to reform drunkards.

Formerly a third offender was given a direct jail sentence, but now he is fined and given a certain length of time in which to pay his fine, during which time he is placed in the care of the probation officer and, accordingly, most of the third offenders are given this chance to reform, and this accounts for the decrease in the number of prisoners who are being kept at the expense of the county.

Two years ago when the bill was enacted the average number of prisoners at the jail was 123. Last year the average dropped to 99 and this year another decrease is being noted. The crops at the jail are fairly good and the men are now kept busy storing the vegetables which are plentiful. There are 2½ acres of good fertile land in cultivation around the buildings and of this an acre and a half are covered with light vegetables, including cabbage, turnips, beets, parsnips, etc., and the crop is large enough to last until next fall. As soon as the farm work is finished the men will have nothing to do, for the industrial department which has been successfully conducted at the jail has been dropped. This consisted of a waste sorting department, but there has been nothing doing in this particular line since last January. Formerly the waste was purchased by the jail officials from an outside party. It was brought to the jail where it was sorted by the prisoners and then sold over to the same party but this party went out of business last January and the jail officials have been unable to find another concern that would do business in the same way. This department kept 22 men busy at the time. The women, however, are kept busy mending and sewing for the prisoners.

There is a certain impression among a lot of people that prisoners at the Lowell jail and other similar institutions are being fed on bread and water but such is not the case, and if one will examine the bill of fare published below he will see that the menu is as good as that served in many of the homes of Lowell. Recently the prison commissioners asked the sheriff to supply them with a copy of the bill of fare served at the jail and the following menu was given.

HERE'S QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Rheumatisms Rout Constipation

Constipation doesn't linger when Rheumatisms takes action. This medicinally blended and absolutely pure carbonated lithia drink is the safest, most pleasant and quickest laxative known.

Undigested, fermenting, putrifying foods which cause constipation, headaches and biliousness yield quickly to Rheumatisms. Rheumatisms dissolved in water makes a delightful carbonated drink that cleans out the stomach and intestines, eliminates toxins and poisons, and leaves the intestinal canal clean and sweet.

If you are bothered with indigestion, biliousness, neuralgia or rheumatism, then take Rheumatisms instead of drug-forming, heart-depressing cathartic pills and "laxative" tablets.

Rheumatisms acts quickly and gently on the bowels, liver and kidneys, without griping or nausea. Can be used for infants as well as adults. It is a uric acid solvent as well as a saline laxative.

Ask your druggist for about five ounces of Rheumatisms. Take two teaspoonfuls in a glass of water before breakfast each morning.

Rheumatisms is not expensive and it is prepared by the famous Rheumabath Company, Minneapolis, Minn.

have laid out considerable labor in your declining years."

General Butler—"Yes, sir; I am afraid more than I can do. But, as Gen. Jackson put it, when explaining how he was able after he had received in his arm the bullet of Colonel Dickinson in his duel coolly to raise that arm to kill his adversary, 'I believe I had will enough left to have killed him if he had shot me through the heart.' And so I think I shall have will enough to sustain me until I have done justice to my friends and enemies, and especially the latter. With an accidental exception, I believe I have in my possession a copy of every important letter written by me and to me since 1861, and a knowledge of topics that I will not take a great deal of research to verify."

How Old Is Joe Donahue?

The Sun of a quarter of a century ago had the following:
"Lawyer Dan Donahue was made the proud possessor of a 10-pound boy Sunday night. This is the henceness of that broad smile that the attorney is now wearing."

And they called him Joseph, and if didn't want far he wanted it and became possessed of a reach that prevented many a wildly-thrown sphere from connecting with the unoffending craniums of the fans in the first base bleachers. Being a chip of the old block, Joe went in for the law like his father, but while Daniel helps to get them out of trouble, Joseph is helping to put them in, as a member of the district attorney's force. Don't get them mixed, for Joe Donahue, the real estate man is 25, and then some.

Billerica Has Changed

Says the old Sun:
"Within the past week a man giving the name of William Howe has been purchasing apples from the farmers in Billerica, giving in exchange checks on the Blackstone bank of Boston. One of the farmers went to town and found that the checks were worthless. It is said that he gave worthless checks in Bedford, Mass."

That simple little buccio scheme might have gone in Billerica a century ago but in this enlightened day it takes a charge of dynamite to separate Billerica from anything in the line of money.

Two Active Workers

Says the old Sun:
"During September Bernard Burns induced 75 young men to join the Matthew Temperance Institute and William F. Thornton induced 71. Monday night the institute voted to present these young men with handsome testimonials."

Trust Commissioner Thornton, for such is his present title, is still an active member of the Matthews though in recent years he has extended his activity and hard work to Lowell council, Knights of Columbus, of which he is a past grand knight and at present a district deputy. While a knight of the Order of the Eastern Star, he has had the pleasure of seeing a large increase in the membership of the council, due in a great measure to his enthusiasm and energy.

Was Probably Dyspeptic

Just why the following editorial appeared in the old Sun is somewhat of a mystery unless the editor had dyspepsia and was jealous for the sake. The editor of the Citizen is out in a noble defence of the great American pie. We read his manly words and our admiration for the pie was intensified. Her Majesty the Citizen is a pie sharp. He can make all kinds of pie and he never hesitates to place under his vast large pieces of his own product. Her Majesty is a great eater and when starting off for a long trip he stows away a large batch of pies for ballast. At the peak he flies a pennant cut after the shape of a quarter of a pie."

Anniversary at Belvidere Church

On next Sunday the anniversary of the translation of the relics of St. Verecunda, a feast specially observed in the immaculate Conception church, will take place. For many years a simultaneous relic of the martyred saint had reposed in one of the altars and annually special services have been held. The event of a quarter of a century ago was reported in the old Sun as follows:

"The anniversary of the translation of the relics of St. Verecunda was observed at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Sunday. The altars were very beautifully adorned, red, the martyr's color, predominating the formal decorations. The relics, enclosed in a life-like figure, were placed before St. Joseph's altar, where they were venerated throughout the day by hundreds from all parts of the city. At the solemn mass the morning, Very Rev. James McGrath, O. M. I., officiated, assisted by Frs. Joyce and Lancelotti of the same order. Fr. Joyce was the preacher. At vespers the church was crowded to the doors and the occasion was one of these brilliant ceremonies for which the church is noted. There was a sermon by Rev. Fr. Ducrey, O. M. I., who dwelt upon the great essential of the Christian, courage, showing that it was courage that animated the martyrs like Verecunda. He exhorted his hearers in very earnest speech to show courage in their lives, and by living as good Christians to serve as evangelists, all the time advancing with Christ as the leader and under the banner of the cross, to the celestial reward. There was a procession of the relics, borne by Frs. Burns, Lagler, Malony and Gagnon, O.

LOWELL

A QUARTER CENTURY AGO

One of the most widely read books of his day was that which General Benjamin F. Butler published towards the close of his life, dealing with his interesting and decidedly active career. At the time of its publication there was a grand rush for copies as the entire country was interested to read what the doughty general had to say of himself and of others who had shaped his public life. How it was that General Butler came to write his memoirs is explained by himself in the following interview that appeared in The Sun of a quarter of a century ago:

Butler Interviewed

General Butler—"For a number of years I have been advised by friends nearest and dearest, in whose fidelity and judgment in everything else I place the utmost confidence, that, if for no other reason, it is due to myself and to my children that I should give as full an account as I could of the incidents of my actions in the forum, the field, and in politics, so that the exact facts may be known in justice to my memory, and to my children's love, and that the truth may appear upon record, answers to the false and malicious statements made concerning nearly everything I had done, encountered by the venomous hatred of portions of each political party, because I disagreed with both in the early days of the war of the rebellion largely written and published both in this country and Europe, and paraded to 'fire the southern heart,' as a sort of posterior justification of rebellion and treason. It was also deemed by my advisors that I might be able, by the revelation and substantiation of certain political acts and conduct of some of the leading personages, as a part of the sacred history of the republic not yet made known, to throw a light, even though in some cases an unpleasant one, on events, the causes of which are now either unknown or misunderstood. I also confess that I have a personal desire that the true inwardness of the actions of solid citizen, saint, martyr, hero, and general, who have figured so romantically in the history of the greatest occurrences of the life of any nation, as peddled out to magazines at so many pennies a line, shall be set right by an impartial statement of the true facts and incidents of their careers. As for still higher reasons, that far reaching foresight, upright motives, and patriotic endeavors, which moved other and great men to do everything for their country, shall be set forth and preserved in more enduring form by historical narration to future generations, who will read the true history of their country, whenever presented, after the ophebra of the day, with their personal illustrations in wood cuts, shall have passed away.

TRADE EXTENSION TIME

Many problems relating to the war in Europe and its effects upon American business were discussed last Wednesday at the annual meeting of the state board of trade, held in Boston. Though the questions involved were discussed from many angles and though the adverse influences were by no means minimized, the consensus of opinion seemed to be that America is on the eve of a great extension in trade, to benefit by which, however, our manufacturers and business heads must take the initiative and "go after it."

An unusually optimistic note, blended with salutary warnings, was sounded by Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, chief of the U. S. bureau of foreign and domestic commerce who at the outset declared that the war has brought opportunities such as we never had before. According to his view we have the entire field in South America, in China and in Australasia to ourselves, practically. "We should remember, too," he said, "that there are other markets than South America. The exporter looks with keen appreciation at the 80,000,000 in South America, but is apt to overlook the 300,000,000 prospective buyers in China." Those who kept in touch with government attempts to extend trade previous to the war will remember that the Orient was regarded as the field of greatest promise.

Frederick L. Roberts, Boston manager of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, called attention to a branch of his department which should be of peculiar interest to the manufacturers of Lowell. He wants all commercial organizations, boards of trade and business men who are interested in foreign trade to take advantage of a new branch office, recently opened in the Oliver building, both in securing publications on foreign trade or advice or suggestions which the bureau is anxious to furnish.

The report of the committee on manufactures, which was read at the meeting, indicated that the effects of the war on American industry could not be forecasted at present and incidentally paid a high tribute to German efficiency. Among other things of interest to American business, it said: "German educational methods, technical and industrial, and subsequent training have enabled German manufacturers to deliver their products to buyers in this country for less than it costs American manufacturers to produce the same kind." This consideration seems to have reacted unfavorably on the suggested manufacture of domestic dyes, but, even though true, it does not seem the part of wisdom for our industries to maintain utter dependence on a foreign supply that may become more and more uncertain. Even though American dyes are more costly, American manufacture must have them and it seems more a question of enterprise than a question of cost. Should the war drag on for a few years, America may learn to regret that it did not attack the dye question with more earnestness, even at ten times the possible cost at present. When a manufacturing country must have something to carry on its industries cost is a secondary consideration, and only time and experience will bring the excellence and efficiency that reduced costs for the Germans.

It is very necessary that all who have any influence on our trade relationships with foreign countries should work in an optimistic spirit, but the danger ahead should not be kept entirely out of sight. In this connection, it is well that manufacturers and others should peruse the following paragraph from the report of the committee on manufactures:

"When the rapid strides that have been made in Europe in recent years are considered, it may well be presumed that the time would not be far distant when American manufacturers would be outrun in the race. With European competition on the one hand and restrictive laws and labor agitations on the other, American manufacturers need to practice the utmost economy if they are to get by and make two ends meet."

THE PITY OF IT

The Lynn News remarks editorially that "the most pitiful cases which are brought to the attention of the local court are those of family troubles where little children are involved." The same is too true in the case of our own city and recent police court records have given some particularly touching examples. Most people reading of such occurrences see only the drunken father or mother or the neglected wretch who does nothing to support his family, but often there is a tragic story of suffering children deprived of food, miserably clad and objects of public pity behind the court story. Too often, unfortunately, the penalty imposed on the offending head of the family falls most heavily on the dependent members.

In non-support cases the law makes some slight provision for the family while the father is in the house of correction, but the amount is insufficient to be of much practical value. The miserable mother who has gone the limit of endurance realizes, therefore, that if she makes complaint against her drunken and abusive husband, and if he is given a term of imprisonment, she will have to support herself and her children as best she may in the meantime. Facing an almost hopeless situation, therefore, many poor women bear a life of nameless misery, uncomplainingly, helpless to remedy their condition.

In cases of habitual drunkenness, the law is not only ineffective but often times unjust. Fathers of families are taken from their homes and sent to prison for long periods, leaving the mother and the children destitute. Those who enjoy the comforts of life can scarcely realize the suffering of many in the slums who are devoid of fuel, food, or of clothing, and are perhaps dependent on charity for the means of keeping soul and body together. Added to the physical suffering and degradation are the moral influences which blight the home of the habitual drunkard.

The day will come when the law will look upon habitual drunkards as diseased rather than criminal, and it is to be hoped that in time the law will also plan to punish the guilty without punishing their innocent families in double measure. The most humane judge is powerless at present ent to avoid occasional impositions of hardship on the unoffending, but wise judges everywhere strive to meet the demands of justice with fairness to all concerned. In this age when humanitarians are wasting energy in so many aimless channels, it were well that some attention should be paid to those dependent on men and women on whom the hand of the law has fallen.

WAR LOANS AND FOOD

When the very nations involved do not lay down very specific lines as to what constitutes contraband of war, it is difficult to ascertain just what this country may do without danger in the matter of sending food supplies to the warring powers. At first it was generally understood that practically all goods sent to the nations direct or through a friendly nation might be seized by an inimical power, but recent declarations of Germany have cleared away the mists from the matter. This country is now shipping wheat and other food supplies without protest from across the water, though the possibility of capture at sea is not denied by the state department.

At the beginning of the conflict the state department intimated that loans to either side would be an unfriendly act towards the other, but there has been a change of view. France made application for a loan of one hundred million from our financiers, but owing to the opposition of the government, the scheme fell through. Now Acting Secretary of State Lansing has announced that this country may make loans to either side without danger of complicity, and the policy adopted becomes parallel to that which governs every country at times of war. Still, the government being in the right of action by being over-prudent until time showed what could be done without danger of international complications.

Many peace-loving people regret that by the sending of food and money to one or other of the powers we indirectly prolong the war, but to do otherwise would be as foolish as it would be ineffective in achieving peaceful ends. International law cannot be set aside by the most idealistic sentiment, and no nation dare set itself to the task of starving out a war. Furthermore, the impractical suggestion, if adopted, would react more on the non-combatants than on the armies actively engaged. America may send money and food to Europe—under definite limitations—without endangering our own peace or the spirit of neutrality.

BOY SUICIDES

It is an age of wonders, not the least of which are the shocking incidents of juvenile suicide that crop out with sickening regularity. Last Wednesday two boys at Freehold, Mich., after having played "hooky" from school shot themselves rather than face irate parents. One was aged 19 and the other 12. An almost similar story was reported in the papers of a week or so ago. It has always been accepted as true that even the old hang on to life tenaciously, and here we have lives that have not tasted the first sweets of existence blotted out by the terrible act of self destruction. The thing is incomprehensible and no words can describe its enormity. Surely one such incident in a year is sufficient to make all moulders of character pause and ponder. Modern conditions such as the lack of proper home influences, laxity of school discipline, weakening of religious bonds, the movies, coddling juvenile laws, etc., have manufactured a strange crop of youngsters. Strange that our boasted progress should have given us so much that is abnormal.

HELP FROM WARSHIPS

One of the most picturesque items of war news of the past few days is that which tells of alleged attacks made by British warships on the land forces of the Germans in the neighborhood of Ostend. Rumor has it that 11 war vessels are taking part in the operations and though there is nothing definite to build on the official British despatches have spoken of aid given by the marines on land and by warships at sea. One report relates the shelling of Ostend by some vessels of the English fleet, a rather strange reversal of battle conditions, but made imperative by German possession.

Remembering that the greatest German successes followed most closely on the heels of favorable despatches from the allies, it does not do to take too much for granted, but blended with the stories of English attacks on Ostend are other indications of German defeat at this point. Since the Alsno battle, which was not decisive either way, there has not been a great battle between the allies and the Germans, and the time seems ripe for another revelation.

The Harvard authorities have taken the only course consistent with decency in requesting Professor Munsterberg to withdraw his resignation and to remain at the head of the psychology department. A learned professor is a greater asset than a visionary bequest with a string on it, and besides Munsterberg, if he has any opinion on the war worth mentioning, would prove a rather strange freak in condoning the country of which he is such a notable product. In this country we must expect to hear personal opinions in favor of both sides.

The American tank steamer John D. Rockefeller, after having been seized by a British cruiser, has been released; true to its name, it got out of a rather tight fix. The Standard Oil and its distinguished founder usually come out on top.

Let us hope that the body found at Mountain Rock will not be buried as others have been—until all measures of identification have been exhausted. Some day Lowell will have to do some all explaining on this score.

Without doubt the European war is reflected here in the prevalence of murder, suicide, robbery and all manner of crime; the newspapers have been unusually lurid for the past few weeks.

Neutrality, brother; safety first, you know.

Was there really a murder?

CASCARETS FOR BOWELS, STOMACH, HEADACHE, COLDS

Clean your liver and constipated bowels tonight and feel fine.

Get a 10-cent box now. Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget, the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Carries the cure in his pocket and hands out sure things to his friends.

For ten cents a woman can get enough cake to give her a headache after she eats it. But it takes a lot of dough to purchase a bun that will give a man a headache.

Once in a while we hear of a big fashionable wedding at which a bishop and four ministers officiated. And a little later we hear that one dinky divorce lawyer has tossed a monkey wrench into the machinery.

A Mothers' club is usually an organization of women who have any children and who meet to deplore the lack of culture of the women who have too many little waists and dresses to wash and too many little stockings to mend to waste time on the club.

WAR AND WOMEN

War is a man's game, but there have been Amazons. And in all the wars recorded in history, the wives and mothers of the warriors have acquired masculine austerity. The Spartan mothers told their sons to bring back their shields from the war or to be brought back upon them, and correspondents in Germany have reported that the German women witnessed the departure of those nearest to them for the front with tearful eyes and grim determination, not desiring even to see them back unless they returned victors. And there is the story of the aristocratic French mother whose three sons were killed in battle not long ago. A messenger came to bring her the news, and faltered badly in telling the sad story. But the mother did not break down. A look of rapture is said to have lit up her face as she said: "My sons all died for France, I am satisfied."

Women in all ages have urged their men to fight. There is nothing that a woman despises as much as a coward. More than once when men would have ended a war which they had come to know was hopeless, the women have urged them to fight to the last ditch. The southern women did in the Civil war, and if the roles of the north would have done the same. Women are not what so many scribbles think them to be. In times of storm and stress, that masculine subconscious mind that Charles Godfrey Ireland credited them with comes to the surface.—Rochester Herald.

UNCOMMON SENSE

She mastered through base with ease, Had rules of harmony by heart; Could play Wagnerian rhapsodies, With touch and skill of highest art. Yet she confessed, with a blush, Her ignorance of the sweet-toned thrush.

She studied the masters old and new, Who made the canvas live and glow, With sweep of plain, expanse of blue, And reach the mountain crowned with snow.

And yet for shame she could not tell An aster from an asphodel.

Her headgear was a vain display Of plumes of ostrich and egret, And stunning was its wild array Of bird wings, blue and red and jet; But strange to say she did not know A blackhawk from a common crow.

In polished diction frenzied verse, She gloried in the templed hills, And gushingly she would rehearse, In studied phrase, of woods and firs, But knew no difference 'tween a jake-between a maple and an oak.

She learns a kitchen stunt or two—Desserts to make, of Frenchy name, Elthoral as the honey dew, On lips that feed a lover's flame; But her indulgent mother said: She could not make a loaf of bread.

She had a liver—this she knew—Its function guessed not, nor its place; And brains, perhaps so, quite a few, But her chief asset was her face; And this, with her uncommon sense, Brought her fool suitors by the score.

LATIN AMERICAN TRADE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23.—That Latin American countries are looking to the United States for the capital and the market for their products which they formerly found in Europe is emphasized in "Statements on the Latin American Trade Situation," a pamphlet just issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, giving the addresses made by representatives of Latin American countries at a conference with American business men recently held in Washington. The pamphlet, issued as Miscellaneous Series No. 20, containing the statements made by the ministers from Bolivia, Uruguay, Peru, and Cuba to the United States, the consuls general of Costa Rica and Colombia in New York, the minister from Ecuador to England, and others, besides the opening remarks of Secretary of State William J. Bryan, and a statement by Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield. Many obstacles to the development of Latin American trade with the United States were commented on, notably the matter of credits and that of a proper understanding of the Latin American way of doing business on the part of business men in the United States. The pamphlet is for sale by the superintendent of documents, Government Printing office, Washington, for five cents.

TOWN OF BILLERICA NEWS

Parties Want Union Hall for a Theatre

—Garage Licenses May be Held up—

Contract for New Road—Slaughter

Office Robbers

Realizing the great increase in the population of Billerica during the past two years, several theatrical companies are attempting to lease Union hall, one of the town's public buildings, from the board of selectmen, and it now looks as though one of the companies will be successful in securing the property to conduct a first class motion picture house.

During the past few weeks two companies in particular have been in conference with the selectmen trying to make some arrangements to rent the hall for theatrical purposes. The homes of the firm are in Wakefield and Woburn, respectively, both being experienced in this work.

It is probable that the building will be leased to one of the firms within a short time as the selectmen stated today that the matter was all but closed. The Wakefield concern has been well recommended to the selectmen and is very anxious to secure the building immediately. The Woburn people are also willing to furnish references and are desirous of opening a motion picture house in Billerica before the present season is over. Which company will get the preference is not known.

A part of the first floor of Union hall is occupied by the fire department to house the North Billerica apparatus. The entertainment hall was completely renovated during the past year, a sum of money having been appropriated at the last annual town meeting after one of the most heated discussions for years. The hall is now in first class shape and the selectmen believe that it should be put to use; hence it is probable that the residents of Billerica will have a show house of some kind in which to spend their evenings during the coming winter.

Applications for Garage Licenses

Despite the fact that there are many private garages, and a few public garages, in various parts of Billerica, the board of selectmen has received but two applications for garage licenses under the new law which went into effect October 1. However, if a rush is not made for permits at the next meeting of the selectmen, some action will be taken to enforce the laws, not only making it necessary to apply for permits, but change the construction and maintenance of garages, and the storage and handling of volatile inflammable liquid in connection therewith.

The section which the selectmen are to ascertain is being properly enforced, reads as follows:

"No person shall conduct or maintain a garage or keep or store any volatile inflammable liquid in connection therewith unless a license and a permit have been obtained in accordance with the provisions of chapter 270, acts of 1901, and amendments thereto."

Applicants for permits to conduct or maintain garages, or to keep or store volatile inflammable liquid in connection therewith, shall be made in writing to the chief of the district police, or to the official designated by him to grant such permits, upon forms to be furnished by the chief of the district police. A permit shall not be granted until a license has been obtained from the mayor and aldermen of a city or the selectmen of a town.

Each application for a permit to conduct or maintain a garage shall be accompanied by a plan of the premises. All licenses and permits provided for in these regulations must be conspicuously posted, under glass, upon the premises.

The board of fire engineers will grant the permits after application has been made to the selectmen.

Town Water Improved

Although the state authorities have previously reported unfavorably with reference to the Billerica water supply it is understood that Supt. Stowers of the water department has received word that the last analysis showed that the town water was all right. During the summer and early fall tests were made in various parts of the town and it was claimed by the inspectors that traces of organic matter were found in the water, which were probably caused by the excessive pumping made necessary in order to supply the needs of the new Boston & Maine repair shops. The shops only get a partial supply from the town and use their own rate supply except in cases of emergency, as occurred quite frequently at the time that the first tests were taken. Should the shops draw continually from the town the present supply would be entirely inadequate to meet the demand.

The Billerica water supply is taken from driven wells, 25 in number, and pumped to the stand pipe in Billerica Centre. Before the opening of the car shops the supply was more than equal to the demand, and the water compared favorably with the supply of any community in the state. It was at one time thought that more wells would have to be driven but the latest report of the state authorities seems to have cleared up this matter—for the time being at least.

Town Farm Matter

The town farm matter is still hanging on and it is now probable that no action will be taken until the next annual town meeting, despite the fact that the state board of health has condemned the conditions and ordered the buildings thoroughly renovated. A special committee investigated the matter and then made recommendations to the town, advising that a con-

AT ONCE! STOPS STOMACH MISERY AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes sick, sour, gassy stomachs feel fine.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, get this down: "Pape's Diapepsin" digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

Considerable sum of money be spent in putting the buildings in first class shape and installing a modern heating plant.

At present but four inmates are cared for at the town's poor house. It was suggested at the last town meeting that the buildings be sold and a sum be appropriated to pay for the paupers' board in another institution but this did not meet with the favor of a great many of the voters and it is expected that repairs will be made at the old farm shortly after March town meeting.

Contract For New Road

A matter which is being discussed by the board of selectmen has to do with matamoras Concord road, between Bedford and Billerica Centre. About $1000 has been appropriated for the work which will be started as soon as the contract is awarded by the selectmen.

It is the general opinion that this road will be built by contract although Highway Surveyor Twombly has just completed a $5000 job on the Boston road. The selectmen believe that if this work were done by Mr. Twombly it would be necessary for him to hire someone else to care for the other roads in the town, as all his men have been engaged on the Boston road for several weeks.

It is surprising to many to know that there are 900 miles of roads in Billerica, all of which are under the care of the road surveyor. This means that the holder of this office must be on the jump practically all the time. The selectmen think that if Mr. Twombly is in charge of the building of the Concord road, the remainder of the repair work will be neglected until too late, as the frost will soon be in the ground.

After the Pheasants

Town Clerk King has been busy granting hunters' licenses for some time past and the fine weather of the past few days has attracted a few more hunters to his office. It is estimated by game authorities that at least 50 pheasants have been shot in the town during the first week of the season. It is probable that as many more will fall before the guns of the sportsmen before the end of the month.

The pheasants protected by the state law have been as tame as barnyard fowl and the hunters have had little difficulty in getting good shots at them. It is believed that a great many have been killed and taken out of town which the game authorities have been unable to keep account of. The board of registrars met in the Republican club room Wednesday evening and added a few more names to Billerica's list of voters. On Saturday, October 24, they will be in session from noon until 10 o'clock at night, this being the last opportunity for registration before November 3.

Robbers Still at Large

No clue has been secured by the Billerica police relative to the rogues who robbed the safe at the North Billerica post office a week ago and it is the opinion of those working on the case that the men are many miles from the town today. The long start which the culprits had before the police were notified of the break and the fact that they left nothing behind to make known identity makes it a hard mystery for the police to solve.

Held Regular Meeting

The Bennett Public Library association held its regular meeting in the library rooms last evening and elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing year: President, Herbert B. Hosmer; vice president, Josiah C. Folson; secretary, Mrs. Gladys Holden Hosmer; treasurer, Everett S. Bull; directors, Mrs. Sexton, Miss Whitman, Mrs. Dickinson, Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Hackler, Mrs. Carr, John E. Bull, J. Harold Dale, Herbert F. Jacobs. A vote of thanks was extended to the president, Mrs. Sexton, and to the treasurer, Herbert A. King, for their faithful services.

Billerica Improvement Association

The annual meeting of the Billerica Improvement association was held last evening in the Billerica town hall. Rev. Lyman T. Rutledge presided. The principal business was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Rev. Charles H. Williams; secretary, Herbert B. Hosmer; treasurer, Josiah C. Folson; ways and means committee, Mrs. Gladys Holden Hosmer, Ralph Dodge, Mrs. Ivory M. Hanson, Mrs. F. G. Farquhar, Joseph F. Talbot, Dr. C. E. Hosmer; roads and roadside improvement, Thomas Talbot Clark, Clarence A. Backer, William H. O'Brien, Thomas F. Sheridan, Nat'l R. Jones, Mrs. Sidney A. Bull; home and school grounds, B. F. Harding, G. A. Thompson, Mrs. Whipple, Mrs. Harding, Ivory M. Hansen, T. F. Lyons; public grounds and reservations, W. H. Manning, J. N. Parker, H. A. King, M. H. Kohrausch, F. E. Clark and A. W. Stearns.

An interesting talk on the work of the Lowell Humane society was given in the vestry of St. John's Episcopal church last evening by the society's agent, Charles F. Richardson. The talk was illustrated by stereopticon views and proved very interesting.

WAR AND PEACE

"War and Peace in 1914" will be the topic of Edwin D. Mead of Boston, director in chief of the World Peace Foundation, principal speaker at the first of a series of members' meetings to be held under the auspices of the Lowell board of trade. The first meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, Nov. 4, in Colonial hall.

SOCIAL AND FRATERNAL

The membership of Highland council, Royal Arcanum, is promised a good boost in the next future as at least 14 applications for membership were received at a meeting held last evening with Regent Lavinia Fuller in the chair. The next class initiation will be held on the evening of Nov. 12. After last night's business session, whist was played, J. E. LeBar, O. J. Peterson and J. O. Finney taking the prizes.

of what the coffee trade think of the harmfulness of the coffee-drug, caffeine, is shown in their efforts to get rid of it—to get a coffee that doesn't contain caffeine!

When they do succeed in getting rid of some of the caffeine drug-content, the result is a weak, "clover-tea" decoction that few appreciate.

But after all their efforts to rid coffee of part of its caffeine, how about the other coffee-drug,

"tannin"—about 2-2.5 grains to every cup of coffee?

Tannin is the drug used to tan hides with. Do you know what it does to your stomach? Probably not. Here is what good authorities say about it:—

"Tannic acid in coffee interferes with digestion."

"The caffeine and theine in coffee and tea are cerebral stimulants, and the tannic acid is an astringent, affecting especially the muscular fibers of the intestinal walls."

"Tannic acid is universally condemned by all authorities as a hindrance to digestion and health."

Why keep on running the risk of serious interference with health. Why not quit a table beverage that bears in its train a lot of trouble like nervousness, headache, heart, stomach, bowel disturbance, insomnia, etc.

Thousands, suffering from these ills, find it easy to quit coffee when they have at hand the delicious, nourishing beverage—

WAR NEWS

REPORT OF SINKING OF 13 BRITISH STEAMERS HAS BEEN CONFIRMED

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The only rock-bottomed fact which Englishmen are able to point to as a basis for their belief that the climax has about been reached in the sea, land and air battle across the channel is that armies, however numerous, cannot indefinitely face the decision of their tanks which has marked this, the latest phase of the great campaign.

For nearly a week now this combat has raged with unabated fury between forces up to the present time so equal in strength that the fronts have swayed back and forth without either being able to register a decisive victory. That the slaughter in these force efforts and attacks to break through the opposing lines transcends anything heretofore seen in this campaign is admitted on both sides. Nevertheless, neither the terrible effectiveness of the long range British guns, nor the valiant efforts of the natural defensive positions, although vouched for both officially and unofficially nor the onslaught of the allied forces on land, have yet succeeded in stemming the "hacking through" tactics of the Germans.

English news despatches make sweeping claims of unmitigated successes. German advances assert continued progress and Russian telegrams report great victories, but well defined evidence to support these various contentions is lacking and the real facts appear to be that neither the eastern nor the western fronts have shown the tide yet turned decisively.

The great haul of merchant ships by the German cruiser Karlsruhe, now fully confirmed from Las Palmas has been a rude shock to those who have contended that the Atlantic ocean was held safely by the British navy but the apologists have lost no time in pointing out that the fleet cannot at the same moment convey hundreds of transports and safeguard every merchant ship. The sinking of the 13 merchant vessels without loss of life, it is being remarked, involves no military injury while the capture of a group of transports would be a disaster. Chambers of commerce, however, are agitating for a sweeping operation sufficiently wide to net both the German cruiser Emden in Indian waters and the equally successful Karlsruhe.

REINFORCEMENTS ENABLE GERMAN TO DELIVER ATTACK ON FRENCH RIGHT

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Paris to Reuters' Telegram Co. says that according to trustworthy word received at the French capital this morning, fresh troops brought up by the Germans have enabled them to deliver attacks with increased vigor on the French right wing, where the battle has been a long-drawn character with alternate gains and losses.

BATTLE NEAR BORDER GOV. MAYTUBENA TO MOVE HIS LINE SIX MILES TO STOP FIRING IN ARIZONA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Governor Maytubena, the Sonora insurgent doing battle with forces of Carranza opposite Naco, Arizona, according to a report from Brig. Gen. Bliss to Secretary Garrison today has promised to move his battle line six miles from the border and thereby stop the firing into Arizona. Stray shots from across the border have already killed and wounded several American troops and citizens.

AUTO KILLS AGED WOMAN Miss Potter, Parish Missionary for 35 Years, Struck on Way to Church in Providence

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 23.—Miss Sarah A. Potter, for 35 years a parish missionary in St. John's Episcopal church, was fatally hurt last night when struck by an automobile owned by Henry C. Samuels of 133 Blumgrove avenue and occupied by his 16-year-old son Harold.

Miss Potter was on her way to a meeting at the church and was crossing Waterman street when the automobile, which is slanting and traveling slowly, struck her. She died at her home on Gano street 46 minutes later, having sustained a fractured skull, a fractured collarbone, several fractured ribs, a dislocated hip and internal injuries.

Medical Examiner C. H. Griffin said last night he would order the coroner to conduct an inquest. Miss Potter was 69 years old.

INCREASE FOR POLICE WORCESTER, Oct. 23.—The city council committee on police last night voted in favor of increasing the salary of all officers in the police department above the grade of patrolman as follows:

Chief, $500 a year to $500; deputy chief, $200 to $250; captains, $200 to $350; lieutenants, $150 to $200; sergeants, $200 to $250; inspectors, $300 to $400.

Young Mooradian seemed quite ready to talk today but did not materially change his story of yesterday. He still contends that the victim assaulted him, which the police believe to be the truth.

Story of the Crime

The story of the crime for which the Mooradian boy is held is a very unusual one. The shooting took place at Mountain Rock yesterday afternoon and so far as is known there were no witnesses to it. The boy claims that Zalfy Allie attempted an assault upon him and that he shot in self defense. When asked by the police if he shot to kill he replied that he certainly did. He said he never saw Allie before until yesterday. Allie's death bed statement, however, does not agree with the boy's story. Allie said that the boy worked for him in Worcester. Yesterday afternoon he met Mooradian in Merrimack square and they went to Mountain Rock together. Both car fares were paid by Allie. The latter said that while in the woods, and without any provocation whatever, the boy pulled a gun and demanded money from him. Allie said he refused to give the money and the boy shot him. He started to run, he said, and was shot again.

Ghivort Mooradian is a pupil of the Green school. He has been living at a corporation boarding-house in Dutton street. He says he came from Pawtucket, R. I., about four months ago. Instead of going to school yesterday he decided to go out into the country and boarded the 1:15 car for Lakeview. He said he did not go to school. He said he was not feeling well. Allie was on the same car with him and both left the car near Mountain Rock. Later, he said, he met Allie in the woods and the latter attempted an assault. Under a stiff cross-examination by Supt. Welch the boy added that Allie had bound his hands and thrown him on the ground, but that with his teeth he managed to undo his hands. Then, he said, he jumped to his feet, whipped out his gun and shot his assailant. The gun, he said, he obtained in the house where he lived in Dutton street.

The weapon used by Mooradian was a .32 calibre revolver. He fired three shots at Allie. Two of the bullets entered Allie's body, one in the right shoulder and the other through the right lung. Allie died this morning at 1:50 o'clock at St. John's hospital. Mooradian, after firing the shots did not attempt to escape. Constable Provencer was notified of the shooting by Joseph Roy and when the officer arrived at the scene of the tragedy he found Allie stretched upon the ground with the boy standing over him, revolver in hand. Mooradian turned his revolver over to the constable. Allie was placed aboard a Lowell bound car, which was met by the ambulance at Spark's drug store in Lakeview avenue. Constable Provencer, with Mooradian, was also aboard the car. The constable took the boy to the police station and turned him over to the Lowell police. Allie was a baker residing in Lakeview avenue.

Entered Green School The Mooradian boy, slayer of Allie, has less than two days' attendance with which to back up his claim of Green school pupil.

Miss Ruth Bailey, acting principal of the Green school, has talked with Supt. Welch relative to the Mooradian boy. She said he called at the school last Monday morning and expressed a desire to attend the sessions. Miss Bailey talked pleasantly to him and encouraged him. His desire was a very commendable one and she told him to come right along. It would seem, however, that the lad's desire was not very deeply rooted. He attended school only half a day, Monday, all day Tuesday and didn't show up on Wednesday at all. He called at the school yesterday, at noon, and told Miss Bailey that he had been at the hospital the day before and that he was going to Boston today to undergo an operation for a pain in his side. The police will look into the boy's past and they expect that they will know more about him within a day or two.

AT RIVERSIDE SCHOOL IN POLICE COURT

Disorderly House on Central St. Raided—Proprietor Sentenced

The principal case which came up before Judge Enright in police court this morning for disposal was that of Charles Johnson, a foreigner, charged with conducting a house of ill fame.

This case occupied the greater part of the morning session and it was found necessary to put over several other cases on this morning's docket until this afternoon.

The lodging-house, which Johnson conducts has been under surveillance for several weeks before the raid was made which resulted in the arrest and detention of three girls and one man besides the defendant.

All of those arrested in the raid, with the exception of the defendant himself, testified for the prosecution today. Judge Enright found Johnson guilty and ordered him committed to the house of correction for one year. He appealed.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Oaklands to Receive Attention—Oaklanders Will Offer Suggestions to Municipal Council

The members of the Oaklands Improvement association are making arrangements for their annual meeting which will be held in December, the date to be decided by the executive board. The meeting will be held at the residence of Lawyer Francis W. Qua, 236 Parkview avenue and the location of the gathering will be the feature of the program for the evening.

The association has been quiet for the past few months, but an announcement of the annual meeting is over the members propose to get busy and already valuable suggestions for the welfare and improvement of the district are being gathered and will be later submitted to the municipal council. The association is composed of prominent citizens and their work up to the present time has been very commendable.

ST. COLUMBA'S PARISH

HELD A VERY ENJOYABLE AND LARGELY ATTENDED SOCIAL AND WHIST PARTY

St. Columba's parish repeated the social success of last season at the whist and social which was conducted last evening at the parish hall, Main street. The affair, which was under the auspices of the altar boys of the church, was very largely attended and provided pleasure in plenty for those present. The concert program was unusually good and each feature was enjoyed to the utmost. During the early part of the evening a whist contest was held. Following were the prize winners, respectively: Miss Rose Hanlon, Miss Marie Wholey, Mrs. Foye and Mrs. John Monahan. The gentlemen's prizes were won by Master Casey and Messrs. Morrison, Sexton and Fontaine. Among the most notable concert numbers were a vocal selection by Master William Chandler and a cornet solo by Master John Buckley. Rev. John A. Degan, the pastor, was present and complimented the committees on the success of the occasion.

Following were the boys in charge: Masters Richard Campbell, Harold Judas, John Quill, Miles Ralls, Thos. James and William Brosnan, William Lynch, Luke McCarthy, Leo Wholey, Daniel Cogger, John Harban, William Sexton, A. McNabb and Thomas O'Connor. The mothers of the altar boys were matrons.

TEAR DOWN BUILDING

A two story wooden building in the rear of 465-67 Lawrence street, facing Richmond avenue, is to be torn down. The house is owned by Paul Pierce Murphy and Commissioner Donnelly sent him a notice that he would either have to repair the building or tear it down. The house has been vacant for some time and about all of the doors and windows have been removed. It was stated in the notice that the place had been used as a common rendezvous and that it constituted a public nuisance.

GREAT BRITAIN PROTESTS

Describes Laying of Mines by Germans on High Seas as "Illegitimate Means of Warfare"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The British embassy yesterday made public a copy of a communication from Great Britain to representatives of the allies and neutral powers in London, protesting against laying of mines by Germans on the high seas and in trade routes, which is described as "an illegitimate means of conducting warfare."

The communication says that mines have been found 60 miles from the English coast, and that eight neutral and seven British merchant and fishing vessels have been destroyed by them. The loss of 60 lives of neutrals and non-combatants is alleged.

SHIP RELEASED

British Government
Frees U. S. Oil Tanker
John D. Rockefeller

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The British government has released the oil tanker, John D. Rockefeller, the detention of which was due primarily to its sailing to the fact that there was no indication in the ship's papers of the destination of the cargo.

"So soon as it was ascertained that the destination of the vessel was Copenhagen the ship was freed."

"In the case of the tank steamer Brindilla, which is now held at Halifax, the British government has had friendly negotiations with the American government. The case is regarded by this government as one calling for an investigation by a prize court, but it is announced there will be no delay as possible in having the matter heard."

The Brindilla was recently transferred from the German to the American flag under the new ship registry law of the United States and the prize court probably will undertake to determine whether the transfer was bona fide and in harmony with international law.

U. S. SENDS ANOTHER PROTEST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The United States has decided to formally protest to Great Britain against the seizure of the Standard Oil Co. steamer Platania, demanding her release from British detention at Stornoway, a port in the Lewis Islands, Scotland.

CARMAN MURDER TRIAL

crowded courtroom. Among the 200 or more spectators who occupied every available bit of space were long time friends and neighbors, whose faces were wreathed with hopeful smiles as she began her story. Ranged directly across from her chair, within the enclosure and less than a dozen steps away, were the mother, daughter and husband of the woman whose life the state declared she had taken.

This little group followed with intense eagerness every word of her testimony. Mrs. Duryea, the mother of the slain woman, leaned forward that she might see no word.

"I shall watch her every movement," Mrs. Duryea said. "When the district attorney finishes I believe I will know in my own heart whether she killed my daughter."

Mrs. Carman entered the courtroom on the stroke of 10. She walked lightly to the stand and remained near the witness chair till Justice Kelly was seated, chatting meanwhile with her lawyer and nodding from time to time to acquaintances among the spectators. Just before she took the chair she crossed over to her mother, Mrs. Conklin, sitting at the counsel table, and kissed her. Then she walked back to the witness chair and her lawyer announced that she was ready.

District Attorney Smith asked in his hand he held a sheet of papers—the transcript of her testimony of yesterday.

"Mrs. Carman," he said in a low voice, "you said you were suspicious of your husband. When did you get suspicious?"

"About a year ago," she replied. "Whether it was summer or winter and what caused her suspicion, she could not say. A woman did not cause it—just rumors."

"Devil With the Girls"
"Were the rumors about a woman?" "No. Somebody told me he was a devil with the girls."

She could not recall who told her this, or where, or when.

"Can you mention one single man who talked about girls to your husband?"

Mrs. Carman hesitated and replied:

"No."
"At Mr. Smith's bidding, she named many men, friends of Dr. Carman, but could not name one of them as having said:

"How are all your girls?"

"Somebody was asking him that question all the time," she said. "They were jesting. I thought at first, but after a while I thought maybe there might be some truth in what they said. They would say to me:

"The doctor is some devil."

"Did you have any inclination to hear what the doctor had to say to his women patients?"

"In a way, yes. That is, to some of his patients."

"Did you ask him where he was when he was out at night?"

"Yes, and he told me."

"Did you believe him?"

"Yes, sometimes."

"Did your suspicions increase with time?"

"They increased right up to the time of the murder. They have all been dissolved now."

"How long have you been in this frame of mind?"

"Ever since that terrible tragedy. What I heard or what I didn't hear over the telephone instrument reassured me."

For several minutes Mrs. Carman sought to evade a direct answer to the district attorney's question as to whether she thought that her husband was truthful. Finally she said: "No."

She explained that she had no real reason to doubt him, however. She was suspicious, at first of the woman who called frequently at his office, finally she was suspicious of nearly all his women callers.

"I got tired of hearing things," she said.

"And the fact that a woman would come to his office afterward was enough to make you suspicious? Were you suspicious of your husband or the woman?"

"Both," said Mrs. Carman firmly.

Some women, Mrs. Carman said, she thought were more attractive to her husband than she was. She didn't know if there were more than one but she wanted to find out.

"I had no particular woman in mind," she declared.

Mrs. Smith asked if she thought that Mrs. Varance, the middle aged nurse who had been in the household, was more attractive than she.

Mrs. Carman smiled and answered: "No."

Spied on Her Husband
A diagram of the first floor of the Carman house was set up near the witness stand.

Mrs. Carman stood up and with her finger pointed out how she went out of the house to spy on her husband when she saw Mrs. Varance with him in the office. She said she did not go out through the kitchen that time, although it was the most direct way to go to the window in the doctor's office.

Under the district attorney's questioning Mrs. Carman's color rose and fell. She became very nervous, she bit her lips, she clenched her gloves, and she appeared to be about to faint but her battle of smiling sails revived her.

The district attorney did not pause a moment in his cross fire of questions and when she sought to evade direct answers he merely framed his questions in different words and asked her down to categorical replies.

She was made to describe the entire scene with Mrs. Varance. She said she saw Dr. Carman give the nurse $15 and saw her kiss him afterward. It was the passing of the money and not the kissing that disturbed her, she said.

"You didn't object to another woman kissing your husband in a public place?"

"Oh, no," replied Mrs. Carman.

Saw Woman Kiss Husband
"How long after the passing of the money was the kiss administered?"

"A few minutes. They were sitting down alone at each other at the time."

Mrs. Carman said she did not run on the window when the kiss was heard but waited until Mrs. Varance started to leave the office.

In reply to a request Mrs. Carman indicated that she slapped Mrs. Varance with the back of her hand.

"Now as to the night of the shooting," said Mr. Smith. "You came down stairs in a kimono. What kind of slippers did you have on?"

"Red felt slippers."

"And you could travel very quietly, couldn't you?"

"Yes."

"Did you hear a shot?"

"I heard some commotion."

"What?", exclaimed the district attorney.

"Well, I don't know whether I heard a shot or not. I heard a noise."

"And your curiosity was aroused?"

"Yes."

Heard Unusual Sound
"Surely, it was an unusual sound."

She thought it had come from the rear of the house and it took her about a minute to get downstairs, she said.

As she reached the head of the stairs, she saw two women going down the hall but she made no effort to find out who they were. After she went downstairs she walked into the waiting room and leaned against a mantelpiece for a moment. She did not see anyone downstairs and went directly upstairs again after having stood by the mantel for two minutes, perhaps.

Mr. Levy, her counsel, came to the house later in the afternoon on the day of the murder to sympathize with the family; she said. She did not think then that she would require the services of a lawyer.

"But you did tell Mr. Levy then you would call him if you needed him, didn't you?" asked Mr. Smith.

"Yes, because I saw four lines in the paper Wednesday mentioning my name and the telephone instrument."

"Mrs. Carman," thundered the district attorney, "don't you know the first time the newspapers mentioned that instrument was on Thursday—the day following—and that it was in big headlines?"

Tore Out Dictaphone
"No, I don't know that," she retorted. "But I told Dr. Runcie the night of the murder that I had had the thing put in."

"If he contradicts that, you won't dispute him, will you?"

Mrs. Carman hesitated and replied: "No."

She described in detail how she tore out the instrument and its wires between her room and the doctor's office. Her sister discovered her pulling out the wires, she said. She also told how she hid the wires, batteries, sound-gatherers and the receiver in the garret under the floor.

Failed to Answer
"Mrs. Carman," said the district attorney, "if your suspicions were dispelled by what you heard over the instrument, why did you buy the thing on June 22 when your lease on it had two months more to run?"

Mrs. Carman could give no direct answer.

Mrs. Carman said she learned the identity of the victim late Tuesday night. In reply to the district attorney's questions she said she felt sorry for the family of Mrs. Bailey, but that she had not expressed her sympathy to them, although Dr. Carman did so.

"No one prevented you from going to the Bailey house that day, did they?" Mr. Smith asked.

"No."

"You never went into the doctor's office to see the body, did you?"

"No."

"That's all," concluded the district attorney.

Mr. Levy asked on re-direct examination if Mrs. Carman was right-handed or left-handed. She said she was left handed. He then asked why she did not go to the Bailey home to extend her sympathy.

"Because I didn't feel that I was at liberty to do so," she replied.

Mrs. Carman's Daughter
Mr. Smith had no further questions to ask and Mrs. Carman was then excused.

Her ten-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, was the next witness.

She gave her version of what had happened the night of the murder. After dinner, she said, she had gone out and played on the lawn.

"Mother went upstairs," she continued, "and I went up with her. We were on the porch. Later I went into the parlor and started to practice on the piano. My mother told me to cease. Then I went into the dining room, walked through the hall and sat in a chair in the dining room. Presently I heard glass break and a shot. I met my aunt on the stairs. I went into my mother's room."

"My mother was there. Then I ran back into the hall. I saw my mother put on her slippers and kimono and I followed her downstairs. Then I went up again. When she came up in a minute I went into her room with her."

Hurt Into Tears
Mrs. Sarah A. Conklin, Mrs. Carman's mother, 72 years old, was the next witness.

Mrs. Conklin said that her hearing was very poor.

At this point, Mrs. Carman, sitting at the counsel table, burst into tears. She buried her face in her handkerchief and her shoulders shook with sobs.

Mrs. Conklin's testimony corroborated that given by Mrs. Carman and Elizabeth.

After Mrs. Carman had regained her composure her aged mother continued her story.

Mrs. Conklin said that after she had heard the "noise" on the night of June 30, she went to all the doors of the house and looked out to see whether she could see anything or anyone. Then she went upstairs into her daughter's room and there found Mrs. Carman, Elizabeth and Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Carman's sister.

"The bed was all disordered as if someone had just got out of it," she said. "We were very much excited and we all cried, including Mrs. Carman."

asked for the custody of their two children.

Mrs. Emma C. Gove, who was married to Everett Gove in 1884 at South Bridgeton, Me., she said, testified with her two grownup daughters, that Mr. Gove deserted her in 1888, and they have not lived together since.

A divorce was asked for by Mrs. Elizabeth Langley, postmistress at Fort Warren, on the ground that her husband, Wilfred, deserted her in 1903.

Mrs. Florence I. Ulrich of 243 West Newton street charged her husband, Charles Frederick, with being a regular "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" person at times, due to over indulgence in drink. He would lock himself in his room frequently, she said, and after remaining for some time "would emerge a changed man, with an irritable disposition." While in this shape he would strike and choke her, she said, and once tried to push her downstairs, she declared, besides abusing his two-year-old daughter.

WANTS DIVORCE

95-Pound Wife Kicked by Her 220-Pound Husband

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Mrs. May Allen, scarcely four feet and a half tall, weighing about 95 pounds, very thin and pale of face, told Judge Wait in the Suffolk divorce court yesterday afternoon how her husband, David Allen, six feet, two inches tall and weighing 220 pounds, had struck her in the face, kicked her, and done other violent things while they lived together on Staniford and Cambridge streets, West End.

Three Dishes at Her
The court room was crowded to the doors with curious looking onlookers and spectators and all listened with interest to Mrs. Allen's story. The Allens were married in Boston a year ago last March and lived first on Cambridge street and then at 32 Staniford street. Mr. Allen was a steamfitter, his wife said, but never worked.

"He came to the house one day and asked me for 50 cents," said Mrs. Allen. "I told him he couldn't have it and he smashed me across the face. The same thing happened three times after that."

"I ran a lodging house to support myself, as he never gave me any money, and one night he came to the house at midnight after I had gone to bed and ordered me to get up and get him some supper. Because I wouldn't give it to him he turned the dining table upside down, throwing all the dishes on the floor and breaking them. Then he kicked me in the stomach and threw dishes at me. He used bad language to me nearly all the time."

Mrs. Ida Goldstein, seeking a divorce from Louis Goldstein, testified that while they lived on St. James street Mr. Goldstein asked her to pay a bill for him and because she did not have the money he grabbed the tablecloth from the table and every dish on it was broken. He threw the butter-dish at her on another occasion because she didn't like the taste of the soup. He also threatened to kill her several times, she said. Mrs. Goldstein asked for the custody of their four-year-old child.

Threatened With Razor
According to Mrs. Daisy M. Ingraham her husband, Harry, was drunk and abusive most of the time after their marriage in St. John, N. B., and after they came to Boston. He assaulted her three or four times and left marks on her body and face. He also threatened their two children and her mother, she said. After he threatened to kill his wife with a razor he was sent to Bridgewater by the court. When he came out Mrs. Ingraham stated the probate court granted her an allowance. Then he went back to St. John and she had not seen him since. She asked for the custody of their two children.

GOV. WALSH URGES TAX

REFORM AT LYNN RALLY

LYNN, Oct. 23.—Fully 500 persons waited in Odd Fellows hall until after 11 o'clock last night for the arrival of Gov. Walsh, who was the chief speaker at the democratic rally. More than twice that number had attended the rally during the early part of the night.

The governor was given a splendid reception and his address was frequently interrupted by applause. Representative Charles H. McGuire presided.

Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Boynton praised the state and national administration, and Congressman Michael P. Phelan spoke on the currency bill, paying a tribute to the diplomacy of President Wilson in averting hostilities with Mexico.

The other speakers were Michael H. Cotter, candidate for representative; Albert S. McLaughlin, candidate for senator in the 1st Essex district, and Henry F. Dunn, candidate for senator in the 5th Middlesex district.

Gov. Walsh said, in part:

"The cost of government as represented in taxation is a large element in the present high cost of living, but the great injustice of our present taxation system lies in the excessive burdens which it places on the great masses of common people as represented in rent-payers and in small householders. If all the property in the Commonwealth which at the present time escapes taxation and which by law is subject to taxation were assessed the tax rate today would be little, if any, greater than it was a generation or two ago.

"For many years our legislature in its attempts to solve our problems of taxation has found its authority limited by the provisions of the constitution.

"This year I declared in my inaugural for a constitutional amendment to increase the powers of the legislature in this regard and personally went before the legislative committee on taxation to point out the injustices of the present system and the urgent need of a constitutional amendment.

"Thereafter in several conferences with the committee on taxation I made my influence to remove any partisan issue from the question so that results might be accomplished. For the first time after years of agitation the effort for taxation reform met with success, through the passage by the legislature of a constitutional amendment giving to the legislature the power to levy a real income tax.

"The amendment grants to the legislature the power to provide legislation for a real income tax. The amend-

CANDIDATE McCALL

ANSWERS SEC. REDFIELD

HAVERHILL, Oct. 22.—At a republican rally in city hall last evening, Hon. Samuel W. McCall was the principal speaker.

Sec. Redfield, in a speech last night at Cambridge, is reported to have attributed present business conditions in New England to the lack of efficiency of its manufacturing plants.

"An error who is equal to the assertion that 'the democratic administration and tariff had increased business and prosperity' hardly deserves a serious reply. Unimpeachable statistics relative to our foreign and domestic commerce effectively dispose of Mr. Redfield's assertion.

"The truth is that the business men of New England have the brains, the splendid plants with modern equipment and in fact everything but cheap labor and if Mr. Redfield will point out a way in which our manufacturing efficiency our manufacturing plants compete on equal terms with foreign manufacturers while the former pay double the wages that are paid abroad, he will make his position appear to be tenable.

"The remedy I have been attempting to present for extravagance in our state government at the different meetings before which I have spoken has been simply the old-fashioned remedy of keeping down expenditures. In order to keep down taxation we must keep down expenditures.

"Discussing the amendment to the Boston city charter, which was approved by the governor against the earnest protest of the mayor, Mr. McCall said that the present charter was the result of a long contest practically carried on by leading men of all parties.

"The existing charter provides," he said, "for the election of a governing board under such conditions that the voter may easily make himself acquainted with the candidates and their fitness and the men elected are responsible to the city at large. But it is proposed to increase the size of the board, to dissipate responsibility, and to have the members responsible only to limited sections.

"The system proposed is an ideal one for log-rolling and political horse trading between the different wards. Such a measure should have received the veto instead of the approval of the governor."

ment has been specifically endorsed in the democratic platform and the democratic party is committed to its support and will use its best efforts to secure its passage for a second time in the next legislature in order that it may be submitted to the people for ratification.

"As the question of adopting or re-

PROGRESSIVE ENTHUSIASM

NATION-WIDE, SAYS WALKER

LEOMINSTER, Oct. 23.—About 100 attended the progressive rally at G. A. R. hall last night. Dr. C. S. Brigham presided. The speakers were Hon. Joseph Walker of Brookline and James P. Magenis of Boston, Rep. Alfred M. Fessenden of Townsend and Joseph Bemis of Charlton, candidate for congress.

Mr. Walker and Mr. Magenis spoke in Peppercorn hall in the evening and did not reach here until 10 o'clock, by which time half of the audience had left.

Mr. Walker declared that no movement since the Civil war had taken hold of the people so strongly as the progressive movement. If its present leaders should retire, he said, others would take their places. Enthusiasm prevailed from one end of the country to the other.

From the movement is bound to grow a new liberal constructive party that will give America its purest democracy. Prosperity will not be for a favored few, but will be passed along the people; politics will be lifted from its mire; people will be taught that it is not a game to be played, but is intended to take the government from the special interests and give it back to the people for whom the progressive party stands.

Mr. Magenis reviewed his early life as a newspaperman and declared that in these days newspapers told the truth.

BIRD SPEAKS TWICE

ATTLEBORO, Oct. 23.—A big progressive rally was held last night in Armory hall. Dr. Clarence W. Esley, chairman of the progressive town committee, presided. The speakers were Russell A. Wood, candidate for secretary of state; Charles S. Bird of Walpole; Mrs. C. M. Tillinghast of Somerville and Arthur M. Huddell of Chelsea.

Mr. Bird again urged the advisability of the state establishing a central purchasing agency, which, he claimed, could save nearly $1,000,000 yearly, and asked Gov. Walsh to explain why his administration had failed to take such a step.

In North Attleboro the same speaker took part at a progressive rally in Red Men's hall.

jecting the constitutional amendment will be one of the most important to come before the legislature which is about to be elected this refusal of the republican party to take any position in its platform again illustrates its unwillingness to face squarely problems of vital importance to the masses of the people."

evening to reopen next Monday morning. While information could not be obtained to that effect, it is possible that the mill will only work four days a week for the next few weeks. The management hopes, however, that full time will be resumed very soon. The short week in the day department will not affect the night work, which will continue as at present. The Silesia mills have for the past few years been very busy and have been running overtime when similar mills were forced to work short time. The Silesia mills have the reputation of making the finest yarn in the country, a fact which has been responsible for its steady progress.

Painters Held Meeting

The members of the Painters' union held a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting last night in Carpenter's hall in the Runnels building. Business of considerable importance was transacted and one new member was admitted. Three applications were received and turned over to the investigating committee who will report on them at the meeting to be held next Thursday night. Several committees submitted reports and they all denoted progress. Business Agent George E. Field read a report which showed the attitude of the employers toward union employees to be good and all members working. The secretary's report showed the financial and numerical condition of the union to be in an excellent standing. After the business session the usual informal musicale was given to which the members contributed.

General Labor Notes

The committee considering the advisability of holding the English Trades Union congress this year announced that in the present condition of affairs it was impossible to fix a date.

The Tobacco Workers International union will have an extensive exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915.

Unions connected with the Woodworkers International union are taking a referendum vote on the question of affiliation with the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

New York Journeymen Tailors union No. 339 is conducting an agitation for the abolishment of home work, the establishment of an 8-hour day and higher wages.

French state tobacco factories are working day and night to supply the needs of the army, and large quantities of Virginia tobacco are being imported specially for the use of the British troops.

Philadelphia having been added to the roster of union cities by the International Ladies' Garment Workers, the latter are now making a march on to Cleveland in an effort to unionize that city.

The scope of the government's big clearing house for laborers and home seekers has been extended by the establishment throughout the country of distributing zones with headquarters in 18 cities.

In Youngstown, O., a 93 per cent organization of moving picture operators made it possible to obtain a double shift with a 7-hour day for each man, a slight wage increase and full union recognition.

The New York law requiring one day of rest in seven for workers in manufacturing and mercantile establishments has just been upheld for the second time in an important decision by Judge Fish of the Niagara county court.

The great national political contest in Australia has been concluded and the labor party has won a magnificent victory. The labor party will have 41 members in the house of representatives and 32 seats in the senate.

The Massachusetts state law which declares it unlawful to make false statements in advertisements was taken advantage of by union cigar-makers in Boston to end the practice of a non-union cigar manufacturer who was deceiving the public.

Twenty thousand British miners in Cannock Chase (Staffs) will give sixpence a fortnight each to a national relief fund and 10,000 men employed by Cannock Laird & Co. shipbuilders, Birkenhead (Cheshire) have agreed to the following weekly deductions from wages: Those paid 35s. and over, 6d.; between 35s. and 30s., 4d.; 30s. and 25s., 2d.; and less than 25s., 1d.

As a result of the bill passed by the Massachusetts legislature in 1913, continuation schooling in Boston is made compulsory, and all pupils between the ages of 14 and 16 who obtained their employment certificates since last January will be compelled to attend a designated continuation school.

Oscar F. Nelson, former president of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, now a state factory inspector, has been nominated by the democrats of the ninth Illinois district for congress.

Andrew Elscher, the miner, will again officiate as prime minister of Australia, and with a safe working majority of eight in the house and overwhelming odds in the senate it is likely that he will be able to put through considerable constructive legislation as promised in the labor party's program.

War has been declared on industrial sickness by the American Association for Labor Legislation. A committee from this organization declares that sickness insurance must be made compulsory, with emphasis on medical care, in order that it shall lead to a campaign of health conservation similar to the "safety first" movement from accident compensation.

CARMAN MURDER TRIAL

to bed, and when I came down I couldn't see Mrs. Variance. I wondered if she was in the doctor's office, so I went around the house and to the window looking upon the office. The shade was up a little way.

Q. That was the same window which was broken on the night of June 30 last, and through which a shot was fired? A. Yes, sir, the same window.

Watched Through the Window

Q. Well what did you see on the night of the Variance incident? A. The doctor and Mrs. Variance were sitting facing each other, on two chairs close together. I saw them talk for a few moments, then the doctor made a gesture with his hands palm upward. She spoke to him again and he brought some money out of his pocket. He carried his money that way—stuffed in his straightened-out some bills and I saw him hand her $15. She put it in her purse. Both rose together, and as they did so she kissed the doctor upon the cheek.

Q. What did you do? A. I rapped on the window to let them know I was seen there, then went around to the office door, knocked and said: "Doctor, let me in." He opened the door. I went to her and said: "These are pretty things for a married woman with grown children." Then I said to the doctor: "So this is what you have been doing. This is the way your money goes." I knew he had a good practice and collected a good bit of money, and we lived modestly, but he never seemed to be able to save anything.

Would Not Be Halted

Q. Did you do anything at this time? A. Yes, I slapped her with the back of my hand like this (illustrating a fairly vigorous blow). Then Mrs. Variance said: "Life is not giving me this money, but it is lending it to me." I demanded it back. She asked him if he should give it to me and the doctor said: "Yes, if she wants it; it is her house." So she gave me the money and went away.

Q. Did anything happen between you and the doctor afterward? A. Yes, after she had gone he was very angry and gave me the most awful calling down I ever got in my life. He said I was breaking up his practice and he was breaking up his life.

The attorney attempted to interject another question, but Mrs. Carman was full of her subject and wasn't to be halted for an instant. She went on: "Now wait for a minute. He said he wasn't going to stand for it. He wouldn't stand for it and if I ever came into that office again there would be worse trouble."

Counselor Levy next brought up the matter of the dictagraph. The accused wife admitted that it was in the house on the night of the shooting and had been there since May 13. She was directed to give an explanation of why she had installed it.

Suspicious of Doctor

"Because I was suspicious of the doctor," she said, with her chin tilted upward, a little defiantly. "When we would go out together people would ask him how his girls were, and say they wished they had his opportunities, and speak about how he could stay away from home all night and then could tell me he had been out on a case. I got sick and tired of hearing of the sort of thing and commenced to get suspicious, especially of some women patients who seemed to call regularly."

She said here the woman's gaze flickered around for a moment toward the press tables—"I was never the crazy, jealous woman that the newspapers made me out to be. It was this way: I was going to take the serious step I had in mind (separating from my husband, so far as witty relations went). I would do it only upon my own knowledge, and not upon mere hearsay. So I obtained the dictagraph to learn what he was saying to his patients."

The details of how she obtained the dictagraph from Gaston Boissonault, manager of the General Acoustic Company of New York, were then gone into. They had been told many times—now she told Boissonault she was a dressmaker who wanted to catch thieves and employes and finally, upon being assured that the transaction would be confidential, told him who she really was, and had him put the machine into her home while she supposedly took her husband away from Freeport for a couple of days.

She gave quite a dramatic representation of her feelings in his office. "He had demonstrated the efficiency of the machine. She said she had a girl in another room listen and then repeat what he had said while in the room with Mrs. Carman. He had counted 'one, two, three, four, five, six' in varying tones of voice and the girl had repeated the numbers. Mrs. Carman illustrated each tone of voice Boissonault had used, down to the faintest whisper."

Removed the Instrument
Next she introduced an entirely new bit of testimony, tending to put into a bit of light the young man who told the newspapers of his dictagraph the day after the shooting. "As I left the office and stood waiting for an elevator, he followed me," she said, "and asked me if I had had lunch. I said 'No.' He asked me if I would go to lunch with him. I told him (this in a tone of scathing righteousness) that I didn't like to lunch with strangers men."

Q. Did you ever tell him that you had kept or intended to keep a diary about the conversations you overheard? A. I did not.

Q. When did you remove the dictagraph from its fastenings in your home? A. On July 1 (the day after the murder), early in the morning.

Q. What part did you take away first? A. The part that was concealed in the doctor's office and the wires that led upstairs.

Never Knew Mrs. Bailey
Q. Why did you remove the machine at that time? A. Because I thought the doctor had trouble enough on his hands just then and I did not want him to know, besides, that I had been jealous of him.

She said, in reply to a series of questions, that she had frequently listened to her husband and his patients and had heard their conversations, but

SLEEPYTIME TALES

BY VIRGINIA VALE

THE LOST POCKETBOOK

Once upon a time Andrew was walking home one night in a great hurry. He was cold, tired and very hungry. Andrew was only fifteen and he had to work quite hard to help his mother and little sister Alice.

Just as he was turning the corner he stubbed his toe against something hard in the snow. As he stopped to see what it was he saw that it was a pocketbook and that it was filled with bills.

"What luck," he said, "I can now buy mother a new dress and Alice a warm coat to wear to school and perhaps there will be money enough for us all to go to the movies some night."

Now Andrew didn't mean to be dishonest. He didn't stop to think that was all. "Look mother, see what I have found," he said opening the door with a shout. "A pocketbook full of money. Now we will have money to spend."

"My dear boy, don't you know it is not ours to spend and I am sure you do not want to keep anything that is not yours," replied his mother.

Andrew opened it and they looked at the bills inside and it seemed to them like a small fortune. While they were looking the door bell rang and Andrew went to see who was there.

"Did you find a pocketbook?" asked a lady. "I am afraid that I have lost mine. I am sure I found it just before I passed this house."

"Yes," said Andrew, "I found one and here it is."

"Oh I am so glad for I could not afford to lose it as I am quite poor and it has taken me a long time to save this money and I must use it to pay the doctor. My little girl has been lame and the doctor has just made her well and this was the money to pay him. I want you to take this dollar and buy you something with it," said the lady.

Andrew was very glad now that he was able to return the money and ran into the house to tell his mother so and show her the money he had been given.

"Anyway, mother, we can all go to the movies so let's have supper and get ready," he said cheerfully.

His mother patted his head and she said: "We can all go and enjoy that treat of yours I am sure."

had never heard anything except what was reassuring to her mind.

Q. Did you listen over the dictagraph on the night of June 30? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Did you ever listen to any strange woman who was the doctor's patients? A. No, only to those who came regularly to see him.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Louise Bailey? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Did you ever see her? A. Not alive. I saw her body in the undertaker's place at Hempstead.

Denies Firing a Pistol
Q. How did you happen to go there? A. I went because you, Mr. Levy, asked me if I would go and see if I could recognize her.

Q. Did you ever fire a pistol or a gun in your life, Mrs. Carman? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about pistols or guns? Did you ever have one in your hand? A. Only once, when I cleaned a drawer of the doctor's desk. There was a small pistol there, which was given to the district attorney. Don't you remember, Mr. Smith? (Leaning over and smiling upon the prosecutor.)

"You are the witness, Mrs. Carman," replied Smith. "You are the one to say."

Secure Counsel
Mr. Levy then brought out how he became connected with the case.

Mrs. Carman said he had called the day after the shooting to offer his sympathy to the family and she had said to him: "I see my name in the newspapers. Will you advise me in case I should be necessary?" Whereupon Levy subsequently took up the case for the family.

Then the attorney took up, categorically, the story told on the previous day by Celia Coleman. Bit by bit he read Celia's testimony from the record of Wednesday's proceedings and asked Mrs. Carman about the truth or falsity of the woman's statements.

Q. You heard Celia Coleman testify yesterday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she tell the truth? A. She did not.

Q. Did you go out through the kitchen on June 30, when she was there? A. I did not.

Q. Did you fire a shot that night, A. No.

Q. Did you go back through the kitchen while Celia was there? A. No.

Q. Did you have any talk with her at that time? A. No.

Q. Did you say, "I shot him?" A. I did not.

Q. Did Celia see you in a kimono and a nightcap, I believe it was? A. (With a smile) No, sir.

Q. Did you show her a pistol? A. No.

Jurors Begin to Fidget
Q. Did you go through the kitchen pantry into the doctor's office? A. I did not.

Q. Did Celia pull your arm and tell you not to go in? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say to her, "It will not do anything more?" A. No.

Q. Did you tell Elizabeth to "stay back" from the kitchen? A. I did not.

Q. Did you see Celia's room early the next morning? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say to her, "Oh Celia, why did I kill that woman? I hope God will forgive me." A. No, sir I did not.

Q. Did you tell Celia you would take care of her boy as long as he lived? A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell her to lie to me when I questioned her about the night of June 30? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you wink at her on that occasion? A. (Smiling so broadly as almost to laugh.) A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell her to get your father, as you wished to have a pistol put out of the house? A. I did not.

The lawyer then asked Mrs. Carman if she had been allowed to testify as she had wished to do before either of the two grand juries which indicted her, the first for manslaughter, the second for murder. She said she had not been permitted to testify.

Shows Condition of Her Arms
Then he asked her to do something entirely unexpected, the useful purpose of which was not clearly evident.

"Will you take off your gloves, please?" asked Mr. Levy. She obeyed.

Then he asked: "What is the condition of your arms? Have you any cuts or bruises upon them?"

Mrs. Carman pulled her loose sleeves above her elbows, held her arms aloft so the jury might see them and then moved her hands about to show the palms and backs just as a magician does when he shows he "had nothing to deceive you."

"That was all," said Mr. Levy to the district attorney.

"My cross-examination is likely to be quite extended, your honor," Mr. Smith told the court, so Justice Kelly announced an adjournment until the morning.

HIGHLAND M. E. CHURCH
The Highland M. E. church was the scene last evening of one of the largest crowds of the season.

The occasion being a musical and social entertainment for the social and financial benefit of the Sunday school. The supper was served under the direction of Mrs. W. I. Leach and Mrs. A. O. Knapp, who were assisted by a large and competent committee.

Following the meal, a splendid entertainment was staged by a kitchen orchestra, made up of 25 or 30 young people. The instruments were fashioned after the ordinary kitchen utensils and the home-made orchestra was all to the good.

During the evening there were several readings by Donald Davis and Fred Timmins sang a number of selections.

ANNUAL HARVEST SUPPER
The annual harvest supper and entertainment by the members of the Highland M. E. church, held last night, was attended by a large number of people of the church.

Supper was served at 6.30 and at 8 o'clock an entertainment was given. It was in charge of Mrs. H. J. Corwin, chairman of the entertainment committee, and consisted of readings and songs by Miss Helen Casey; humorous readings by Miss Muriel Leach, and a monologue by Miss Mildred McKnight. Miss Helen Barnes was accompanist.

The supper committee was made up of Miss Martha Worcester, as chairman, assisted by several of the women of the church.

QUESTIONS ON BALLOT
In order to save the city unnecessary expense the city solicitor is preparing in brief form the questions to be voted upon at the coming state election. Instead of having several thousand copies of them printed for distribution to all voters. Having prepared the questions in tabloid form they will be displayed prominently in the newspapers.

The questions on the ballot were explained at length in the Spellbinder in yesterday's Sun.

FRENCH WARSHIP IN COLLISION ON COAST

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—It was reported here this morning that the French cruiser Descaux, while patrolling off the New Jersey coast had been rammed by the coastwise steamer Teleferia. Neither vessel, however, was seriously damaged.

The collision occurred as the Teleferia was entering the harbor, her officers said. They did not see the Descaux until the cruiser was a short distance ahead.

Immediately the steamer's engines were reversed and she let drop her anchor. Her momentum, however, was too great and she crashed at high speed into the war vessel. A boat was lowered from the cruiser and two of her officers boarded the steamer. They were very angry, the Teleferia's captain feared they would beat him.

After a long and bitter wrangle the officers went away and the Teleferia was made to give a bond to make good the cruiser's repairs before the steamer was permitted to continue on her trip to Boston and New York.

DEFENDS GARY DINNERS

U. S. Steel Counsel Says They Saved Failures in the Steel and Iron Industry

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—"The Gary dinners, to which 35 per cent of the iron and steel manufacturers of the country came to discuss the situation in the dark days of the panic of 1907, are a laurel and a crown in the history of the industry," said Richard V. Lindabury, in his argument for the defense yesterday in the federal suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation. Instead of apologizing for the action taken by the corporation at that critical period of the country's financial history, he added, the steel corporation is exceedingly proud of what it accomplished.

Mr. Lindabury said the iron and steel industry during the panic was becoming demoralized, that E. P. Gary called together the manufacturers to exchange views and to prevent wide and sudden fluctuations in prices that would bring ruin to everyone in the business.

As a result of these gatherings, he said, there was not one failure in the iron and steel trade for the first time in the history of the industry. No prices were fixed at these dinners as alleged by the government, nor was territory allotted or outputs limited, said counsel.

Mr. Lindabury concluded his argument late yesterday after speaking 10 hours. Most of his address yesterday was taken up with the conduct of the steel corporation after its organization in 1901. He denied the government charges that the earnings of the corporation were excessive, and declared that, on the other hand, they were only ordinary.

The billion dollar concern was always fair to competitors, he went on to say, never coerced dealers into taking its products, did not solicit or receive rebates from railroads, and did not maintain participation with independent manufacturers in pools of any kind.

Counsel for the defense spoke in glowing terms of the treatment accorded employees of the corporation. In this respect, Mr. Lindabury said, Steel corporation led the world. Long before the states began to place workmen's compensation laws upon their statute books the Steel corporation had adopted a method of compensation, which, he said, has become a model for all the states.

Price Trend Downward

That the Steel corporation maintained artificial prices as charged by the government was denied by counsel. Figures were produced by Mr. Lindabury to show that the trend of prices in the steel industry had been downward.

In disputing the government's contention that the Steel corporation was monopolistic in its tendency, Mr. Lindabury said that its percentage of the country's iron and steel business was not as large as it was when the concern was organized, while on the other hand the percentage of the business done by other steel corporations had increased.

The famous Tennessee coal and iron sale was touched upon by counsel, who denied that the corporation had acquired that property for any other purpose than to assist in preventing the spread of the panic. The charge of the government that directors of the Steel corporation had deceived President Roosevelt as to the amount of Tennessee stock held by the New York banking firm which was

KARLSRUHE HAS SUNK 20 BRITISH SHIPS IN ATLANTIC

Despatch From Canary Islands to London Reports That the Karlsruhe Sunk 13 British Merchantmen—Berlin Gave Out Report on Oct. 3 That She Destroyed 7 British Vessels

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Tenerife, Canary Islands, to the Daily Mail under date of Thursday, reports that the German cruiser Karlsruhe has sunk 13 British merchantmen in the Atlantic.

The news, according to the Mail's correspondent, was brought to Tenerife by the German steamer Crefeld, which arrived there with the crews of the British steamers Stratford, Maple Branch, Highland Hope, Indrault, Rio Iguaçu, Farn, Nicolo, Maria De Larcinaga, Cervantes, Carnish City, Pruth, Condor and Lynrowan, all of which were sunk by the Karlsruhe. The Crefeld was accompanied into port by the German steamer Patagônia, Rio Negro and Asunción.

A later message states that over 400 men on the crew are prisoners and that the merchantmen were mostly sunk in the Atlantic. The ships were mostly engaged in the South American trade and their total tonnage is about 60,000.

The cruiser Karlsruhe, a ship of a tonnage less than 5000 tons, has had in this war a career as eventful in the Atlantic as that of her smaller sister ship, the Emden in the Indian ocean. The Karlsruhe first came into notice at the outbreak of the war when she appeared in the vicinity of Sandy Hook apparently in wait for British merchantmen leaving New York. For a few days the British shipping hugged their piers and then came news that the Karlsruhe had been driven away by the approach of several British cruisers.

On Aug. 9 the Karlsruhe appeared in the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, where she coaled and then again took to the seas. Soon after it was learned that the Karlsruhe had been in a sensational running fight at sea with the British cruisers Suffolk and Bristol. It appears that the British cruisers came unexpectedly upon the Karlsruhe while she was coaling from the German steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm. The cruisers engaged in a running fight while the Kronprinz Wilhelm, through her superior speed easily escaped. The Karlsruhe eluded her pursuers and an unconfirmed report had it that she damaged the Bristol in this fight.

Since then the Karlsruhe has appeared in several West Indian ports for coal after preying in southern seas on British commerce. An official statement given out in Berlin on Oct. 3 said she had sunk seven British steamers in the Atlantic.

The Karlsruhe is comparatively a new ship, having gone into commission early in 1913. She is very fast, having a speed of 27 knots, which has enabled her thus far to successfully elude the persistent British pursuit. Her main armament consists of 12 4.1 and she carries a crew of 375 men.

FREIGHT RATES

The President of Penn. System First Witness Called Today

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Samuel Ren, president of the Pennsylvania system, was the first witness called today before the hearings of the Interstate Commerce commission on the application of eastern railroads for a general increase in freight rates of at least five per cent. His testimony was similar to that of previous witnesses for the roads, setting out that decline of 3 1/2 per cent in gross earnings for the fiscal year of 1914 and of six per cent for the months of July and August of this year, supplemented by conditions brought about by the war in Europe, made immediately relief necessary.

The war has resulted in special aggravation of a situation peculiar to the railroads, a situation which has already been adjudged as in need of relief, the witness said. He urged that immediate treatment was necessary on the broadest possible scale within the powers of the commission.

Interest begins Saturday, Nov. 7 at the Central Savings bank.

LABOR MEN PROTEST

DANCE AT NO. BILLERICA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Representatives of the executive council of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor and the Operative Plasterers' International association protested yesterday to the Pan-American commission against conditions which they contend prevail in the employment of labor in the canal zone.

They asserted that so-called plasterers, natives of the West Indies, are given the preference over practical journeymen plasterers, natives and citizens of the United States; that these aliens, so-called plasterers, are paid a wage ranging from 20 to 30 cents an hour, while the wages of the American plasterers are 70 cents per hour.

The council expresses belief that conditions applying to the plasterers also applied to all building trades in the zone.

SECOND ANNUAL PARTY LAST NIGHT

Another successful dancing party was conducted in Thomas Talbot Memorial hall last evening under the auspices of the employees of the Boston and Maine repair shops. The affair proved an enjoyable one, a large number of couples attending and dancing through an order which contained nearly 20 numbers. Music was furnished by Brock's orchestra of Lowell.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was as follows: General manager, Walter Chandler; assistant general manager, Thomas Nickerson; chief aid, Frank Bowman; floor director, William Doyle; treasurer, Robert Key; aids, all B. & M. employees.

LONG DEADLOCK BROKEN

Frank E. Morrison Elected Alderman From Ward 1, Somerville, Through Mr. Darguin's Vote

SOMERVILLE, Oct. 23.—The election of Frank E. Morrison, republican, as alderman from ward 1, Somerville, by the aldermen of that city last evening, ended a deadlock that has prevailed since June on this matter. John J. Wood, democrat, had the endorsement of the democratic city committee for the place. Alderman Darguin, who had heretofore voted always for Mr. Wood, switched to Mr. Morrison, the latter thus winning, 11 to 9.

Mr. Morrison fills the place vacated in June by William T. McCarthy, democrat, now assistant district attorney in Middlesex county. This election is according to provisions for such situations in the city charter.

SAYS HE KEPT PRISONER FROM KILLING HIMSELF

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—The sentences of six to eight years imposed upon Samuel Rosenfeld and three to five years upon Glen Farmer, the "de luxe" book agents, for the larceny of $37,075 from Mrs. Mary Rogers of Beacon street, went into effect yesterday.

They had been stayed during the pendency of the case before the full bench of the supreme court, which recently overruled their exceptions. Judge Quinn in the superior criminal court yesterday removed the stay and again imposed the sentences. Farmer had been out on bail and when notified to come in for sentence did so. Rosenfeld was in jail.

Louis Marks, counsel for Rosenfeld, read a letter from Sheriff Quinn, commending the prisoner for assistance rendered at the jail in preventing dependent inmates from carrying out plans of ending their lives. One of the men who contemplated suicide, according to the letter, was Joseph Duddy, confederate of Lawrence Robinson. Robinson ended his life while on trial of the murder of Inspector Norton. When Duddy learned of the suicide of Robinson he procured a rope in some manner and planned to use it to kill himself. Rosenfeld heard of the plan and talked to Duddy, inducing him to abandon it.

Counsel for the defendant urged the judge, in view of the information contained in the letter, to take off seven months which he has been in jail from the sentence. Judge Quinn refused to do so, remarking his imprisonment while exceptions were pending was "one of the fortunes of war."

Rosenfeld seemed surprised when allowance was not made for the seven months he had been incarcerated in the Charles street institution. He flushed a little. Farmer accepted his sentence stoically.

Both were taken to the state prison to begin their sentences.

APPRECIATES MARSHALL

PRESIDENT WILSON WRITES IN WARM COMMENDATION OF THE VICE PRESIDENT'S WORK

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 23.—Declaring that "the pleasure of being associated with you grows as the months pass," President Wilson has written Vice President Marshall, at his home here, endorsing all the majority in the United States senate.

The letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. Vice President—I am sure that my colleagues in the senate realize that my recent letter to Mr. Underwood was spoken as much in their praise as in praise of the members of the house, for we all stand together as a single team, and my satisfaction in cooperating with the members of the senate has been no less than in cooperating with the members of the house."

"I want to send you these few lines of sincere and genuine personal appreciation. The pleasure of being associated with you grows as the months pass, and I want to send you, as the session closes, this simple message of congratulations and thanks. Cordially and sincerely yours, "Woodrow Wilson."

The letter was made public here yesterday by Mr. Marshall's secretary.

COMMENDS INDIAN TROOPS

Lord Crewe Says That Germans May Learn Lesson in Chivalry and Humanity from Them

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Press bureau made public yesterday the speech of Lord Crewe, secretary of state for India, delivered Tuesday to officers recently appointed to government service in India:

"The Indian forces," he said, "will very soon take their place on the firing line beside their British comrades. The enemy make it a reproach that we employ Asiatic troops in Europe. To that I am prepared to reply with the famous sentence over the gateway of the University of Aberdeen: 'They Say—What Say? Let Them Say.'"

"But it is not in our eyes a matter of reproach, but of pride that our Indian fellow subjects feel themselves identified with us in the quarrel, and I expect that the enemy may learn several lessons from them in chivalry, humanity and respect for the person and homes of the poor and the humble."

LOWELL GAS LIGHT COMPANY

O'Sullivan Says:

Brass tack prices to boom Massachusetts made Clothing is the slogan of the hour at the Merrimack Clothing Co., and Saturday will be "Apple Day" here as on the two previous Saturdays. Barrel of hand-picked Baldwin apples will be given free with every suit and overcoat for men or boys down to $5 and free delivery will be made within the limits of Lowell as before.

History credits Horace Greeley with saying, the way to resume specie payments is, to resume.

The way to show the men of this industrial city that better and cheaper clothes are made within this state than any that are shipped into it—is to show them. Our brass tack price of $15 on Shuman's and other high class makes as displayed in our show windows today is done by us for the purpose of booming Massachusetts goods—by the low price giving them wider distribution.

We want you to submit them to the acid test of wear and prove them up for yourself.

You're in sympathy with our efforts to be sure, besides saving yourself $5 on a purchase, but don't think the opportunity will wait on you. This brass tack sale will last long enough to give you a reasonable opportunity to take advantage of it, but no sizes can be replenished after present offering is exhausted. At present we have sizes to fit almost any man that walks.

Boy Held for Murder

BOY MURDERED MAN AT MOUNTAIN ROCK

Strange Tragedy in Which Youth Used Revolver Deliberately on Turkish Baker Firing 3 Shots—Assailant Held on Charge of Murder

Ghivont Moordian, the 16-year-old youth who has confessed to the killing of Zolof Allis by shooting yesterday afternoon at Mountain Rock, was arraigned in police court this afternoon.

Moordian did not appear in the least daunted by his terrible deed of yesterday and faced the court with smiling countenance. He was represented by Wm. D. Heagan who entered a plea of not guilty. The case was continued for two weeks, Moordian being held without bail. The young defendant did not seem to be at all alarmed this morning by the charge.

SUPERIOR COURT

When the civil session of superior court was resumed this forenoon, a jury was empanelled and sent out to take a view of the scene of an accident which occurred at a railroad crossing in "Forge Village" and returned in a suit for $5000 being brought against the Boston & Maine company by Herbert W. Flavel of Groton. Blood and Leavel appeared for the plaintiff and Trull and Wier for the defence. The plaintiff, Herbert W. Flavel, is a Groton millman who had a route in Forge Village, a part of Westford. As he was driving his milk wagon across the tracks, which span a public highway, he claims that the vehicle was struck by a speeding locomotive. The wagon was completely demolished and the plaintiff thrown to the ground, sustaining severe injuries which required him to remain at home and gave up his work on the milk team. The accident occurred on February 9, 1913, when a flagman was stationed at the crossing. The plaintiff alleges that no signal warning the approach of the train was given by the flagman or no whistle blown, or bell sounded within at least 50 rods of the highway. He also states that the train was going at an excessive rate, of speed when his wagon was struck.

The defence denies the allegations of the plaintiff. The case of Mullin vs. Whitney, an action of contract, was continued today, the evidence being concluded this afternoon. In superior court this afternoon, verdicts for $388.01 and $215.55 respectively were returned in the cases of William J. Healy and Hyman Lewis vs. Mary J. Boardman. The suits were brought on promissory notes, one for $250 and the other for $250 with interest.

FRENCH WARSHIPS JOIN BRITISH NAVAL FORCES

Germans and Allies Continue Their Desperate Game of Give and Take in West Flanders and Northeastern France—Reinforcements for Germans—London Says Allied Forces Have Not Yet Succeeded in Stemming the "Hacking Through" Tactics of the Germans—The Russian Reports Insist That the German Advance on Warsaw Has Been Turned Into Retreat—13 British Steamers Sunk by German Cruiser—Germans to Send Land Forces to England

The Germans and allies continued their desperate game of give and take in West Flanders and northeastern France today, neither side claiming a decisive advantage.

French warships are said to have joined the British naval forces forming the extreme left of the allies and fresh German reinforcements are reported constantly coming up. Not since the opening of hostilities have the warring forces appeared to have been so evenly matched.

The allied warcraft in the straits of Dover are shelling the German right without stopping the onslaughts of the German land forces. The allied armies have gained ground at several points and been forced to fall back at others.

This afternoon's French official statement says that violent attacks are being made by the Germans all along the line of the canal LaBasse. Generally, the allies have held their own, though pushed back from some positions. They have progressed to the north and on the south of the river Somme and in the regions of Verdun and Pont-A-Mousson.

The Germans appear to be making a new effort with new organizations between the North Sea and the Oise.

Paris learns unofficially that fresh troops have given a new impetus to the German attack on the French right wing.

Russian advices continue to insist that the German advance on Warsaw has been turned into a retreat. It is admitted, however, that Germans and Austrians still hold the Vistula south of the Pillau river. Berlin and Vienna report Austrian successes south of Przemyśl.

The fast German cruiser Karlsruhe has become a rival of the Emden as a destroyer of enemy merchant vessels. Word comes from the Canary Islands that the Karlsruhe has sunk 12 British merchantmen in the Atlantic. The report is confirmed by London.

A despatch from Peking says that a German torpedo boat destroyer which escaped from Kiao Chow bay was captured by warships of the allies.

The German press generally chafes outrages against the allies troops. The Vorwaerts, the socialist organ of Berlin, is an exception. It states that upon investigation it has found no basis of truth in the allegations of cruelties inflicted upon German soldiers and civilians.

A news despatch from Copenhagen says that the shipyards at Kiel are constructing a fleet of 30 armored lighters which may be used in transporting a German land force to the shores of England.

BELGIAN KING AND QUEEN STILL WITH BELGIAN ARMY
LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Amsterdam to Reuters Telegram Co. says that the newspaper Handelsblad of that city learns that the Belgian king and queen are still with the Belgian army.

REPORT THAT BELGIANS HAVE REGAINED RIGHT BANK OF YSER RIVER
LONDON, Oct. 23.—A Havre despatch to the Telegraph states that the Belgians regained the right bank of the Yser river on Wednesday and are prepared to move forward.

GERMANS CLAIM GAINS AND VICTORIES ALL ALONG THE LINE

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—(Via London)—An official announcement from German admiralty headquarters dated Oct. 23 says:

"On the Yser canal" yesterday we gained successes.

"To the south of Dixmude our troops advanced."

"To the west of Lille our attacks were successful, we took possession of several villages."

"On the rest of the western front it is generally quiet."

"On the eastern theatre of the war the Russian attacks near West Angustowa have been repulsed. We captured several machine guns."

"There is no definite news from the southeastern field of war."

SWEDISH STEAMER ALICE BLOWN UP BY MINE IN NORTH SEA

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Swedish steamer Alice, homeward bound from London, has been blown up by a mine in the North sea. She sank in three minutes. All the members of her crew were saved.

DANISH STEAMER HAS BEEN CAPTURED BY BRITISH, SAYS BERLIN

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—(By wireless to Sayville, L. I.) Information given out today says:

"The Danish steamer Rolfe, New York for Christiania, carrying 2000 tons of corn, has been captured by a British cruiser and taken into Scotland."

"A German hospital ship, searching the sea for men from German torpedo boat destroyers sunk by the British, has been forced to go into an English harbor by a British cruiser."

"A German naval officer has discovered in Antwerp a letter addressed to an English surgeon from a sergeant of a Belgian volunteer corps in which are the following words:

"I would like to be a nurse; I could kill one or two Germans."

"The British are bombarding the open Belgian town of Ostend."

"Reliable official reports declare that there is in Germany today a sufficient supply of cereals to meet all requirements until the next harvest and that the stock of cattle is sufficient to provide an ample supply of meat."

LIEUT. LAWTON DEAD WIRELESS FROM BERLIN

WORCESTER VETERAN OF SPANISH WAR HAD BEEN ILL FOUR AND A HALF YEARS

WORCESTER, Oct. 23.—Lieutenant Dwight H. Lawton, U. S. A., died today in the home of his mother, Mrs. Reed Lawton of Worcester, after an illness of four and a half years with nervous paralysis. He enlisted as a private in the 12th infantry for the Spanish war and was later transferred to service in the Philippines. He was promoted to second lieutenant in the 30th infantry and to first lieutenant in the 16th infantry.

MEXICAN CONVENTION
WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The Mexican national convention at Aguas Calientes is still in session, according to official reports today to the state department.

The delegates were hopeful that the entire situation would be adjusted satisfactorily soon, though officials here believe peace in Mexico depends not so much now on the acts of the convention as Carranza's willingness to abide by them.

UNFIT BUTTER FOR TROOPS

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—An inferior brand of butter, described as unfit to eat but bearing the guarantee of the New York Mercantile Exchange that it was the best quality, was shipped last June to Vera Cruz for the use of the United States troops, according to testimony adduced today at the inquiry instituted by State Attorney General Parsons to determine if a butter, egg and cheese monopoly exists in this city.

PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed today by Gustav C. Kenning, hotel keeper of Springfield. The liabilities were scheduled at $162,381 and the assets at $150,628.

FIRE AT MANN SCHOOL

The alarm from box 113 at 4 o'clock this afternoon was for a slight fire in the old Mann school on Broadway, said to have been caused by an explosion. Only a small part of one of the workrooms used by the pupils of the industrial school was damaged.

MONUMENT TO COL. WEBSTER

MANASSAS, Va., Oct. 23.—A monument to Col. Fletcher Webster, of the 12th Massachusetts regiment, a son of Daniel Webster, killed on the third day's fighting in the Battle of Bull Run was unveiled here today on the spot where he fell. It is a large boulder from the Webster farm in Massachusetts. Confederate veterans and daughters of the Confederacy assisted in the exercises, conducted by the 12th Massachusetts regimental association. Samuel Appleton of St. Paul, Minn., a grandson of Daniel Webster, made the dedication address.

QUESTIONS ON BALLOT AT STATE ELECTION

The municipal council held a brief meeting this forenoon and voted to publish the questions to be voted upon at the coming state election, in the daily papers instead of notifying every voter by letter as was done last year. The law permits notification to be made either way and the mayor, in introducing the subject, said that to send out individual notices would mean an expense of from $350 to $500, while the expense of publishing the questions in the papers will not amount to much. The following vote was passed:

"Voted, that, pursuant to section 4, chapter 408, Acts of 1913, the provisions of law requiring copies of proposed laws to be sent to voters is hereby suspended and made inapplicable insofar as the same relates to the proposed laws that are to be voted upon at the current state election to be held November 3, 1914, and it is voted further that pursuant to section 2 of said chapter 408, Acts of 1913, the city clerk and he is hereby directed to publish in the daily newspapers of the city the following abstracts of said proposed laws which are to be placed upon the ballot at the coming state election:—

AUTOMOBILE STRUCK TREE RAID IN MANCHESTER

TWO MEN HAD CLOSE CALL AT TEWKSBURY CENTRE IN AVOIDING ANOTHER AUTO

Two men had a narrow escape from serious injury when they were thrown out of an automobile after the machine had crashed into a tree in Tewksbury Centre shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon. The auto was badly damaged but not enough to prevent the men from resuming their trip, although they got a bad shaking-up.

The automobile, a Pierce-Arrow of the delivery type is the property of A. A. Knights & Son, 81 Commercial street, Boston and was being driven by the son, who was accompanied by his father. The two men were on their way to Boston and the machine was being driven at a moderate rate of speed. When a spot opposite the residence of Enoch Foster on Main street in Tewksbury Centre was reached another automobile came in sight and in order to avoid a collision Mr. Knights drove his car on a tree.

The two men were forcibly thrown to the ground, but fortunately escaped serious injuries. The bumper of the automobile and the mud guard were badly wrecked, while one of the large front lights was broken to fragments. Inasmuch as the engine was intact the men were able to continue their journey to Boston.

PENNILESS RUSSIAN HELPED

A pitiful case of privation was brought to the attention of the local authorities today when a young man, unable to speak English, told through an interpreter how he had come all the way from Russia to Lowell to seek means whom he believed would help him work only to learn that his relatives had left the city some time ago. After visiting many factories and other places in search of employment of some kind, the young man today came in contact with a kind hearted gentleman, who set out to help him in his troubles. Application was made at the board of trade office but there were more applications than positions listed there and the man was finally taken to a nearby town where he was given work on a farm.

BITTER CONTEST IN PENN.

SEN. BOIES PENROSE, CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION, FACES STRONG OPPOSITION

U.S. SENATOR BOIES PENROSE

United States Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania is a candidate for re-election, and the democrats and progressives are making a hard fight to take away his seat. He has been in the senate since 1887 and has been under fire often from his political enemies. The senatorial contest in Pennsylvania is one of the bitterest in the coming November election.

LETTER FROM AUGUSTE SARRE
Auguste Sarre, Sr., father of the Sarre brothers, prominent business men of this city, has written an interesting letter to his sons relative to the present conditions in Vevre, Minton, Auvergne, France, where he now resides.

Among his subjects he describes the march of 50,000 French cavalrymen through Vevre. The railroads, he says, are used exclusively by the troops and travel is impossible. Congressman John Jacob Rogers was an important factor in the receipt of this letter, as the local boys had made many queries for mail and had been unable to locate it. Mr. Sarre, Sr., is a former resident of Lowell, having resided here a number of years.

JOHNSON IS PRESIDENT

Manufacturers' Export Association Closes Convention With Banquet in New York City

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—American trade conditions with foreign countries were discussed at the closing business session yesterday of the fifth annual convention of the American Manufacturers' Export association. Alva B. Johnson of Philadelphia was elected president.

Resolutions were adopted in support of Postmaster-General Burleson's efforts to establish two-cent postage between the United States and Argentina and Uruguay; complaining the steamship lines which transferred their ships to American registry and appointing a commission to cooperate with the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in holding an exhibition at Washington at which South American countries would be represented.

The convention closed last night with a banquet at which speeches were made by James A. McNeill, president of the United States Steel Corporation.

DISCONTENT IN ALL AGES

A girl of 20 years, says the Woman's

Home Companion, writes:

"I've just got to endure the conditions now and stay here in this stuffy little town, but some day I am going to shake the dust of it from my feet and go to a big city and make something of myself."

A middle aged woman writes:

"There is no use trying to get my children to see things differently. I guess if I wasn't their mother they wouldn't even respect me. They think I'm an old fogey. Maybe I am, but I will tell you this—I am going to stay so I don't approve of new fandanglers and I never shall. I don't know what the world is coming to."

An aged woman writes from an "old ladies' home":

"If I could only get away from here!

The old ladies quarrel among themselves and are a fearfully selfish lot.

I used to have such a different life. Why, I had a Sunday school class of 23 girls, and they all loved me, and I used to help them to be good and sweet and happy. I know I did, used to tell me so. We had beautimes together. It seemed then though I was doing something re-white, and now here I am, useless without a chance to do any of worth while things."

President Signs Papers—Taxes on Beers and Wine in Effect—Congress Did Not Adjourn

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Congress met today with the program for adjournment completely upset as the result of obstructive tactics on the part of the southern democrats who are demanding legislation to relieve the cotton situation. The plan to adjourn at 6 o'clock last night immediately following the adoption of the conference report on the war revenue bill was frustrated by the filibuster which prevented action in the senate on a joint resolution calling for adjournment at that time and to which the house had agreed.

Meantime the war tax bill, estimated to bring in $90,000,000 of revenue, has received the signature of President Wilson. The taxes on beers and wine were in effect today but the levy on tobacco will not go into effect until November 1st. The stamp taxes will date from Dec. 1. Although the president stayed at the capitol for a few minutes after he had signed the bill, he had nothing to say regarding the failure of the adjournment program.

The question of the adjournment was still further complicated today by reason of the fact that many members of both houses had already left for their homes in anticipation of the plans for adjournment last night being carried out. Majority Leader Underwood was of the opinion that under these circumstances it would be impossible to have a quorum on hand again to pass an adjournment resolution until after the elections. The question of whether congress would remain in session indefinitely without a quorum of either house hinged upon whether an agreement could be reached today for a recess until after the November elections.

Although Majority Leader Kern and other democrats in the senate has expressed doubts regarding adjournment at this time it was believed that the recess plan might be agreed today by democrats from the cotton states if they had assurances that measures designed to afford relief in the cotton situation would be considered following the elections. Senator Hoke Smith, who led the fight in the senate in behalf of such legislation had signified that he might agree to such a plan.

125 YEARS OLD RAP BULL MOOSE

Dinner in Honor of the Prohibitionists Urge Supreme Court Given Drys to Vote for Their Own Candidates

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—A dinner last night in honor of the United States supreme court and commemorative of its 125th anniversary, presided over by former President William H. Taft, and attended by Chief Justice White and the associate justices of the court closed the annual meeting of the American Bar Association. Peter W. Meldrum of Savannah, Ga., had been elected president at the final business session.

The compromise of the race question as to membership in the association in the closing hours of the meeting permitted adjournment without a single contest on the floor. Moorfield Storey of Boston had introduced a resolution to rescind the 1912 resolution declaring that negroes should be members of the association.

A statement by Henry St. George Tucker of Virginia, before debate of the Storey resolution was taken up, offered a resolution rescinding the 1912 resolution, but setting forth that, whereas it is important that full information should be furnished to the executive committee as to application for membership, it was resolved that all applications for membership should state the race and sex of the applicant and such other facts as the committee should require. The Tucker resolution was adopted almost unanimously. Mr. Storey grasped Mr. Tucker's hand and the entire audience broke forth in applause.

The Tucker resolution not only settled for the time being the negro question but empowered the executive committee to pass upon the admission of women, three of whom have applied for membership.

Invited as special guests at the dinner last night were representatives of the families of former chief justices. These included William Jay of New York, Benjamin H. Rutledge of South Carolina, Ernest Bradford Ellsworth of Connecticut, Burrill Keith Marshall of Kansas City, Roger B. Taney Anderson of New York, Franklin Chase Hoyt of New York, Morrison R. Waite of Ohio and Melville W. Fuller of Washington.

ERUPTION ON WRIST SPREAD TO ELBOW

Child's Arms Itched, Could Not Sleep. Grew Worse. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Healed.

R. F. D. No. 2, West Burke, Vt.—"My little daughter's trouble began on her wrists and I thought it was caused by playing out of doors. It spread on her arms half way to the elbow and her little arms itched so she would rub them until they would bleed. Her arms were red and rough and as they grew worse I used to have to get up with her nights for they itched so she could not sleep. I had to keep her arms bandaged for about two months. They would look as if they were raw at times and she would rub them nights until they would bleed."

"I used some ointment but it would not cure her so I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed her arms with the Cuticura Soap then put the Cuticura Ointment on and bandaged them. The second time I used them I could see a change so we bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap. We had only used about half of them when she was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Lilla Beane, Jan. 31, 1914.

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Caustic reference is made to the progressive party, and all prohibitionists are called upon to stand by their candidates on the state ballot, in a statement issued last evening following a meeting of the Massachusetts Prohibition club at the offices of the prohibition party state committee, 25 Milk street.

The statement declared that the consistent fight made by the prohibition party against the liquor traffic as an economic issue had been largely responsible for the present spread of sympathy for natural prohibition.

"After years of sacrifice and devotion to a principle," says the statement, "the prohibition party would be justified in giving up its separate existence in favor of a party only which met these three conditions:

"1. It must be unqualifiedly committed to prohibition in state and nation.

"2. It must be fitted by history and organization to unite all or most of the temperance elements.

"3. It must be reasonably sure of growth, permanence and ultimate victory.

"The progressive party in Massachusetts stands for prohibition in the nation, but not in the state. At its national convention in 1912 the progressive party refused to declare itself on this question at all, and it cannot act again until 1916.

"Because of its origin and present leadership there is good reason to believe that a large part of the temperance forces in state and nation would never fight under the banner of the progressive party.

"Of course, no one can foretell the future, but since the prohibition party came into being more than 25 parties have sprung up and died. To many keen political observers the progressive party gives no better promise of permanence.

"Indeed, we see no reason why in this day of the triumph of our principles the prohibition party is not as likely to unite all shades of temperance men as a new party. Surely we do not see why a man who sincerely wants his vote to count for prohibition—either state or national—should pass by the candidate of the prohibition party to vote for the progressives."

FOUR GARTERS ENOUGH

GIRL WHO WANTED SIX ON CORSETS HAD MERCHANT IN COURT—EXPERTS TESTIFY

YONKERS, Oct. 23.—Half a dozen prettily and modestly attired expert witnesses yesterday have settled the question as to how many garters there should be attached to up-to-date women's corsets.

Four is enough, they testified, and City Judge Joseph H. Beall dismissed the complaint of Miss Edna Smith against a local merchant. He sold her corsets with that number, but she claimed there should be six at least.

The merchant contended that two garters for each stocking were sufficient to obtain the desired result and said he had several expert witnesses who would testify and demonstrate. He indicated half a dozen young women in the court room who certainly were wearing silk stockings and who the merchant said had been harnessed into corsets only waist high but nearly knee deep.

Miss Smith, who had said that she was willing to show that four garters on a corset were not sufficient, became dismayed by the array of expert testimony and, throwing the disputed corsets upon the judge's desk, she flew from the court room saying she would not think of wearing corsets that had only four garters.

THE RABBIT'S FOOT

BY GWEN SEARS

THE HABIT OF SWINGING THE ARMS

If you will observe the numbers of elbows out instead of in. To be graceful swinging their arms as they walk along the avenues, you will give the body, although in the act they must not be stiffened. At first the position will be more or less difficult, but in time it will become easy and natural, just as in cultivating the short step.

The rolls of fat under the arms are apt to cause the holding out of the arms, but a firm massage daily and a pressing of the arms against the sides will overcome the difficulty, help.

Another serious defect in connection with the arms is that of pointing the ing greatly to remove the superfluous flesh from this part of the body. A simple cutting out of bread and potatoes, indeed will reduce the flesh on all parts of the body in most cases.

ATTEMPT TO KILL OFFICIAL

PISTOL TAKEN FROM MAN WHO ATTACKED DEPUTY HARRISON OF THE DOCK DEPARTMENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—An attempt to assassinate Richard O. Harrison, first deputy commissioner of the department of docks and ferries, as he was about to enter his office yesterday morning, was frustrated by the quick action of spectators, who overpowered Mr. Harrison's assailant and took from him a pistol.

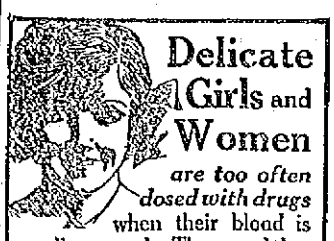

The assailant was John O'Connor, a discharged employe. He was locked up. O'Connor was a ship's carpenter in the employ of the dock department. He was discharged several weeks ago after trial on charges before Mr. Harrison. Since then he wrote letters to the mayor asking him to dismiss Mr. Harrison.

CARMAN MURDER TRIAL

Daughter of Mrs. Carman Says Mother Was in Bed When Shot Was Fired

MINNEOLA, L. I., Oct. 22.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman on trial for the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey passed through the ordeal of cross examination today. Her story denying all participation in the crime was unchanged. When she had concluded, members of her household followed her on the stand and gave corroborative evidence.

Mrs. Sarah Conklin, Mrs. Ida Powell, Elizabeth Carman—mother, sister and daughter—by one admitted that Mrs. Carman was in bed when the shot was fired that shot down the witness and slippers, went downstairs into the waiting room, leaned for a minute or two against the mantelpiece and then returned to her room. Ten-year-old Elizabeth testified that she, too, went downstairs behind her mother, stayed there but a moment, returned and in a minute or two went into her mother's room.

"My mother was there," she said. Against the testimony of the Carman family, the state has the evidence of Celia Coleman, maid of all work in Mrs. Carman's home and Frank Farrell, a former stationery engineer. Celia has testified that Mrs. Carman went out of the kitchen a short time before the shot was fired, reappeared a few seconds after it was fired, produced a revolver from the folds of her kimono and said: "I shot him."

Farrell has testified that he saw a woman dressed as Mrs. Carman was fleeing from the window into the house after the shot.

Mrs. Carman faced her ordeal with

Help the Stomach Digest Your Food

When the stomach fails to digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and refuse that ferments and generates poisons that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Most people naturally object to the drastic cathartic and purgative agents that shock the system. A mild, gentle laxative, positive in its effect and that will quickly relieve constipation is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. It does not gripe or cramp, but acts easily and pleasantly and is therefore the most satisfactory remedy for children, women and elderly persons. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. R. Caldwell, 151 Washington St., Monticello, N.Y.

WORMS ARE ENEMIES OF CHILDREN

Worms are one of the most dreaded diseases of children. There is nothing better than Dr. Tru's Elixir to expel worms of all kinds and to keep the stomach in good order.

First manufactured by my father in 1851. Our mothers and grandmothers used this remedy and found it to be ideal for its purpose.

Some of the signs of worms are: Deranged Trade Mark stomach, furred tongue, belching, variable appetite, increased thirst, acid or heavy breath, nausea, enlarged abdomen, variable bowel action, pale face of leaden tint, twitchings around eyes, itching of nostrils, languor, irritability, disturbed sleep, grinding of teeth, irregularity of pulse.

If your child is not one of the robust kind, start in to use Dr. Tru's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, today. 35c, 50c and $1.00. Advice free. Write me.

Auburn, Maine. Dr. Tru.

H. Fuller, contractor. The bill was for work done in 1911 and the amount was $35. It was voted to give Mr. Fuller a hearing on the bill at the regular meeting of the council on Tuesday next.

Settle Land Case

The council voted to pay Edie B. Allen $130 for land seized by the city in 1911. The land is located on the boulevard and was seized for the purpose of increasing the water well area. When the land was seized Edie B. Allen's father brought suit against the city. He died, however, before any action was taken and assigned his claim to his daughter. The amount to be paid is approximately what the city offered for the land in the beginning.

HEAD AND NOSE STOPPED FROM A COLD? TRY THIS!

"Pape's Cold Compound" Ends Severe Colds or Grippe in Few Hours

Your cold will break and all grippe misery end after taking a dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" every two hours until three doses are taken.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed up! Quit blowing and sniffing! Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Accept no substitute.

Another Old Bill
Commissioner Donnelly called the council's attention to an old bill that had been presented to him by William

The Planning Board

Mayor Murphy announced that Jesse D. Crook's term as member of the city planning board had expired and on his motion the council proceeded to ballot for a planning board member for a term of five years. Mr. Crook was re-elected. He got four votes and would have had five but for the fact that Commissioner Morse was absent.

Everybody had forgotten about the planning board until the mayor recalled it. It is a comparatively new board but it seems to have already gone into disuse. The board held two or three meetings but that's "some time back." Perhaps the reelection of Mr. Crook will give it new life.

VARNUM PROPERTY IN KIRK STREET REMODELED FOR HIGH SCHOOL ANNEX

The Kirk street annex to the high school will be ready for occupancy about Dec. 1. This was the statement made today by Francis Connor, inspector of buildings, under Commissioner Donnelly. The work is being pushed with all possible speed. Carpenters are busy in every hole and corner of the building, but there is a great deal to be done and it will take quite a long time to do it. The rooms four on each floor, will be splendidly adapted for school purposes. The studding is high, there is plenty of light and the ventilating system will be up-to-date in every respect. The order of the state inspectors requiring a new system of ventilation has been the one big factor in delaying the work. The putting in of new heating and ventilating systems represents a tremendous amount of work and considerable expense, but the building, when completed, will very well suit the purpose for which it is intended. There are no toilets in the building and Commissioner Donnelly stated today that a covered passageway would be made from the annex to the basement of the high school building where the toilets are located. Any one of the eight rooms now being prepared in the annex will accommodate more than 100 pupils and is large enough for two rooms. The annex when completed will represent an expense of about $25,000 and this, of course, includes the whole house and all of the land, known as the Varnum property. For the other side or north wing of the house the city receives a rental of $75 a month.

SILVER AND LINEN SHOWER

About 40 young women from various parts of the city gathered at the home of Miss Theresa O'Hare, 13 Bassett street, last evening and tendered a silver and linen shower to Miss Rose Vane. The young lady received many beautiful and costly pieces of silver and linen. Refreshments were served and games played until a late hour, when the party broke up, all wishing the bride-to-be much happiness. The success of the party was due to the efforts of Misses Theresa O'Hare and Annie Connors.

Keep baby's skin well by using Resinol Soap

The regular use of Resinol Soap is usually enough to prevent those distressing rashes and chafings to which most babies are subject. This is so, first, because Resinol Soap is absolutely pure and free from harsh alkali, and second, because it contains the Resinol medication, on which so many physicians rely for the treatment of skin troubles.

Sold by all druggists. For sample free, write to Dept. 10-F, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

NEURALGIC PAINS

Among the causes of neuralgia the most important is the general physical condition of the patient. Neuralgia is most common in persons reduced in strength by over-work or some form of over-exertion, physical or mental, or by loss of sleep. Anemia, or lack of good, red blood is a common cause of neuralgia. The reason for this is plain. The nerves get their nourishment through the blood. When the blood is thin and weak the nerves are badly nourished, they become inflamed and neuralgic pains are produced. These pains have been described as "the cry of a starved nerve."

Hot applications to soothe these inflamed nerves and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to build up the blood and carry the needed elements to the nerves is the correct treatment and one that has brought good results in so many cases that it is no longer an experiment. Headache, backache, sleeplessness, nervous debility, nervous breakdown, St. Vitus' dance and the functional forms of partial paralysis show good results under the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Send today for the booklet on Nervous Disorders to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. It is free.

PURE GUESSWORK

R. R. President Admits Figures Not Accurate at Hearing

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Louis D. Brandeis, counsel for the Interstate Commerce commission, attacked the figures of railroad statisticians upon which the eastern railroads are asking increases in freight rates because of the war when the hearing on the rate cases was resumed today and demanded an opportunity to cross examine the men who prepared them.

These estimates, said Mr. Brandeis, appear absolutely out of line of what might have appeared to be the fact. He demanded that figures on which the estimates were founded be produced "that some test as to their accuracy" might be applied. The railroad men have been presenting tables to show decreases in earnings and injury to credit because of the final exigency arising from the European conflict.

R. C. Wright of the Pennsylvania railroad described the method of reaching the estimates presented. He testified under examination that they were rough and not founded upon controlled figures.

"I have been told it would take 500 men 30 days to give them accurately," said he.

Mr. Brandeis put Wright through a strenuous examination as to how each estimate had been reached and forced the witness to admit that some of the conclusions were "pure guesswork."

George M. Shriver, vice president for accounting of the Baltimore & Ohio system, was recalled to explain estimates he had furnished to the carriers of the district. Mr. Brandeis took the witness through much less at previous hearings, bringing out numerous suggested savings and sources of increased revenues which Mr. Shriver admitted had not been considered.

The witness said the estimates were sketchy, many of the rates on which they were based having been received only last night. He maintained that omissions, however, would not substantially affect the result.

DENIED BY MUNSTERBERG

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 23.—Authorship of a letter reported in Amsterdam cable despatches to have been published in the Cologne Gazette to over the signature of Hugo Munsterberg, depicting the trend of American sentiment against Germany, was emphatically denied by the Harvard professor this afternoon.

After the Amsterdam cable despatch had been read to him, Professor Munsterberg said:

"It is an absolute fake. I never have written any such letter to the Cologne Gazette or to any other paper or persons in Germany or in America."

THE SUN AT FALMOUTH

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Sun, an American steamer belonging to the Sun Oil Co. of Philadelphia which left that port Oct. 3 for Amsterdam, arrived today at Falmouth.

The fact that the Sun's destination was Amsterdam and that she has arrived at Falmouth may mean that she has been diverted from her course by the British naval authorities. She was built at Newport News in 1907 and is of 3201 tons.

O'Brien's Policy and Nationally Advertised Products

We consider it timely, during this week, devoted to the display of Nationally Advertised Products, to call attention to the merchandise policy at O'Brien's, as announced when we started in business.

In a broad way, that policy is: To identify O'Brien's with those brands of men's wear that the consumer knows and has confidence in; that have stood the test of time and publicity; which publicity proves the merit of the article and the progressive methods of the maker.

These are the makers and brands we wished to identify with our name. The makers' name backed by our own label is your safeguard in trading. The policy is sound, for it is winning out in the face of competition.

"Whose make is this?" is a question that is becoming very familiar to our salesmen. It is an evidence of the education resulting from national advertising to the consumer.

We append a list of nationally advertised makes and brands that are carried at O'Brien's and constitute the big bulk of our stock. It is worthy of perusal.

BIG FIGHT IN ILLINOIS

R. C. SULLIVAN IS SEEKING
ELECTION AS UNITED STATES

ROGER C. SULLIVAN

Roger C. Sullivan, one of the most prominent democrats of Chicago, is seeking election as United States senator from Illinois. He is opposed by Senator Lawrence G. Sherman, who seeks re-election. Mr. Sullivan, who long been in the political limelight, both locally and at times nationally. He captured the nomination in spite of the opposition of Secretary Bryan, Governor Duane and Mayor Harrison of Chicago. A third very busy contestant for the senatorial toga in Illinois is Raymond Robbins, a noted social worker, who is a progressive.

KENTUCKY WARMS ON ILLITERACY

In a proclamation characterized by Dr. P. P. Claxton, U. S. Commissioner of education, as "one of the most important issued by the governor of any state since the beginning of our national life," Governor McCreary, of Kentucky, announces the appointment of a state literacy commission and the beginning of a campaign to eliminate illiteracy from his state. A thousand volunteer teachers are already at work in the "moonlight schools," teaching Kentucky's 258,000 adult illiterates how to read and write.

The members of the literacy commission are: Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, through whose efforts as superintendent of schools illiteracy has been entirely wiped out in Rowan county during the last three years; Miss Ella Lewis, superintendent of schools for Grayson county; Dr. J. G. Crabbe, president of the Eastern Kentucky state normal school; and H. H. Cherry, president of the Western Kentucky state normal school. The commission is receiving valuable aid from the Kentucky educational association, the Kentucky Press association, the state federation of women's clubs, the society of Colonial Dames, and other public-spirited organizations.

Of special importance, in the opinion of Commissioner Claxton, will be the effect of Kentucky's campaign on other states. Illiteracy is a national problem, and few states are free from it. Says Dr. Claxton:

"This proclamation will have far-reaching results. It marks the beginning of a new era in Kentucky and for all the country for the idea will be taken up by other states, and the work will go on till the curse and shame of illiteracy have been lifted from every state in the Union."

"It will be a part of the lasting glory of the state of Kentucky that it has taken the lead in this movement. It is the first state to undertake to offer to all the people, of whatever age, an opportunity to learn to read and write, and thus break away from the prison walls of ignorance and silence within which the illiterate man and woman must live. Whatever else Governor James H. McCreary does for his state, this proclamation and his recommendation to the legislature that it provide for the appointment of this literacy commission must always be accounted among his wisest and most important acts."

Bureau of education officials point out that work such as has been begun in Kentucky will make much more rapid progress when the literacy bill introduced by Congressman Abernethy of Alabama, becomes law. This bill (H. R. 15470) requires the bureau of education and the commissioner of education to devise plans for teaching adult illiterates, and to cooperate with state and local authorities in the work when requested to do so.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

THE OPERA HOUSE

Tonight is the big tango contest at the Opera House between Mack and Hickey who have been appearing all this week with the Raymond Teal Musical company. Mr. Sheehy and lady of this city, Mack and Hickey have appeared in all of the leading theatres of the east, meeting all comers and have yet to go down in defeat. Mr. Sheehy and lady have proven beyond a doubt that they are the best in their line in this vicinity, which should make this contest the best of the season. The audience will not see the tango, and the prize, which amounts to $50, will be awarded according to their verdict. The prices will remain the same, namely 10, 15 and 20 cents, and all seats may be had in advance by calling at the Cornham street box office or telephone 261.

Washing Won't Rid
Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be softer, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

EVENINGS

Little pla, the front line act at the H. F. Keith theatre this week, is being presented by Madden & Fitzpatrick, International favorites. Mr. Madden was formerly leader of the orchestra in one of the Polka theatres, and Mr. Fitzpatrick is a graduate of Holy Cross college and was known as one of the best amateur actors when attending that institution. In their act Mr. Madden plays the piano imitator, and Mr. Fitzpatrick, the singing comedienne, is truly quite in a class by herself. Her refreshing repertoire will not soon be forgotten. Another act which will make more than ordinary impression is "A Business Proposal," in which Chauncey Monroe & Co. appear. Mr. Monroe's characterization of the bashful clerk is a neat bit of work, while Mr. Chatterton as the brusque business man who is caught in a web of his own weaving, is uncommonly good. And, rounding out the cast is demure Winifred Wellington. Frankie Ray and the Four Cox Sisters offer "A Bit of Everything," which is set to music, and complete with dances. Other acts on the bill are: Marguerite & Hanley, Mr. Quick, Beatrice & Hunter and the Hearst-Bell News Pictorial. Phone 28.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE
The theme of "The Blindness of Virtue" which will be presented the coming week by the Merrimack Square Theatre Stock Co. is said to teach a great moral lesson to parents who are remiss in their duties to their children by their failure to properly instruct them in the many things which they should know in order to be fully equipped for their part in life's battle. Incidentally it will mark the first appearance of Miss Frances Shannon who will be the new leading lady, and it might also be added that the role in which she will make her debut to local theatregoers is one well suited to allow her an opportunity to display her versatility. Seats for all performances are now selling at the box office and the subscription list is still open.

THE ROYAL THEATRE
A remarkable program has been arranged for Friday and Saturday at the Royal theatre. Three good special features have been secured besides the regular releases. "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," is one of the most thrilling three-reelers ever played. It is an animal drama, with most unusual settings. Others on the program are "The Dancer" with Verona Merseaux, the dancer in the companion piece of the "Glamour." It is a Kaleidoscope production, that will attract considerable attention, with its wonderfully realistic scenes "Did He Love Her" and "Between One and Two," two of the funniest Lubin comedies ever produced are billed. The other special play is a Vitagraph called "The Mysterious Lodger" with Maurice Costello in the leading part. "The Thief," a biograph play is also on the program.

THE OWL THEATRE
The Owl offers another great array of good features for Friday and Saturday. The sixteenth episode of the "Perils of Pauline" showing the villainous ex-secretary trying to poison Pauline, is one of the many good pictures to be shown. His scheme is foiled at a critical time, and again Pauline escapes from death. This serial is drawing to a finish as there remain only a few more releases to be sent out, and the management is contemplating the use of another well-known serial for their numerous patrons. Other pictures on the program for today and tomorrow are "The Father's Sin," a powerful sociological two-part feature with Blanche Sweet in the leading part. "Our Mutual Girl" is a most interesting young lady, and her admirers will again have the chance to admire her in her weekly appearance. "Through the Dark," another two-part extra feature, is also booked, and as can be seen, the variety of the subjects are specially commendable. "Zip the Dodger" is another of those Keystone farical plays, with no end in view, except to raise a laugh.

Coming Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "An American Heiress," fourth of "The Beloved Adventurer" series. "His Unknown Girl," a two act drama. LADIES' REST AND WAITING ROOM ON SECOND FLOOR

TOWN OF NO. CHELMSFORD

Little Girl Struck by Motor Cycle— School Committee Criticized for Holding to Dual Session School Day —School Dance Planned—Campfire Girls and Boy Scouts Busy

The beautiful little town of North Chelmsford, at the present time more beautiful than ever, in its autumn hues, is being besieged with the rapid fire, political guns of the various candidates, and from now on the political issues of the day will be the main topic of discussion with the men folk. Every day some candidate speaks at the mill gates, and according to reports they have all had good sized audiences. Much interest is being centered in the congressional fight this year and many of the voters are trying hard to figure out just how the town will vote. Last year it went progressive. Some say that the republicans and progressives will split the vote this year, thereby making way for a democratic victory, but this remains to be seen. J. Joseph O'Connor, the democratic candidate for congress, who is putting in a whole lot of hard work in the various townships, spoke to a very large gathering Wednesday noon at the Silella mill gate and made a good impression. His talk was on the achievements of the present administration, and he appealed to the voters for the election of a democrat in order that the democratic party could go on with its splendid work undisturbed.

The mills in the town are running steadily and in some cases night work is being carried on.

Little Girl Injured
Little Elizabeth Sheppard, aged eight years, had a narrow escape from being killed yesterday afternoon through being knocked down by a motor cycle. As it was the child received two bad scalp wounds, one of which required several stitches being taken. She also sustained several bruises over different parts of her body.

The accident happened just before 3 o'clock when the children were coming out of school. While crossing Princeton street the child failed to hear the warning horn of an approaching motor cycle, ridden by J. H. Brown of Forge Village. Endeavoring to cross the street she became confused, with the result the machine struck her and threw her forcibly to the ground. The rider dismounted and assisted Principal Arthur Trubey and Harold Hodge in looking after the little one until she was carried into a nearby residence, where she received medical assistance and the attention of a graduate nurse, Miss Eva Hoyle, who happened to be in the vicinity. The child was afterward taken to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Sheppard, in Gay street.

Although the accident was unavoidable, there should be suitable warning signs posted around the town, and especially in front of the school buildings. Every day large crowds of children gather in Princeton street in front of the schools and many accidents have been narrowly averted.

Local School Needs
The schools of the town have grown very rapidly, far beyond the realization of the community. The high school at the present time is overcrowded and some provision will have to be made to accommodate the large influx of pupils. There are 80 pupils in the school this year, an increase of 10 over the preceding year. The lower grades are also taxed to their capacity, and next year an addition to the school building will be an absolute necessity. Because of the overcrowded condition, the high school is short one teacher. This makes it necessary for one teacher to do double work, which is an inconvenience to herself and to her pupils. One of the two rooms is teacherless at certain periods of the day, and from this it can be seen that the best results are not obtainable. The type-writing room is very unsanitary, and if a state inspector ever chances to drop around in that direction he will condemn it. There is only one window in the room which is so small that it can accommodate only about 10 or 12 pupils comfortably and this window is now kept open to afford a little ventilation. In the winter months this cannot be done, and some provision will have to be made to protect the health of the pupils.

Yesterday a prominent resident of North Chelmsford said: "That the school committee has not lived up to the times can be seen in the fact that the old-fashioned two-session school day is still in force. In every progressive city and town in the country, in this enlightened age, the one-session school day is prevalent and is a decided improvement over the old system. By giving the pupils their afternoons off they are given more time for study, and in many cases the pupils earn enough to support them after school hours. The present state of affairs is most inconvenient for pupils who live far away from the school as they have to eat their dinners in school and then hang around for an hour and a half until the session resumes. This question has been agitated time and again, but to no avail, and it looks as though the school committee is afraid to adopt the up-to-

The high school graduating class wants to hold a dance, but it is said the school committee is against the idea. The proceeds would go to the school. It seems that the same thing was given a try-out in Chelmsford Centre, but was stopped by the members of the school committee, who disliked the modern dances. If something was wrong at Chelmsford Centre, there is no reason to believe that the same applies to the North Chelmsford pupils. This is the pupils' version of it, and they say that the dance will be held. The schools closed yesterday at 2:45 in order that the teachers might attend the meeting in Chelmsford Centre.

The schools will close next Friday for the Middlesex county school teachers' convention.

On the 16th and 18th of November a stereopticon lecture will be given at the town hall, the proceeds to go to the school. The lecture is given on the west and the views will show this great part of the country as it appeared in the past and as it appears at the present. It is bound to be of great educational benefit and a large attendance is expected.

Congregational Church
The Sunday services at the Congregational church of which Rev. Franklin Reeves is pastor, are very largely attended. The Sunday school attendance has also shown a marked increase. 137 children attending last Sunday. The preceding Sunday the attendance totalled 138. At the regular meeting Kirkby S. Taylor spoke on "The Passover Night in Egypt," his text being, "When I see the blood, I will pass over you."

Tuesday evening's meeting was held at the home of Mrs. D'Herauld on the Dunstable road.

The following officers were elected at the meeting of the Dixie Christian club held Tuesday afternoon: Mrs. George Whit, president; Mrs. Edgar Dixon, vice president; Miss Abbie Love, treasurer; Miss Lizzie Draper, assistant treasurer; Mrs. William Blakeslee, secretary. The membership committee is composed of Mrs. Henry Woods, Mrs. George E. White, and Mrs. Christopher Clausen.

Camp Fire Girls
No head has yet been appointed for the Camp Fire Girls since Miss Kendrick, a former teacher in the high school went to Bristol, B. L., to teach. Meetings are being held regularly and many events have been planned for the enjoyment of the members through the winter months.

Boy Scouts
The Boy Scouts have had a very successful season and are planning for the winter activities. Meetings are being held regularly and the troop now takes a ranking place with other leading troops in the state. Mr. James E. Eber, their organizer, is scoutmaster. Charles D. Le May, assistant scoutmaster and George Davis president.

The work of remodeling the basement of the Plymouth mission hall on the old Tyngsboro road is now going on. The windows have been placed in position and the remaining portion of the work will be completed as quickly as possible.

Miss Mabel Boudreau, is a patient at St. John's hospital suffering from appendicitis.

George Marinel's orchestra is very steadily engaged and will play at all the select dances in the town hall during the winter.

Charles Davis is having a residence erected in Tyngsboro road within a stone's throw of his present home.

Boxing Losing Great Popularity it Once Enjoyed in New York

The gentlemanly art of self defense is slowly but surely losing the great popularity it once enjoyed in New York. Since the creation of the athletic commission the sport, it seems, has suffered on all sides and is now resting on but one leg. If we are to judge by what is said in New York's boxing circles, no one has done the sport more injury than the boxers and the members of the athletic commission under whose supervision the bouts are held in New York clubs.

From the recent actions of the commission, its members have shown very little, if any, knowledge as how to properly conduct the sport. That body has allowed boxers to get away with some awful deals and then, contrary to its rules, has turned right around and allowed that same fighter to perform again. Lovers of good, clean, and gentlemanly sports are now up in arms against this disgraceful behavior of the commission and demand a change. According to the complaints of these sportsmen, the boxing game in New York and by that is meant every city and town where boxing bouts are held, is in a deplorable state.

The boxers in particular are the real cause of the present state of the sport in the Empire state. They have taken advantage of the ignorance of boxing by certain members of the commission and have given the public cer-

THE BAD TOOTH

LIKE THE PAIL OF GARBAGE
ATTRACTS DISEASE GERMS

Keep a pail of garbage just inside your front door and the house will be filled with flies, snails and disease germs. The front door of the human body is the mouth and a bad tooth is like a garbage pail, that is never emptied. It does to the body just what the garbage pail does to the house—fills it with poison.

This is no exaggeration. It is no mere metaphor, but a plain statement of a liberal truth. You don't have to rely on me for it either, though any reputable dentist will verify the assertion. The most eminent physicians and surgeons are proclaiming it at their meetings.

A decayed tooth with its mass of decaying food and matter offers a hotbed of fertile soil in which disease germs of all kinds thrive, multiply and grow strong. They are next swallowed into the stomach or breathed into the lungs where they begin their destructive work which often ends in broken health. In fact there is no disease which human flesh is heir to that may not be caused by decayed teeth.

If you are not just up to the scratch in health, if you are losing that old time buoyancy and feel unfit at times, look the question of good teeth squarely in the face and go to a good dentist.

I am always pleased to give freely, honest advice about mouth conditions. Step in and consult me. Also learn of my superior porcelain dental methods and how every kind of a dental operation is painlessly accomplished with the use of "Nap-a-Minit."

tain treatments that are by no means a credit to them.

For an example, we'll select the treatment received by several hundred boxing enthusiasts from Jack Britton, the Chicago lightweight, in New York last Friday night. The Windy City brawler was matched to exchange blows with Harry Stone at the Empire A. C. of New York. Both boxers appeared at the club. When the time for the two boxers to stage their act came around, the Chicagoan looked over the crowd and about a minute later complained of feeling ill.

He had been in the club house for more than an hour and, according to accounts of the affair, resembled a picture of health. But still he became violently ill just as the starting bell was about to sound on the fight. The club officials argued with the westerner in hopes of changing his mind, but the latter wouldn't listen to them and crawled out of the match, leaving the officials in a very embarrassing position. While the crowd was not as large as it should have been according to a New York writer, it was an unusually large one because of the rain that fell all day.

The club, however, lived up to its agreement and staged a show free of charge. The bouts which were between New York boys, who went in the ring at a moment's notice, proved interesting affairs. But Jack had left the house.

Britton's behavior that night not only showed a lack of sportsmanship, but also that he was not so very anxious to meet Stone, who recently returned from Australia. Britton may be a good fighter and all that, but when he hands out such a raw deal as he did Friday night, he had better remain in Chicago instead of trying to deprive Easterners of their hard-earned greenbacks.

It's now up to the boxing commission of New York to draft rules that will prevent the recurrence of such an incident. The public must be protected and if the commission really does want to do the right thing by the public or those who really give them their bread and butter, it's their duty to draft rules that will prevent boxers guilty of such charges from ever performing in that state again. Perhaps that will teach the supposedly "clever" boxers a lesson or two.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR NO DANDRUFF—25 CENT DANDERINE

Hair Coming Out? If Dry, Thin, Faded, Bring Back Its Color and Lustre

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes, but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

PINS WENT DOWN TEXTILE ELEVEN

Before Bowlers Last Night on All of the Alleys

Donovan's Pete took O'Brien's Wonders into camp last night on Kittredge's alleys when the spunked on the last string and overtook a ten pin lead. P. Monahan was the champion in this match.

The Night and Day Bakers of Friend Brothers rolled a game last night with the boys who take an active part in the game. Nearly a hundred pins repaired the two teams at the conclusion of the match.

Two teams from J. L. Chaffoux's went at each other on the alleys last night. Joe Gagnon's Shoe Dept. team winning over the Gents' furnishings. The boys who sell shoes had a clear title to the victory.

In the Mercantile League Saunders' Market Five rolled it into the gutter from Kregge's by over 50 pins. Vigeant and Daley of the winners did good rolling.

Two matches were rolled off in the Y. M. C. A. league last night. The Sioux beat the Axtens in a very close game and the Cherokees won from the Wannalancets by ten pins. Gilman and Wood performed well. The scores:

Went Through a Hard Scrimmage With Second Team Yesterday

A hard scrimmage was staged in the first and second teams of the Textile school football squad yesterday afternoon with the result that the varsity were forced to acknowledge the supremacy of the second string men. Two touchdowns were scored by the second team while the regulars succeeded in scoring but once.

The squad at the Moody street institution is looking better with each succeeding day. Their defense work has improved remarkably since the opening of the season but the offense is still very ragged.

Hockmeyer, right end and one of the best wing protectors that Textile has had in years, received a bad gash over his right eye yesterday during the scrimmage and was taken to the hospital. Hockmeyer is the third varsity player to join the hospital squad.

"Ham" Barnes was sent in at right tackle yesterday and his work was very pleasing to the coaches. Barnes is heavy, is quick on his feet and above all seems to possess football brains. He will probably be played at this position where a big vacancy was left by the injury to Coleman.

The best news that has been heard this season greeted the squad yesterday when it was announced that O'Brien, varsity fullback, who was hurt in the Groton Academy game, will be in togs Monday. O'Brien's return to the squad will mean a big addition to the team.

Mitchel showed up better yesterday than at any time this season. This player is very fast but heretofore has not utilized his speed in football clothes. If Mitchel continues to show his style of yesterday he will prove a wonderful backfield man.

BOSTON ENGLISH

Will Play Lowell High at Spalding Park Tomorrow Afternoon

The Lowell high football eleven completed its hard work for the week yesterday when they lined up against a team composed of the most part of former high school stars. The alumni game was held in anticipation of a strenuous struggle tomorrow with the English high team of Boston.

The schoolboys put it on to their older opponents yesterday by a single touchdown from which the goal was not kicked. The alumni did not present a full lineup and was completed with members of the school squad.

Tomorrow's game with English high is expected to be one of the hardest contests the locals will play this season. The Boston school is usually recognized as one of the leading eleven among the high schools of the state and although they are not as strong this year as in many seasons past they nevertheless present a husky line and fast backfield.

SOCCER NOTES

The Buntlings will travel to Beverly Saturday to play the strong team of that town and the following will be the line-up for the Buntlings:

Birtwistle, g. Marriot, J. England, r. J. Clegg, l. Kelly, c. Thompson, l. J. Clegg, l. Mitchell, B. Dancy, r. Mahon, r. McDermott, r. Reserves—Molloy and Smith.

FREDDIE WELSH TO MEET MATTY BALDWIN IN BOSTON

New England boxing "fans" will have the first opportunity of witnessing the new lightweight champion of the world, Freddy Welsh, in action at the Atlas A. A. of Boston, next Tuesday night. Welsh is to box Matty Baldwin of Charlestown, 12 rounds. Baldwin is the recognized champion of New England, having defended his title against all comers during the past year, and is just the fellow to make the new champion extend himself to the limit to win the referee's decision.

The match has stirred up more genuine interest than any boxing bout that has ever been staged in New England. When a champion is billed to appear at any club, the promoters naturally look for a big attendance, but when the boxer happens to be champion of the world, the interest is doubled, and there is a rush to the box office for ringside seats. The sale already is greater for this match than for the Langford-Smith match, and a bigger crowd is expected than was in attendance at that show.

The members are displaying keen interest in this match, as they are very anxious to see the boy who sent the American champion, Willie Ritchie, down to defeat. Ritchie was a popular champion in the eyes of the American sporting public, being willing at all times to match up with any boxer entitled to a bout, and for that reason they will pay any price to watch any lightweight whom they think will have a chance to bring the championship back to this country. Matty Baldwin beat Ritchie in a 20-round bout in California, and as the Bunker Hill boy is boxing better now than at any time in his life, the spectators can rest assured of witnessing a contest they will long remember.

The eight-round semi-final between George Robinson of Cambridge and Dan McDonald of Halifax, is a fitting semi-final to the international bout between Baldwin and Welsh. They boxed at this club two weeks ago, putting up the hardest bout seen this season, Robinson winning a close decision.

Jack Donnelly of Providence made Dave Powers of Malden in one of the six-round preliminaries. The other six-round affair is between Tommy Doris and Howard McRae, rival Cambridge featherweight boxers.

FOR A PUBLIC MARKET

Board of Trade Discussed the Question—Trip to Washington on River Project

The matter of establishing a public market in this city was thrashed out in all its details at a meeting of the municipal affairs committee of the Lowell board of trade held last evening in the board rooms in the Central block. Present at the meeting were Representative Dennis A. Murphy, who introduced the bill into the legislature; J. A. Richardson, one of the leading produce dealers in this vicinity and the following members of the municipal affairs committee: Patrick O'Hearn, A. E. O'Brien, Dr. Frank McAvinue, William H. Penn, Milo D. Day, J. A. Gallagher, A. S. Walsh and Secretary John H. Murphy.

After a discussion which lasted over two hours, it was finally decided not to take any definite action on the matter but to have published a series of articles explaining the benefits and disadvantages of a market, so that the voters of Lowell will be more enlightened relative to the question when it is put before them at the coming election. George W. Trull of Tewksbury was to have been present and talk on the subject but he was unavoidably delayed and obliged to cancel his engagement.

Rep. Dennis A. Murphy was the principal speaker and explained why he introduced the bill by saying he believed there is a certain demand for a public market in Lowell and wished the voters to have an opportunity to use their own judgment. Rep. Murphy outlined in detail the success of public markets in other cities of the Commonwealth and felt that the city of Lowell could support one providing it was conducted in the proper way. The representative also told of the difficulties that would have to be overcome before the market could be operated on a basis that would not mean a loss to the city.

The matter of a 30 days' trial did not seem to meet with the favor of the speaker or the other members present, it being their opinion that if one were opened it would have to be given a thorough tryout in a central location.

Whether a public market located in the downtown district of the city would be of any benefit to the residents of the Highlands, Pawtucketville, Belvidere or Centralville, was also discussed and a number of the committee joined together in the opinion that more than one market should be conducted if any such problem is undertaken in any way. However, the committee agreed that the local board of trade should not bind itself either way and hence the articles to follow in the daily papers will be awaited with interest.

Membership Committee

The recently appointed membership committee of the Lowell board of trade will hold its first meeting in the board rooms Monday evening at 6:30 o'clock. At that time a membership campaign of some sort will be planned for the purpose of boosting the board of trade. Although it is not known what action the committee will take, it is stated that the old spirit will be revived during the coming months.

The members of the new committee are as follows: Will Rounds, A. S. Goldman, Henri Aohin, Jr., Robert F. Gorden, Henry Reynolds, Arthur H. Stickney, Jesse D. Crook, Joseph A. Smith, Arthur L. Eno, Andrew McCarthy, Dr. Joseph A. Menhan, William Scott, Harry Dunlap, Charles E. Cooke, Thomas L. Dickey, Thomas J. Goyette, Frederick F. Hayward, Haven G. Hill, Robert Kennedy, Charles T. Kilpatrick, William C. Purcell, William B. Whitel, William Lamson and John A. Murphy.

The executive committee will meet Monday at 12 o'clock.

Trip to Washington

Next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the secretaries of the Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill and Newburyport boards of trade will assemble in the rooms of the Lawrence board in the Ray State building for the purpose of

For several weeks past the boards of trade and chambers of commerce in the four cities along the Merrimack valley have been planning considerable enthusiasm into this trip to Washington and it is expected that a large delegation will make the journey for the purpose of boosting the Merrimack river project. At the meeting Tuesday all details will be discussed. The hearing in Washington is dated for Dec. 10.

WARM FOR AN OCT. 22

TEMPERATURE FOR THE DATE THE HIGHEST IN 14 YEARS—FAIR TODAY AND TOMORROW

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Yesterday was the warmest October 23 in 14 years, with a maximum temperature of 71 at 1 o'clock. The record for warmth on an Oct. 22 was in 1900, when the thermometer registered 77. But for a strong wind from the northwest yesterday afternoon the 1900 record would easily have been reached and passed. Clear weather is prevailing over the country except in the Rocky mountain district, where local showers are falling. It is unseasonably warm in the middle west, while the Great Lakes region and Western Canada are having a touch of cold weather. The forecast is fair today and tomorrow, with moderate northeast to north winds.

WILL SELL TOWN FARM CLOSING OUT SALE

Conducting a Large Farm for the Benefit of Two Paupers Not a Paying Investment

The story published in The Sun last week to the effect that a number of citizens were advocating the sale of the Tewksbury town farm is the topic of discussion among the voters of the neighboring town and several influential residents of the district informed a reporter for The Sun yesterday that the matter of disposing of this valuable piece of property will surely be brought to the attention of the voters at the coming town meeting. The story was published exclusively in The Sun and a few days later it was picked up by Boston papers.

A large farm is being conducted for the benefit of only two paupers and some of the citizens claim the farm is not self-supporting and should be sold. George W. Trull, a prominent citizen, who has served the town three years as overseer of the poor, in conversation with the writer yesterday said he has been advocating the sale of the farm for the past 30 years. He said the disposal of this valuable piece of property is a business proposition for the town and the transaction should be made at once. He said the interest on the money received would be sufficient to support the paupers and the taxes on the property would be clear money for the general treasury. Mr. Trull feels that a small building could be purchased in the Centre with a small garden and a matron be placed in care of the place. He said there is no fear of having a large number of paupers on hand and inasmuch as the surrounding towns have disposed of their farms he sees no reason why Tewksbury should not follow suit.

Mr. Trull has another plan and that would be for all the towns surrounding Lowell to combine and conduct but one place for all paupers. He believes this would be a cheaper proposition and in this manner the welfare of the poor people could be looked after properly. Mr. Trull believes the superintendent of the farm and his wife are very efficient and they economize as much as possible, but nevertheless the farm is a burden to the town and should be disposed of.

Frank A. Haines, another prominent citizen of West Tewksbury, also favors the sale of the property. He said the farm is not self-supporting for each year the town appropriates several hundred dollars for the upkeep of the place. He said the farm is running the town in debt and the quicker the sale is made the better for all concerned.

Twentieth Century Club

The first meeting of the season of the Twentieth Century club will be held this evening in the vestry hall of the Congregational church. The affair will consist of an organ recital from 6:30 to 7 o'clock by Miss Theresa Small, a supper at 7 o'clock followed by an illustrated lecture on "Jamaica," the speaker to be Hon. Herbert Fletcher of Westford. Miss Wardell of this city will render vocal selections. It is expected a large number of members will be on hand. The committee in charge of the meeting consists of the following: Mrs. H. M. Billings, chairman; John Henderson, Mrs. Melvin Rogers, Mrs. William Parley, Mrs. H. M. Larrabee, Miss Ethel Fairgrieve, Miss Amy Tingley, Mrs. William H. Lee and Miss Edith Forestall.

State Infirmary

The number of inmates at the state infirmary in Tewksbury Centre is 233, the largest on record, according to Dr. Pierce, assistant superintendent. Last summer there were more inmates at the institution than in any other summer in the history of the infirmary and the drop in the early fall was hardly noticeable.

It is reported that about a dozen men employed as day men at the infirmary, this including carpenters and other craftsmen will be laid off in a short time on account of lack of money. When the appropriations for the year were voted the usual sum for repairs was omitted and the men are now working on the old appropriation and when this runs out, unless a special appropriation is voted, the men will be discharged. These employees are all residents of the town.

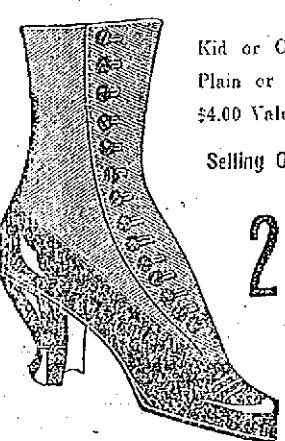

This evening graduating exercises will be held in the assembly hall of the infirmary, when 12 young women will graduate as nurses. The exercises will be attended by the parents and close friends of the graduates and in the course of the evening, the superintendent of the institution, Dr. John H. Nichols will deliver a lecture on the work of nurses. An entertainment will be provided and dancing will be enjoyed.

The young women who are to graduate and their residences are as follows: Miss Ella M. Jacques, Ballardvale; Miss E. M. Sargent, Medford; Miss J. J. Chisholm, Providence, R. I.; Miss E. J. Williams, Tewksbury; Miss B. M. McPhee, Providence, R. I.; Miss R. C. Wilson, North Wilmington; Miss H. C.

School Work

On account of an overflow at the Shawshien school a second room was opened recently and the total number of pupils at this school is now 31, forty-five in the first room and 36 in the other. Miss Mildred Murray of Woburn has been placed in care of the second room and the state is sending its supervisor to the school. The school is not strictly a state training school for the Normal school is not sending pupils there, but nevertheless the state is doing as much for the Shawshien school as for any other school of its kind. Miss Rebecca Cameron who had charge of grade five at the Foster school has resigned and her place is being filled by Miss Gladys Arnold, who is now in charge of grades four and five. Miss Elizabeth Flynn, who was assistant last year is now at the head of grades two and three.

The teachers of the school are preparing a Halloween party for the pupils and parents, the proceeds of the affair to be devoted to the school fund. Through the courtesy of the vocational school of Lowell two saws for the benefit of the children have been placed in the field adjoining the Foster school.

Middlesex North

George W. Trull of Tewksbury, president of the Middlesex North Agricultural society, announced yesterday that a mid-winter meeting of the society will be held in Lowell in order to promote new interest in the organization. The affair will consist of a dinner and the arrangements are in the care of the president, treasurer and secretary.

Howard Foster, Edwin Perham and Mr. Holder have been appointed a committee to look into the feasibility of organizing a poultry show to be held in Lowell in connection with a farmers' institute sometime in the near future. Instead of giving cash prizes the society will award ribbons and it is believed great interest will prevail among the members of the society.

Fire Department

The committee in charge of the fire department of the town, Selectman Harry Shedd, chairman, will hold a meeting on the first Friday of next month at which time the department will be reorganized and engineers appointed. Yesterday the men were given orders to house their apparatus for the winter and five changes were distributed for each chemical apparatus.

State Election

The warrants for the state election to be held on Nov. 3 are now in the hands of the printer and it is believed they will be posted Saturday. The polls on election day will open at 6 a. m. and will close at 4 p. m. The election of Burton H. Crosby as representative for the 19th district is assured, according to voters of Tewksbury, who claim the whole town will turn out strong for the Lowell man, for Mr. Crosby is from ward nine of Lowell.

Personals

Mrs. Angie Kiernan and family will move from the residence of George Brown on Main street to the new house of William T. Lewis, opposite the Foster school.

Miss Fannie Munroe is entertaining her sister, Mrs. Nicholson of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Edwin Rust, bookkeeper at the Avery Chemical Co. will soon remove to the Oaklands in Lowell.

ABOUT DEGA'S BLINDNESS

A writer in Gil Blas, Paris, who signs his article Andre Mycho, gives some startling statements with regard to the alleged blindness of the painter Degas. He says:

"When I was still quite a little boy, my father, the well known painter, engraver, Marcelin Desboutin, often took me with him to the Cafe Guerbois, where a group of artists and writers used to meet every evening. Manet, Renoir, Do Nittis, Caillebotte, C. Dussarro, Zola, Armand Silvestre, Duranty and others whose names I have forgotten. All of these spoiled the little boy I was then. I used to climb on their knees and explore their pockets, where I often found little toys and sweets hidden away to surprise me. Manet would puff his cigar smoke into my face to make me sneeze and then make me forget his teasing by drawing figures for me with the blackened ends of used matches on the marble topped tables. So I loved all those who frequented the Cafe Guerbois, all but one. One alone froze me when his fever appeared in the doorway. That one was Degas. Never did it come into my mind to climb on his knees! Not he inspired me with far too much fear with his severe look and his eyes completely masked by spectacles of black glass with a sort of network, also black, around them.

"For even at that distant time (in the '70s) Degas had already almost lost his sight! His friends used to ask him every evening about the progress of his trouble and he would reply, 'It is not very brilliant.' But his defective eyesight has not prevented that admirable artist from painting most of his masterpieces since that time, including 'Dancers at the Bar'.

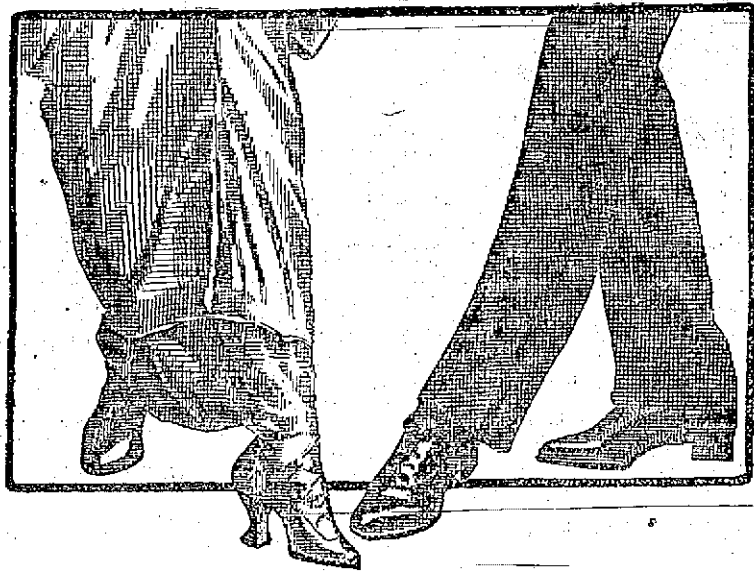

"In short, the blindness of Degas is one of the most mysterious of historical phenomena. Remembering the proverb 'there is none so blind as him who will not see,' some maintain that Degas in his blisinthropic spirit, plays at being blind so as not to be compelled to recognize people in the street. The fact is that when some paint the honor of being introduced to you.' "Alas!" interrupted Degas, "how can I recognize you? I can see nothing, nothing!"

"The conversation continued some minutes, thanks to the lady's pertinacity, when suddenly the artist exclaimed: 'But what a stupid mania you have, madam, to wear such long hat-plins!'

The same writer asserts that Degas at the present moment—could easily realize $200,000 or $250,000 by selling his paintings.

BRITISH WARSHIPS KILL MANY GERMANS ON COAST

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The British monitors off the Belgian coast did great execution against the German trenches, among those killed being General Von Trip and his staff. While the allies' airmen cleverly directed the aim of the marine guns the German submarine lying in wait attacked the monitors but without result because the latter were so far in shore. Here again the critics remark that the attempt of the Germans to turn the allies' left and reach the French coast has been defeated and the Germans again have been forced to resort to frontal attacks.

The gains made by the allies on the road to Metz, it is thought, must draw the attention of the Germans seriously to a quarter where they are menaced, not only from the direction of Verdun but by the renewed successes of the French on the eastern slope of the Vosges.

The news from Bordeaux today indicates that parliament is not to be called to meet there but in Paris. The employes of both the chamber and the senate have been notified that they may return to Paris at the end of this month, which is taken as a sign of confidence in official circles and is making a good impression.

The French continue their preparations with prospective recruits to fill the gaps in the army. Baron Pichon, president of the French Olympic games committee, it has been announced, has been charged by the government to care for the physical training of young men from 15 to 19 with a view to their entry into the service.

The military authorities are more and more watchful of stragglers. Every man arriving at the Paris terminals of age to bear arms is required to show papers on arrival and if these are not in order arrests are made. Some of the soldiers, not in the habit of being felled as have been the men returning to the front, succumbed to temptation and over-stayed their permission. These stragglers, including French and German soldiers, were even soldiers in uniform are required to produce a permit or failing in this they are ordered to fall in by the patrols.

Terrible Artillery Duel

The Germans are hurrying forward fresh troops and heavy guns, the latter to make reply to the damaging fire of the ships and although they have been pushed back at certain points they appear to be holding their line between the sea and La Bassée without, however, making noteworthy progress. The fight, so far as Belgium is concerned, has now reached itself into a terrible artillery duel in which it is claimed that the allies by reason of their long range guns have been having the advantage. The muddy roads and the canal doubtless have hindered the invaders in getting their guns of equal or greater range into position.

VALUE OF HYOMEI

It's the Safe Catarrh Remedy—Nothing Better for Head Colds or Bronchitis.

Do not endanger your health by taking strong drugs into the stomach in the hope of curing catarrh, coughs, asthma and head colds. At the best they usually do little more than upset the digestive organs.

Use Hyomei, which is nature's own remedy for all such diseases. It is a combination of healing oils, gums and balsams which when breathed through the Hyomei Inhaler saturates the air you breathe with its curative and health-giving medication. It clears stuffed up head like magic. Hyomei quickly goes to all sore and inflamed tissues lining the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Its antiseptic healing keeps at once—dull headaches, distressing coughing, constant sneezing, and undrain discharges of the nose early ceased.

Hyomei is not only the most pleasant, but the most natural treatment, and very inexpensive. Be sure to get the complete outfit that contains inhaler and bottle of liquid. All druggists sell Hyomei and are authorized by Booth's Hyomei Co. of Buffalo to refund the money if you are not benefited—your trial is no trial. Sure—try it today—you have nothing to lose on this generous offer.

when they do accomplish this the situation will be even more acute. Up to the present time the British naval losses have been negligible, although 101 ships must have suffered heavily on land.

Report on Moltke Killed

Albert, king of the Belgians, who since his retirement from office has been residing at various points in northern France, appears to be actually at the scene of fighting. This information is on the authority of the British admiralty. Despatches say that the queen also is with the Belgian army, but this must be classed as a rumor, much the same as the reports that General Von Moltke, chief of the German general staff, is seriously ill.

That the German line south of Ostend has been cut and that a retreat must be set in figures among a number of other unconfirmed news reports this morning. On the other hand, a correspondent of the Times points out that the Germans have not left Bruges and that they are still in great force in the neighborhood of Ostend. What withdrawal of troops there has been toward Bruges, the correspondent says, is only a precautionary measure.

Alleged Atrocities
A message from Havre says the Belgians have regained the right bank of the river or if preferred the canal Yser and this is the first known that they were forced to give there during the recent fighting. All official statements given out by the allies have insisted that they were valiantly resisting the German assaults. The use of the word "regained," however, would seem to indicate that the Germans at times have made advances. The dikes of this waterway have now been cut, making the situation for the Germans more difficult.

The German press is branding the round-up of allies enemies in the British Isles as fanatical persecution and in late despatches from Berlin there have appeared allegations concerning atrocities committed by French soldiers although later despatches direct none of these has been substantiated.

Firing Point Along Vistula

The reported German defeat before Warsaw still dominates the news from the eastern field and again today there came what is known as a time-war report, that the Russians have taken Przemysl. A despatch to the Central News from Petrograd says this is persistently reported but not confirmed. In the reported German rout at Warsaw, the British press professes to see the turning point along the Vistula. While the Germans apparently are holding their positions along the river Pilna and San Donir, it is claimed that the line is nearing for Russia to carry the war into Germany.

BRITISH WARSHIPS CAUSE GREAT LOSS ALONG COAST—KILL GEN. VON TRIP

British warships are causing great loss to German army along Belgian coast, and kills Gen. Von Trip. French declare German attacks failed along the whole line. Neither side has been able to force a passage of the Yser river in Belgium.

Germans claim they put a British torpedo boat out of action and that English lost machine guns near Lille. French push back invaders in Argentine region and north of Verdun. German war office says Germans are pursuing Russians toward Osovetz.

QUANTITY OF BLANKETS FOR GERMAN ARMY SEIZED AT CERBERE

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Madrid to the Exchange Telegraph Co. under Thursday's date reports that a Barcelona message states that the French customs officers at Cerbere, near the southeastern boundary between France and Spain, seized as contraband a quantity of blankets which were made in Catalonia and were addressed to Swiss factories but which, it is believed, were destined for the German army.

The Spanish government, the despatch also states, has prohibited the export of horses and mules, which had been started on a large scale.

GOVERNOR OF BERLIN HAS ISSUED A PROCLAMATION TO THE BELGIANS

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—(via The Hague and London).—Field Marshal Von der Goltz, military governor of Berlin, has issued a proclamation to the Belgians, declaring that the Belgian government's orders summoning three military classes to the colors is without validity. The relatives of those who obeyed and left their homes, are, therefore, made responsible.

The war session of the Prussian diet Thursday saw many numbers present who had returned from the battlefields. They wore their uniforms at the meeting and many were adorned with iron crosses, some of 1870 and other of 1914.

Nothing special was announced as coming from the battlefields up to an early hour today.

GERMANS LEAVING ANTWERP AND GREAT PORTS ARE NOW WITHOUT GUARDS

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A Star despatch from Rotterdam says: The movement of German troops westward from Antwerp has left only a few hundred men in the town. The last batch left yesterday morning and most of the great ports are now without guards. The German wounded from the front are being quarantined at the Zoo.

A traveler who has just left the city says that Germans restored the Belgian flag to the town hall and the Germans did not bother to take it down.

The whole Belgian coast is now deserted by the population, the military being in sole possession. At Ostend over a hundred Belgian locomotives had been collected.

The correspondent hazards the guess that they are for use in a retreat.

MRS. CARMAN DENIES SHOOTING MRS. BAILEY

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman took the witness stand in her own defense late yesterday and entered a sweeping denial of the charge that she murdered Mrs. Louise Bailey, on which she is being tried in the supreme court here.

From her room, she went over the story of Celia Coleman, the South Carolina negro, in her employ at the time of the tragedy in the Carman home in Freeport last June, and declared false every accusation made against her by the colored domestic in her testimony of the day before.

A fabrication from beginning to end was in the essence her characterization of the maid's narrative of the events of the night Mrs. Bailey was shot and killed in the office of Dr. Bawla Carman, husband of the defendant, and of subsequent happenings in the Carman home.

George Levy, Mrs. Carman's junior counsel, brought out first that she had been married to Carman in 1892 and had ever since resided in Freeport.

Q. Do you recall the day of June 29 last, Mrs. Carman? A. Yes, Mr. Levy. Q. What did you do that day? A. Early in the morning I went to the city, with my mother and Elizabeth, my daughter, and shopped. We returned to Freeport in the early evening. We went directly home from the city. I went upstairs, took off the dress I had worn, washed up a little bit and then came down to dinner.

Mrs. Carman explained that at the dinner table, besides her, were the doctor, her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Platt Conklin; her daughter, Elizabeth; her sister, Mrs. Ida Powell, and the latter's married daughter, Mrs. Helen Corby.

Asked to Speak Louder
Her voice was but little more than a whisper. Justice Kirby asked: "Can the jurors hear?" They shook their heads negatively. Mr. Levy asked her to speak a little louder. She pulled her chair forward and leaned her arms upon the top of the paneling.

After a short resting up it and her head slightly elevated, with the fingers extended, she did raise her voice for a brief time, but let it fall again, and then some iron workers building an extension to the coal house began to test beams around outside and it was extremely difficult to hear what she said.

Q. Did you leave the dining-room during the meal? A. Once, to go to the other door. Q. Was any one there? A. Yes. Just inside the office a strange man was sitting. He drew back his feet to let me pass. Two ladies were in the reception room, too.

Q. Did you recognize any of these persons? A. No, they were strangers. Q. How were you feeling that night? A. Perfectly. I had told them in the city I was going right to bed after dinner.

Q. What did you do after dinner? A. I had a bad headache, and so I went right to my room. Q. What did you do there, A. I put away the clothes I had been wearing, opened the bed and got into it.

Q. Was there any sound about the house? A. Yes, I heard Elizabeth practicing on the piano and told her to stop. Q. Only because of your headache? A. Yes; that was all.

The contention of the state is that Mrs. Carman had her little daughter cease playing because the sound of the music interfered with her perfect hearing over the telegraph.

Q. What happened next? A. I heard this (there was just an instant's hesitation)—this noise downstairs. Q. What did you hear next? A. I heard my mother and sister pass my room and run downstairs.

After Hearing "Noise"
Q. What did you do? A. I went to my chamber door and searched for a key, which I put on. Then I found a pair of slippers and put them on. Then I went downstairs to the doctor's waiting room.

Q. What did you do there? A. I stood beside the mantel until I heard the doctor's voice speaking. Then I went right upstairs again.

Q. Did you see into the inner office and observe what was there? A. No. Q. Why not? A. Besides having a door, the doctor's office has also a heavy curtain extending from the top of the door to the floor and the width of the door frame. I could not see because of this.

There was more banging about of iron girders outside the court house and the justice ordered an attendant to see that it stopped as the jury could not hear a word uttered by the witnesses.

Q. Did any one go up stairs with you? A. Yes, I saw Elizabeth downstairs and took her up to my room.

with me. Then in a little while my sister, Mrs. Powell, came up and I asked her if she knew what it was (meaning the commotion). She said: "Somebody has been shot in the doctor's office—a woman." She said she didn't know who the woman was and neither did the doctor.

Q. Was Elizabeth there when Mrs. Powell gave you that reply? A. I don't remember. She may have gone away. Q. Who else came upstairs after that? A. Mrs. Corby, my niece, came.

My sister telephoned for father and he arrived. Then mother came up. Mr. Levy then asked a few questions which will be greatly elaborated upon by Miss Abby Smith when he cross-examines Mrs. Carman today.

Q. Did you at any time after supper that evening leave the premises; that is, leave the house itself? A. No, sir; I did not.

Stopped Mrs. Variance

Q. Did you have any reason for not going into the office after the shot was fired? A. I had several reasons. When the doctor and I had this time about Mrs. Variance (twice Mrs. Carman caught the nurse kissing her husband and entered the office and slapped both he was very angry. He said I must keep out of his office; that I would interfere his practice and that I must never go in there again.

She continued: "One night a man was brought into the office who had been shot and was badly injured. After the doctor treated his wounds he started to go out, but fainted and knocked over an instrument case as he fell. There was a great noise and he lay there for a while in a state of excitement, but I did not go into the office even then."

At this point in her testimony she was speaking clearly and seemed to be entirely unswayed. She kept her eyes steadily toward the jury. She was asked next to describe completely the Variance episode.

"Mrs. Variance is a nurse," she explained, "who has done work for the doctor. Sometimes in her hours off, she would come around and talk to him. I told him, about this, that if he had time to spare when he wasn't doing anything he might better spend it with his family than in talking to her and he agreed with me. But he told me, that afternoon, she would be around in the evening to get some medicine."

"I saw her that evening in the waiting room (this was last spring) about 7.30. I went upstairs to put Elizabeth to bed."

EVASION INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTOR AND DUCK INCOME TAX—$55,500 RETURNS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Unless the experts who figured out the "taxable" when congress was working on the income tax law were far at sea in their calculations, there are more than 140,000 taxpayers who have evaded the internal revenue collector and failed to pay their share of the toll.

According to figures made public last night by the secretary of the treasury, 23,535 returns were made under the law last year, during the fiscal year just ended. The estimates on which congress did much of its work on the act gave a total of 425,000 taxable incomes. These estimates did not include incomes between $3000 and $4000. According to last night's statement, 14,235 returns were made on incomes between these limits, so that the total discrepancy between the estimates and the incomes is 146,825.

Not a single class of incomes lived up to the hopes of the estimators. In the $5000 to $10,000 class, however, the discrepancy was greatest, the estimates being 175,000 and the returns 101,715. Incomes from $1000 to $5000 were only found to number 114,344, while the estimate was 125,000.

The announcement showed that 41 returns were made on incomes over $10,000, 11 on incomes between $500,000 and $1,000,000, 223 on incomes between $250,000 and $500,000 and 1241 on incomes between $100,000 and $250,000. In no instance were these figures near the estimates which put the $1,000,000 incomes at 106, the next at 500, the next at 500 and the $100,000 to $250,000 at 2300.

The lack of incomes between $10,000 and $15,000 and between $15,000 and $20,000 was shown by the fact that there were only 26,815 returns of the first class with estimates of 53,000, and 13,971 of the latter with estimates of 24,500. Incomes between $20,000 and $25,000 were not far wrong in the estimates, only about 1000 less than anticipated. These between $25,000 and $30,000 actually returned were 31,111, while the estimate was 21,000. The remaining incomes, those between $30,000 and $40,000 were found to be 3616 while the estimate was 5300.

There were 6632 married women who made separate returns. The total of married persons making returns was 27,837. The single men numbered 56,212 and the single women 25,551.

PHEASANT AGAIN

Vice President of Fish and Game Association Acts

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—The first definite step to stop the slaughter of pheasants in Massachusetts was taken yesterday when Frank Murphy, vice president of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Association, filed at the state house for the consideration of the next legislature an act authorizing the governor to proclaim a close season on pheasants.

World Wide Out Pheasants
In filing his bill Mr. Murphy said: "There are 65,000 hunters in Massachusetts. If they were allowed only one pheasant apiece, instead of six, they would practically drive the bird out of Massachusetts."

"While it is quite true that they may not all get one bird each, the chances are that the average would easily be one bird for each individual. This does not take into consideration that the birds are left wounded in the bushes."

"The bill that I have filed provides for an emergency case, and gives the governor the right to step in and prevent unnecessary slaughter, such as is now going on among the half tame pheasants that will feed from a hunter's hand."

FEWER PRISONERS IN JAIL

HERE'S QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Rheumalsts Rout Constipation

Constipation doesn't linger when Rheumalsts takes action. This medicated blend of absolutely pure carbonated lithia drink is the safest, most pleasant and quickest laxative known.

Undigested, fermenting, putrifying foods which cause constipation, headaches and biliousness yield quickly to Rheumalsts.

Rheumalsts dissolved in water makes a delicious carbonated drink that cleans out the stomach and intestines, eliminates toxins and poisons, and leaves the intestinal canal clean and sweet.

If you are bothered with indigestion, biliousness, neuralgia or rheumatism, then take Rheumalsts instead of drug-forming, heart-depressing cathartic pills and "laxative" tablets.

Rheumalsts acts quickly and gently on the bowels, liver and kidneys, without griping or nausea. Can be used for infants as well as adults. It is a uric acid solvent as well as a saline laxative.

Ask your druggist for about five ounces of Rheumalsts. Take two teaspoonfuls in a glass of water before breakfast each morning.

Rheumalsts is not expensive and it is prepared by the famous Rheumalst Company, Minneapolis, Minn.

have laid out considerable labor in your declining years.

General Butler—Yes, sir; I am afraid more than I can do. But, as Gen. Jackson put it, when explaining how he was able after he had received in his arm the bullet of Colonel Dickenson in their duel coolly to raise that arm to kill his adversary, "I believe I had will enough left to have killed him if he had shot me through the heart."

And so I think I shall have will enough to sustain me until I have done justice to my friends and enemies, and especially the latter. With an accidental exception, I believe I have in my possession a copy of every important letter written by me and to me since 1861, and a knowledge of topics that it will not take a great deal of research to verify.

How Old is Joe Donahue?

The Sun of a quarter of a century ago had the following:

"Lester" Dan Donahue was made the proud possessor of a 10-pound boy Sunday night. This is the henceness of that broad smile that the attorney is now wearing."

And they called him Joseph, and if he didn't wax fat he waxed tall and became possessed of a great deal of money. Dan Donahue was a member of the grand jury of the first base breakers. Being a chip of the old block, Joe went in for the law like his father, but while Daniel helps to get them out of trouble, Joseph is helping to put them in, as a member of the district attorney's force. Don't get them mixed, for Joe Donahue, the real estate man is 25, and then some.

Billerica Has Changed

Says the old Sun:

"Within the past week a man giving the name of William Howe has been purchasing apples from the farmers in Billerica, giving in exchange checks on the Blackstone bank of Boston. One of the farmers went to Boston and found that the checks were worthless. It is said that the checks were worthless checks in Bedford, Mass."

That simple little bygone scheme might have gone in Billerica quarter of a century ago but in this enlightened day it takes a charge of dynamite to separate Billerica from anything in the line of money.

Two Active Workers

Says the old Sun:

"During September, Bernard Burns, a young man, to join the Matthews Temperance Institute and William F. Thornton induced 71. Monday night the institute voted to present these young men with handsome testimonials."

Trust Commissioner Thornton, for such is his present title, is still an active member of the Matthews though in recent years he has extended his activity and hard work to Lowell council, Knights of Columbus, of which he is a past grand knight and at present a district deputy. While grand knight of Lowell council, Mr. Thornton had the pleasure of seeing a large increase in the membership of the council, due in a great measure to his enthusiasm and energy.

Was Probably Dyspeptic

Just why the following editorial appeared in the old Sun is somewhat of a mystery unless the editor had dyspepsia and was jealous for he says:

"The editor of the Times is out in a noble defense of the great American people. We read his manly words and our admiration for the plea was intensified. Brer Bayles of the Citizen is a pie sharp. He can make all kinds of pie and he never hesitates to place under his vest large pieces of his own product. Brer Bayles is a great connoisseur and when starting off for a long trip he always carries a large batch of pies for ballast. At the peak he flies a pennant cut after the shape of a quarter of a pie."

Anniversary at Belvidere Church

On next Sunday the anniversary of the relics of St. Verocunda, a feast specially observed in the Immaculate Conception church, will take place. For many years a diminutive relic of the martyred saint has been preserved in the church, and annually special services have been held. The event of a quarter of a century ago was reported in the old Sun as follows:

"The anniversary of the translation of the relics of St. Verocunda was observed at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Sunday. The altars were very beautifully adorned, red, the martyr's color, predominating the floral decorations. The relics, enclosed in a life-like figure, were placed before St. Joseph's altar, where they were venerated throughout the day by hundreds from all parts of the city. At the solemn mass in the morning, Very Rev. James McGath, O. M. I., officiated, assisted by Frs. Joyce and Lancelotti of the same order. Fr. Joyce was the preacher. At vespers the church was crowded to the doors, and the occasion was one of those brilliant ceremonies for which the church is noted. There was a sermon by Rev. Fr. Dacey, O. M. I., who dwelt upon the great essential of the Christian, courage, showing that it was courage that animated the martyrs like Verocunda. He exhorted his hearers in very earnest speech to show courage in their lives, and by living as good Christians to serve as evangelists, all the time advancing, with Christ as the leader and under the banner of the cross, to the celestial reward. There was a procession of the relics, borne by Frs. Burns, Lagier, Malony and Gagnon, O.

Sheriff Eveleth Explains How the New Drunk Law Operates to Reduce the Number—Bill of Fare at Local Jail Not Bad

A noted decrease in the number of prisoners confined at the Lowell jail is being noticed and Sheriff Eveleth in conversation with a Sun reporter stated he has hopes of closing the institution before a great length of time. At the present time the list of prisoners at the local institution includes the names of 69 men and seven women, which is a big reduction from last year's list.

Of course the small number of prisoners at the Lowell jail does not mean that Lowell is now spotless or that no crime is being committed in the good Spindle City. The police court docket is as large every morning as it ever was, but the judge of the police court was given more leeway two years ago by the enacting of a bill at the legislature by which the judge of the police court has the privilege of placing a third offender for drunkenness on probation and many of the justices take advantage of this privilege to reform drunkards.

Formerly a third offender was given a direct jail sentence, but now he is fined and given a certain length of time in which to pay his fine, during which time he is placed in the care of the probation officer and, accordingly, most of the third offenders are given this chance to reform, and this accounts for the decrease in the number of prisoners who are being kept and fed at the expense of the county.

Two years ago when the bill was enacted the average number of prisoners at the jail was 123. Last year the average dropped to 99 and this year another decrease is being noted.

The crops at the jail are fairly good and the men are now kept busy storing the vegetables which are plentiful. There are 2½ acres of good lettuce land in cultivation around the buildings and of this an acre and a half are covered with light vegetables, including cabbage, turnips, beets, parsnips, etc., and the crop is large enough to last until next fall. As soon as the farm work is finished the men will have nothing to do, for the industrial department which has been successfully conducted at the jail has been dropped. This consisted of a waste sorting department, but there has been nothing doing in this particular line since last January. Formerly the waste was purchased by the jail officials from an outside party. It was brought to the jail where it was sorted by the prisoners and then sold over to the same party, but this party went out of business last January and the jail officials have been unable to find another concern that would do business in the same way. This department kept 22 men busy all the time. The women, however, are kept busy mending and sewing for the prisoners.

There is a certain impression among a lot of people that prisoners at the Lowell jail and other similar institutions are being fed on bread and water but such is not the case, and if one will examine the bill of fare published below he will see that the menu is as good as that served in many of the homes of Lowell. Recently the prison commissioners asked the sheriff to supply them with a copy of the bill of fare served at the jail and the following menu was given.

I hope I shall speak plainly, for I am accustomed to do that, and I hope I shall be spared to do that, and I hope I shall add to the knowledge of the country, wherever I may be, by my pen, that shall inspire loyalty to our country, love to its people, and terror to future sectional treason forever. I may have laid out more than I can accomplish, but I have tried to guard against that as well as I can. A QUARTER CENTURY AGO

One of the most widely read books of its day was that which General Benjamin F. Butler published towards the close of his life, dealing with his interesting and decidedly active career. At the time of its publication there was a grand rush for copies as the entire country was interested to read what the doughty general had to say of himself and of others who had assisted his public life. Now it was that General Butler came to write his memoirs is explained by himself in the following interview that appeared in the Sun of a quarter of a century ago:

Butler interviewed

General Butler—"For a number of years I have been advised by friends nearest and dearest, in whose ability and judgment in everything else I place the utmost confidence, that, if for no other reason, it is due to myself and to my children that I should give as full an account as needful of the incidents of my actions in the forum, the field, and in politics, so that the exact facts may be known in the future to my memory, and to my right by an impartial statement of the true facts and incidents of their

TICK QUARANTINE

Lauderdale County, Miss. and Texas Parish, La., have been released from quarantine for Texas fever tick, as part of nearly 5,000 square miles of southern territory which has been freed from this pest. It seems that both of these counties made unusual progress in getting rid of the tick and so putting themselves in a position where their cattle could be shipped to market without quarantine restrictions, and also where they can safely import northern cattle for breeding or dairy purposes.

Lauderdale county began tick eradication in earnest on April 1, 1914, and through the active cooperation of the local and federal authorities have succeeded in ridding the county of this costly and dangerous pest in five months.

In Texas Parish the police jury appropriated $5,000 for tick eradication work in January, 1914. The building of cattle-dipping vats was commenced in February, and early in April active dipping of cattle was inaugurated. Federal, state, and county authorities cooperated harmoniously, so that Texas Parish also joined the white area this fall.

The success of these two quick, intensive campaigns has stimulated cattle owners in other counties to consider similar plans in their own neighborhoods, and it is believed that the coming year will see unusual activity in these two states in extending the territory that is free from the expensive and troublesome quarantine restrictions.

To help those who are individually interested in dipping cattle to eradicate the tick, the department has prepared special bulletins on the dipping of cattle and the preparation of arsenical dips, which will be sent free to all who apply for Farmers' Bulletin Nos. 493 and 603.

TRADE EXTENSION TIME

Many problems relating to the war in Europe and its effects upon American business were discussed last Wednesday at the annual meeting of the state board of trade, held in Boston. Though the questions involved were discussed from many angles and though the adverse influences were by no means minimized, the consensus of opinion seemed to be that America is on the eve of a great extension in trade, to benefit by which, however, our manufacturers and business heads must take the initiative and "go after it."

An unusually optimistic note, blended with salutary warnings, was sounded by Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, chief of the U. S. bureau of foreign and domestic commerce who at the outset declared that the war has brought opportunities such as we never had before. According to his view we have the entire field in South America, in China and in Australasia to ourselves, practically. "We should remember, too," he said, "that there are other markets than South America. The exporter looks with keen appreciation at the 60,000,000 in South America, but is apt to overlook the 300,000,000 prospective buyers in China." Those who kept in touch with government attempts to extend trade previous to the war will remember that the Orient was regarded as the field of greatest promise.

Frederick L. Roberts, Boston manager of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, called attention to a branch of his department which should be of peculiar interest to the manufacturers of Lowell. He wants all commercial organizations, boards of trade and business men who are interested in foreign trade to take advantage of a new branch office, recently opened in the Oliver building, both in securing publications on foreign trade or advice or suggestions which the bureau is anxious to furnish.

The report of the committee on manufactures, which was read at the meeting, indicated that the effects of the war on American industry could not be forecasted at present and incidentally paid a high tribute to German efficiency. Among other things of interest to American business, it said: "German educational methods, technical and industrial, and subsequent training have enabled German manufacturers to deliver their products to buyers in this country for less than it costs American manufacturers to produce the same kind." This consideration seems to have reacted unfavorably on the suggested manufacture of domestic dyes, but, even though true, it does not seem the part of wisdom for our industries to maintain utter dependence on a foreign supply that may become more and more uncertain. Even though American dyes are more costly, American manufacture must have them and it seems more a question of enterprise than a question of cost. Should the war drag on for a few years, America may learn to regret that it did not attack the dye question with more earnestness, even at ten times the possible cost at present. When a manufacturing country must have something to carry on its industries cost is a secondary consideration, and only time and experience will bring the excellence and efficiency that reduced costs for the Germans.

It is very necessary that all who have any influence on our trade relationships with foreign countries should work in an optimistic spirit, but the danger ahead should not be kept entirely out of sight. In this connection, it is well that manufacturers and others should peruse the following paragraph from the report of the committee on manufactures:

"When the rapid strides that have been made in Europe in recent years are considered, it may well be presumed that the time would not be far distant when American manufacturers would be outrun in the race. With European competition on the one hand and restrictive laws and labor agitations on the other, American manufacturers need to practice the utmost economy if they are to get by and make two ends meet."

THE PITY OF IT

The Lynn News remarks editorially that "the most pitiful cases which are brought to the attention of the local court are those of family troubles where little children are involved." The same is too true in the case of our own city and recent police court records have given some particularly touching examples. Most people reading of such occurrences see only the drunken father or mother or the neglectful wretch who does nothing to support his family, but often there is a tragic story of suffering children deprived of food, miserably clad and objects of public pity behind the court story. Too often, unfortunately, the penalty imposed on the offending head of the family falls most heavily on the dependent members.

In non-support cases the law makes some slight provision for the family while the father is in the house of correction, but the amount is insufficient to be of much practical value. The miserable mother who has gone the limit of endurance realizes, therefore, that if she makes complaint against her drunken and abusive husband, and if he is given a term of imprisonment, she will have to support herself and her children as best she may in the meantime. Facing an almost hopeless situation, therefore, many poor women bear a life of nameless misery, uncomplainingly, helpless to remedy their condition.

In cases of habitual drunkenness, the law is not only ineffective but often times unjust. Fathers of families are taken from their homes and sent to prison for long periods, leaving the mother and the children destitute. Those who enjoy the comforts of life can scarcely realize the suffering of many in the slums who are devoid of fuel, food, or of clothing, and are perhaps dependent on charity for the means of keeping soul and body together. Added to the physical suffering and degradation are the moral influences which blight the home of the habitual drunkard.

The day will come when the law will look upon habitual drunkards as diseased rather than criminal, and it is to be hoped that in time the law will also plan to punish the guilty without punishing their innocent families in double measure. The more humane judge is powerless at present ent to avoid occasional impositions of hardship on the unoffending, but wise judges everywhere strive to meet the demands of justice with fairness to all concerned. In this age when humanitarianism are wasting energy in so many aimless channels, it were well that some attention should be paid to those dependent on men and women on whom the hand of the law has fallen.

WAR LOANS AND FOOD

When the very nations involved do not lay down very specific lines as to what constitutes contraband of war, it is difficult to ascertain just what this country may do without danger in the matter of sending food supplies to the warring powers. At first it was generally understood that practically all goods sent to the nations direct or through a friendly nation might be seized by an inimical power, but recent declarations of Germany have cleared away the mists from the matter. This country is now shipping wheat and other food supplies without protest from across the water, though the possibility of capture at sea is not denied by the state department.

At the beginning of the conflict the state department intimated that loans to either side would be an unfriendly act towards the other, but there has been a change of view. France made application for a loan of one hundred million from our financiers, but owing to the opposition of the government, the scheme fell through. Now Acting Secretary of State Lansing has announced that this country may make loans to either side without danger of complicity, and the policy adopted becomes parallel to that which governs every country at times of war. Still, the government erred in the right direction by being over-prudent until time showed what could be done without danger of international complications.

Many peace-loving people regret that by the sending of food and money to one or other of the powers we indirectly prolong the war, but to do otherwise would be as foolish as it would be ineffectual in achieving peaceful ends. International law cannot be set aside by the most idealistic sentiment, and no nation dare set itself to the task of starting out a war. Furthermore, the impractical suggestion, if adopted, would react more on the non-combatants than on the armies actively engaged. America may send money and food to Europe—under definite limitations—without endangering our own peace or the spirit of neutrality.

BOY SUICIDES

It is an age of wonders, not the least of which are the shocking incidents of juvenile suicide that crop out with sickening regularity. Last Wednesday two boys at Freeland, Mich., after having played "hooky" from school shot themselves rather than face their parents. One was aged 10 and the other 12. An almost similar story was reported in the papers of a week or so ago. It has always been accepted as true that even the old hang on to life tenaciously, and here we have lives that have not tasted the first sweets of existence blotted out by the terrible act of self destruction. The thing is incomprehensible and no words can describe its enormity. Surely one such incident in a year is sufficient to make all moulders of character pause and ponder. Modern conditions such as the lack of proper home influences, lack of school discipline, weakening of religious bonds, the movies, codding juvenile laws, etc., have manufactured a strange crop of youngsters. Strange that our boasted progress should have given us so much that is abnormal.

HELP FROM WARSHIPS

One of the most picturesque items of war news of the past few days is that which tells of alleged attacks made by British warships on the land forces of the Germans in the neighborhood of Ostend. Rumor has it that 11 war vessels are taking part in the operations and though there is nothing definite to build on the official British despatches have spoken of aid given by the marines on land and by warships at sea. One report relates the shelling of Ostend by some vessels of the English fleet, a rather strange reversal of battle conditions, but made imperative by German possession.

CASCARETS FOR BOWELS, STOMACH, HEADACHE, COLDS

Clean your liver and constipated bowels tonight and feel fine.

Get a 10-cent box now. Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Carries the dose in his pocket and hands out sure things to his friends.

For ten cents a woman can get enough cake to give her a headache after she eats it. But it takes a lot of dough to purchase a bun that will give a man a headache.

Once in a while we hear of a big fashionable wedding at which a bishop and four ministers officiated. And a little later we hear that one dinky divorce lawyer has tossed a monkey wrench into the machinery.

WAR AND WOMEN

War is a man's game, but there have been Amazons. And in all the wars recorded in history, the wives and mothers of the warriors have acquired masculine virility. The Spartan mothers told their sons to bring back their shields from the war or be brought back upon them, and correspondents in Germany have reported the departure of those dearest to them for the front with fearless eyes and grim determination, not daring even to see them back unless they returned victors. And there is the story of the aristocratic French mother whose three sons were killed in battle not long ago. A messenger came to bring her the news, and faltered badly in telling the sad story. But the mother did not break down. A look of rapture is said to have lit up her face as she said: "My sons all died for France. I am satisfied."

Women in all ages have urged their men to fight. There is nothing that a woman despises as much on earth as a coward. More than that, even when war would have ended a war which they had come to know was hopeless, the women have urged them to fight to the last ditch. The southern women did in the Civil war, and if the roles had been reversed no doubt the women of the north would have done the same. Women are not what so many scribes think them to be. In times of storm and stress, that masculine subconscious mind that Charles Godfrey Leland credited them with comes to the surface.—Rochester Herald.

LATIN AMERICAN TRADE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23.—That Latin American countries are looking to the United States for the capital and the market for their products which they formerly found in Europe is emphasized in statements on the Latin American Trade Situation, a pamphlet just issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, giving the addresses made by representatives of Latin American countries at a conference with American business men recently held in Washington. The pamphlet, issued as Miscellaneous Series No. 20, contains the statements made by the ministers from Bolivia, Uruguay, Peru, and Cuba to the United States, the consuls general of Costa Rica and Colombia in New York, the minister from Ecuador to England, and others, besides the opening remarks of Secretary of State William J. Bryan, and a statement by Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield. Many obstacles to the development of Latin American trade with the United States were commented on, notably the matter of credits and that of a proper understanding of the Latin American way of doing business on the part of business men in the United States. The pamphlet is for sale by the superintendent of documents, Government Printing office, Washington, for five cents.

TOWN OF BILLERICA NEWS

Parties Want Union Hall for a Theatre

—Garage Licenses May be Held up—

Contract for New Road—Slaughter

Office Robbers

Realizing the great increase in the population of Billerica during the past two years, several theatrical companies are attempting to lease Union hall, one of the town's public buildings, from the board of selectmen, and it now looks as though one of the companies will be successful in securing the property to conduct a first class motion picture house.

During the past few weeks two companies in particular have been in conference with the selectmen trying to make some arrangements to rent the hall for theatrical purposes. The homes of the firm are in Wakefield and Woburn, respectively, both being experienced in this work.

It is probable that the building will be leased to one of the firms within a short time as the selectmen stated today that the matter was all but closed. The Wakefield concern has been well recommended to the selectmen and is very anxious to secure the building immediately. The Woburn people are also willing to furnish references and are desirous of opening a motion picture house in Billerica before the present season is over. Which company will get the preference is not known.

A part of the first floor of Union hall is occupied by the fire department to house the North Billerica apparatus. The entertainment hall was completely renovated during the past year, a sum of money having been appropriated at the last annual town meeting after one of the most heated discussions for years. The hall is now in first class shape and the selectmen believe that it should be put to use, hence it is probable that the residents of Billerica will have a show house of some kind in which to spend their evenings during the coming winter.

Applications for Garage Licenses

Despite the fact that there are many private garages, and a few public garages, in various parts of Billerica, the board of selectmen has received but two applications for garage licenses under the new law which went into effect October 1. However, if a rush is not made for permits at the next meeting of the selectmen, some action will be taken to enforce the laws, not only making it necessary to apply for permits, but change the construction and maintenance of garages, and the storage and handling of volatile inflammable liquid in connection therewith.

The section which the selectmen are to ascertain is better enforced, reads as follows:

"No person shall construct or maintain a garage or keep or store any volatile inflammable liquid in connection therewith unless a license and a permit have been obtained in accordance with the provisions of chapter 32A, acts of 1904, and amendments thereto."

Applicants for permits to construct or maintain garages, or to keep or store volatile inflammable liquid in connection therewith, shall be made in writing to the chief of the district police, or to the official designated by him to grant such permits, upon forms to be furnished by the chief of the district police. A permit shall not be granted until a license has been obtained from the mayor and aldermen of a city or the selectmen of a town.

Each application for a permit to construct or maintain a garage shall be accompanied by a plan of the premises. All licenses and permits provided for in these regulations must be conspicuously posted, under glass, upon the premises.

The board of fire engineers will grant the permits after application has been made to the selectmen.

Town Water Improved

Although the state authorities have previously reported unfavorably with reference to the Billerica water supply it is understood that Supt. Stowers of the water department has received word that the last analysis showed that the town water was all right. During the summer and early fall tests were made in various parts of the town and it was claimed by the inspectors that traces of organic matter were found in the water, which were probably caused by the excessive pumping made necessary in order to supply the needs of the new Boston & Maine repair shops. The shops only get a partial supply from the town and use their own rate supply except in cases of emergency, as occurred quite frequently at the time that the first tests were taken. Should the shops draw continually from the town the present supply would be entirely inadequate to meet the demand.

The Billerica water supply is taken from driven wells, 35 in number, and pumped to the stand pipe in Billerica Centre. Before the opening of the car shops the supply was more than equal to the demand, and the water company favored with the supply of any community in the state. It was at one time thought that more wells would have to be driven but the latest report of the state authorities seems to have cleared up this matter—for the time being at least.

Town Farm Matter

The town farm matter is still hanging on and it is now probable that no action will be taken until the next annual town meeting, despite the fact that the state board of health has condemned the conditions and ordered the buildings thoroughly renovated. A special committee investigated the matter and then made recommendations to the town, advising that a con-

AT ONCE! STOPS STOMACH MISERY AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes sick, sour, gassy stomachs feel fine.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste food, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Diapepsin, for this down: "Pape's Diapepsin" digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

Considerable sum of money has been spent in putting the buildings in first class shape and installing a modern heating plant.

At present but four inmates are cared for at the town's poor house. It was suggested at the last town meeting that the buildings be sold and a sum be appropriated to pay for the paupers' board in another institution but this did not meet with the favor of a great many of the voters and it is expected that repairs will be made at the old farm shortly after March town meetings.

Contract For New Road

A matter which is being discussed by the board of selectmen has to do with macadamizing Concord road, between Bedford and Billerica Centres. About $400 has been appropriated for the work which will be started as soon as the contract is awarded by the selectmen.

It is the general opinion that this road will be built by contract although Highway Surveyor Twombly has just completed a $7500 job on the Boston road. The selectmen believe that if this work were done by Mr. Twombly it would be necessary for him to hire someone else to care for the other roads in the town, as all his men have been engaged on the Boston road for several weeks.

It is surprising to many to know that there are over 100 miles of roads in Billerica, all of which are under the care of the road surveyor. This means that the holder of this office must be on the jump practically all the time. The selectmen think that if Mr. Twombly is put in charge of the building of the Concord road, the remainder of the repair work will be neglected until too late, as the frost will soon be in the ground.

After the Pheasants

Town Clerk King has been busy granting hunters' licenses for some time past and the fine weather of the past few days has attracted a few more hunters to his office. It is estimated by game authorities that at least 50 pheasants were shot in the town during the first week of the season. It is probable that as many more will fall before the guns of the sportsmen before the end of the month.

The pheasants protected by the state law have been as tame as barnyard fowl and the hunters have had little difficulty in getting good shots at them. It is believed that a great many have been killed and taken out of town which the game authorities have been unable to keep account of. The board of registrars met in the Republican club room Wednesday evening and added a few more names to Billerica's list of voters. On Saturday, October 21, they will be in session from noon until 10 o'clock at night, this being the last opportunity for registration before November 2.

The Women's alliance of the Unitarian church has elected the following officers to serve during the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Mary Eames; vice president, Mrs. Carolyn Jenkins; secretary, Miss Eva Colby; treasurer, Mrs. Hattie Holden; chairman of the ways and means committee, Mrs. Florence Patterson; chairman industrial branch, Mrs. Jennie Barker; chairman hospital committee, Mrs. Jessie Fletcher; chairman postoffice mission, Miss Mary E. Whitford; chairman flower committee, Mrs. Clara Sexton.

Robbers Still at Large

No clue has been secured by the Billerica police relative to the rogues who robbed the safe at the North Billerica post office a week ago and it is the opinion of those working on the case that the men are many miles from the town today. The long start which the criminals had before the police were notified of the break and the fact that they left nothing behind to make known identity makes it a hard mystery for the police to solve.

Held Regular Meeting

The Bennett Public Library association held its regular meeting in the library rooms last evening and elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing year: President, Herbert B. Hosmer; vice president, Josiah C. Folsom; secretary, Mrs. Gladys Holden Hosmer; treasurer, Everett S. Bull; directors, Mrs. Sexton, Miss Whitman, Mrs. Dickinson, Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Backer, Mrs. Carr, John E. Bull, J. Harold Dale, Herbert F. Jacobs. A vote of thanks was extended to the president, Mrs. Sexton, and to the treasurer, Herbert A. King, for their faithful services.

Billerica Improvement Association

The annual meeting of the Billerica Improvement association was held last evening in the Billerica town hall. Rev. Lyman T. Rutledge presided. The principal business was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Rev. Charles H. Williams; secretary, Herbert B. Hosmer; treasurer, Josiah C. Folsom; ways and means committee, Mrs. Gladys Holden Hosmer, Ralph Dodge, Mrs. Ivory M. Hanson, Mrs. F. G. Farquhar, Joseph F. Talbot, Dr. C. E. Hosmer; roads and roadside improvement, Thomas Tabbot Clark, Clarence A. Backer, William H. O'Brien, Thomas F. Sheridan, Nat'l R. Jones, Mrs. Sidney A. Bull; home and school grounds, B. F. Harding, G. A. Thommen, Mrs. Whiteside, Mrs. Harding, Ivory M. Hanson, T. F. Lyons; public grounds and reservations, W. H. Manning, J. N. Parker, R. A. King, M. H. Woburn, P. B. Clark and A. W. Stearns.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

An interesting talk on the work of the Lowell Humane society was given in the vestry of St. John's Episcopal church last evening by the society's agent, Charles E. Richardson. The talk was illustrated by stereopticon views and proved very interesting.

WAR AND PEACE

"War and Peace in 1914" will be the topic of Edwin D. Mead of Boston, director in chief of the World Peace Foundation, principal speaker at the first of a series of members' meetings to be held under the auspices of the Lowell board of trade. The first meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, in Colonial hall.

SOCIAL AND FRATERNAL

The membership of Highland council, Royal Arcanum, is promised a good boost in the near future as no less than 14 applications for membership were received at a meeting held last evening with Robert L. Loring in the chair. The next club initiation will be held on the evening of Nov. 12. After last night's business session, whist was played, J. E. Leher, O. J. Peterson and J. O. Finney taking the prizes.

THE BEST INDEX

of what the coffee trade think of the harmfulness of the coffee-drug, caffeine, is shown in their efforts to get rid of it—to get a coffee that doesn't contain caffeine!

When they do succeed in getting rid of some of the caffeine drug-content, the result is a weak, "clover-tee" decoction that few appreciate.

But after all their efforts to rid coffee of part of its caffeine, how about the other coffee-drug,

"tannin"—about 2-2.5 grains to every cup of coffee?

Tannin is the drug used to tan hides with. Do you know what it does to your stomach? Probably not. Here is what good authorities say about it:—

"Tannic acid in coffee interferes with digestion."

"The caffeine and theine in coffee and tea are cerebral stimulants, and the tannic acid is an astringent, affecting especially the muscular fibers of the intestinal walls."

"Tannic acid is universally condemned by all authorities as a hindrance to digestion and health."

Why keep on running the risk of serious interference with health. Why not quit a table beverage that bears in its train a lot of trouble like nervousness, headache, heart, stomach, bowel disturbance, insomnia, etc.

Thousands, suffering from these ills, find it easy to quit coffee when they have at hand the delicious, nourishing beverage—

POSTUM

—A PURE FOOD-DRINK.

Made from prime wheat (roasted like coffee) and a bit of wholesome molasses, it contains no caffeine, tannin or any other drug or harmful substance.

Old and young alike, drink POSTUM with pleasure and comfort.

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms—Regular Postum—must be boiled, 15c and 25c packages; and Instant Postum—soluble—made in the cup instantly, 30c and 50c tins. Both kinds are sold by Grocers and the cost per cup is about the same.

WAR NEWS

REPORT OF SINKING OF 13 BRITISH STEAMERS HAS BEEN

CONFIRMED

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The only rock-bottomed fact which Englishmen are able to point today as a basis for their belief that the climax has about been reached in the sea, land and air battle across the channel is that armies, however numerous, cannot indefinitely face the demolition of their ranks which has marked this, the latest phase of the great campaign.

For nearly a week now this combat has raged with unabated fury between forces up to the present time so equal in strength that the fronts have swung back and forth without either being able to register a decisive victory. That the slaughter in these three efforts, and counter efforts, to break through the opposing lines transcends anything heretofore seen in this campaign is admitted on both sides. Nevertheless, neither the terrible effectiveness of the long range British naval guns, nor the fact that there are no natural defensive positions, although vouched for both officially and unofficially nor the onslaught of the allied forces on land, have yet succeeded in stemming the "hacking through" tactics of the Germans.

English despatches make sweeping claims of annihilating successes, German advances assert continued progress and Russian telegrams report great victories, but will defend evidence to support these various contentions is lacking and the real facts appear to be that in neither the eastern nor the western arenas of the war has the tide yet turned decisively.

The great haul of merchant ships by the German cruiser Karlsruhe, now fully confirmed from Las Palmas has been a rude shock to those who have contended that the Atlantic ocean was held safely by the British navy but the apologists have lost no time in pointing out that the fleet cannot at the same moment convey hundreds of transports and safeguard every merchant ship. The sinking of the 13 merchant vessels without loss of life, it is being remarked, involves no military injury while the capture of a group of transports would be a disaster. Chambers of commerce, however, are agitating for a sweeping operation sufficiently wide to net both the German cruiser Emden in the Indian ocean and the equally successful Karlsruhe.

DELIANS RETURNING TO ANTWERP AS RESULT OF GOOD TREATMENT BY GERMANS

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—(Via wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—According to information that has been received today the number of Belgians returning to Antwerp is increasing as a result of the good treatment accorded them by the German authorities in possession of the city.

The correspondent in Berlin of the Tribune of Rome has admitted that the confidence of the Germans in the general staff of the army is quite justified by its incomparable organization.

The Paris Temps according to announcement made here, reports that the English have confiscated and sold many valuable German and Austrian race horses, worth in all over $200,000. This fact, together with the confiscation of the racing yacht owned by Herr Krupp, Von Bohlen proves that the English have no respect for private property.

It was announced here today that the German reichstag will convene early in December.

BERLIN ISSUES STATEMENT ON ANTI-GERMAN DEMONSTRATIONS

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—(Via wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The following statement in the matter of the recent anti-German demonstrations in London has been given out in official quarters:

"The English judge in the course of the proceedings against the perpetrators of these anti-German outrages, expressed regret at the doctrine that foreigners in England are outlaws."

MONARCHISTS IN PORTUGAL MADE ATTEMPTS TO EFFECT UPRISINGS

LISBON, Oct. 22.—(Via Paris)—The monarchists of Portugal made attempts to effect uprisings. There were outbreaks at various places, especially in the northern part of Portugal, which for a time was cut off from telegraphic communication with Lisbon.

A sharp conflict took place at Mafta between 100 civilians and republican troops.

DEICE OF ROXBURG, CAPTAIN OF SCOTS GUARD WOUNDED

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Pall Mall Gazette says that the Duke of Roxburg, captain of the Scots Guard was wounded while in service in France.

His wounds, however, are not dangerous.

The Duke of Roxburg is well known in the United States, especially in New York, where in 1902, he married Miss May Gored. The couple have one son, who was born September 3, 1913.

FRENCH OFFICIAL REPORT SAYS GERMANS CONTINUE ATTACK ON LEFT WING

PARIS, Oct. 23.—2.55 p. m.—The official announcement given out at the war office this afternoon says:

"On our left wing the very considerable German forces whose presence was reported yesterday have continued very violent attacks on the entire region between the sea and the canal of La Bassée."

"Generally speaking, the situation of the allied forces has been maintained. If the allies have had to cede certain points they have advanced at others. The enemy also has evinced very great activity in the region of Arras and on the river Somme. To the north and to the south of this stream we have progressed, particularly to the region of Rossers."

"In San Terre in the region of Verdun and in the region of Pont-A-Mousson we have had some partial successes. On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

"To sum up: The enemy appears to be undertaking along the major part of the front and particularly the north sea and the Oise a new effort, making use of corps made up of new organizations. These are composed of men recently drilled, some of them very young and others of middle age and have staffs drawn from various parts of the army."

"Russia: To the south of Pillova the Germans still hold the Vistula river with the exception of the line from Ivanogorod to Koziele. These they have abandoned, pursued by the Russians."

"All the efforts made by the Austrians to cross the river San to the north of Javorau have been repulsed and the Russians are undertaking the offensive in this region."

REINFORCEMENTS ENABLE GERMANS TO DELIVER ATTACK ON FRENCH RIGHT

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Paris to Reuters Telegram Co. says that according to trustworthy word received at the French capital this morning, fresh troops brought up by the Germans have enabled them to deliver attacks with increased vigor on the French right wing, where the battle has been of a ding-dong character with alternate gains and losses.

AUTO KILLS AGED WOMAN

Miss Potter, Parish Missionary for 35 years, struck on way to church in Providence.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 23.—Miss Sarah A. Potter, for 35 years a parish missionary in St. John's Episcopal church, was fatally hurt last night when struck by an automobile owned by Henry C. Samuels of 153 Elmgrove avenue and occupied by his 16-year-old son Harold.

Miss Potter was on her way to a meeting at the church and was crossing Waterman street when the automobile, which it is claimed, was traveling slowly, struck her. She died at her home on Gang street 40 minutes later, having sustained a fractured skull, a fractured collarbone, several fractured ribs, a dislocated hip and internal injuries.

Medical Examiner C. H. Griffin said last night he would order the coroner to conduct an inquest. Miss Potter was 69 years old.

INCREASE FOR POLICE

WORCESTER, Oct. 23.—The city council committee on police last night voted in favor of increasing the number of officers in the police department above the grade of patrolman as follows:

Chief, $500 a year to $2000; deputy chief, $500 to $2300; captains, $350 to $1800; lieutenants, $300 to $1500; sergeants, $200 to $1100; inspectors, $350 to $1600.

thought of yesterday's horrible deed. He passed a quiet night in the police station cell and appeared to be sleeping whenever the officer on duty looked in upon him.

Young Mooradian seemed quite ready to talk today but did not materially change his story of yesterday. He still contends that the victim assaulted him, which the police believe to be the truth.

Story of the Crime

The story of the crime for which the Mooradian boy is held is a very unusual one. The shooting took place at Mountain Rock yesterday afternoon and so far as is known there were no witnesses to it. The boy claims that Zaffoy Alie attempted an assault upon him and that he shot in self defense. When asked by the police if he shot to kill he replied that he certainly did. He said he never saw Alie before yesterday. Alie's death, he stated, however, does not agree with the boy's story. Alie said that the boy worked for him in Worcester. Yesterday afternoon he met Mooradian in Merrimack square and they went to Mountain Rock together. Both car fares were paid by Alie. The latter said that while in the woods, and without any provocation whatever, the boy pulled a gun and demanded money from him. Alie said he refused to give the money and the boy shot him. He started to run, he said, and was shot again.

Ghent Mooradian is a pupil of the Green school. He has been living in a corporation boarding-house in Dutton street. He says he came from Pawtucket, R. I., about four months ago. Instead of going to school yesterday he decided to go out into the country and boarded the 1.15 car for Lakewood. He said he did not go to school because he was not feeling well. Alie was on the same car with him and both left the car near Mountain Rock. Later, he said, he met Alie in the woods and the latter attempted an assault. Under a stiff cross-examination by Supt. Welch the boy added that Alie had bound his hands and thrown him on the ground but that with his teeth he managed to undo his bonds. Then, he said, he jumped to his feet, whipped out his gun and shot his assailant. The gun, he said, he obtained in the house where he lived in Dutton street.

The weapon used by Mooradian was a .32 calibre revolver. He fired three shots at Alie. Two of the bullets entered Alie's body, one in the right shoulder and the other through the right lung. Alie died this morning at 1.50 o'clock at St. John's hospital. Mooradian, after firing the shots did not attempt to escape. Constable Provencier was notified of the shooting by Joseph Roy and when the officer arrived at the scene of the tragedy he found Alie stretched upon the ground with the boy standing over him, revolver in hand. Mooradian turned his revolver over to the constable. Alie was placed aboard a Lowell bound car, which was met by the ambulance at Spark's drug store in Lakeview avenue. Constable Provencier, with Mooradian, was also aboard the car. The constable took the boy to the police station and turned him over to the Lowell police. Alie was a baker residing in Lakeview avenue.

Entered Green School

The Mooradian boy, slayer of Alie, has less than two days' attendance with which to back up his claim of Green school pupil. Miss Ruth Bailey acting principal of the Green school, has talked with Supt. Welch relative to the Mooradian boy. She said he called at the school last Monday morning and expressed a desire to attend the sessions. Miss Bailey talked pleasantly to him and encouraged him. His desire was a very commendable one and she told him to come right along. It would seem, however, that the lad's desire was not very deeply rooted. He attended school only half a day, Monday, all day Tuesday and didn't show up on Wednesday at all. He called at the school yesterday, at noon, and told Miss Bailey that he had been at the hospital the day before and that he was going to Boston today to undergo an operation for a pain in his side. The police will look into the boy's past and they expect that they will know more about him within a day or two.

FREE PLANTING EXERCISES HELD IN SCHOOL YARD—SPEECHES BY OFFICIALS

With ideal weather prevailing, the pupils of the Riverside school this afternoon gathered in the school yard and witnessed the planting of trees which was accompanied by appropriate exercises. Including short speeches by Mayor Murphy, School Commissioner Thompson, Park Commissioner Weed and Supt. of Schools McElroy.

The exercises opened promptly at 2 p. m. of the school, having charge of the program. Though very simple, the exercises contained many unique features which proved very pleasing to all present. Many of the older children assisted in the planting of the trees making a very pleasing spectacle.

The trees were planted for the purpose of beautifying the school grounds and teaching the children to care for trees, flowers and plants. The short talks of the speakers present were confined to the manner in which the children should learn to love trees and shrubbery, not only in school and home yards but in the field and neighborhoods.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Oaklands to Receive Attention—Oaklands Will Offer Suggestions to Municipal Council

The members of the Oaklands Improvement association are making arrangements for their annual meeting which will be held in December, the date to be decided by the executive board. The meeting will be held at the residence of Lawyer Francis W. Quinn, 215 Park street, and a feature of the gathering will be the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The association has been quiet for the past few months, but as soon as the annual meeting is over the members propose to get busy and already valuable suggestions for the welfare and improvement of the district are being gathered and will be later submitted to the municipal council. The association is composed of prominent citizens and their work up to the present time was very commendable.

TEAR DOWN BUILDING

A two story wooden building in the rear of 455-57 Lawrence street, facing Richmond avenue, is to be torn down. The house is owned by Paul Pierce Murphy and Commissioner Donnelly sent him a notice that he would either have to repair the building or tear it down. The house has been vacant for some time and about all of the doors and windows have been removed. It was stated in the notice that the place had been used as a common rendezvous and that it constituted a public nuisance.

Disorderly House on Central St. Raided—Proprietor Sentenced

The principal case which came up before Judge Enright in police court this morning for disposal was that of Charles Johnson, a foreigner charged with conducting a house of ill fame.

This case occupied the greater part of the morning session and it was found necessary to put over several other cases on this morning's docket until this afternoon.

The lodging house which Johnson conducts has been under surveillance for several weeks before the raid was made which resulted in the arrest and detention of three girls and one man besides the defendant.

All of these arrested in the raid, with the exception of the defendant himself, testified for the prosecution today. Judge Enright found Johnson guilty and ordered him committed to the house of correction for one year. He appealed.

HELD A VERY ENJOYABLE AND LARGELY ATTENDED SOCIAL AND WHIST PARTY.

St. Columba's parish repeated the social success of last season at the whist and social which was conducted last evening at the parish hall, Main street. The affair, which was under the auspices of the altar boys of the church, was very largely attended and provided pleasure in plenty for those present. The concert program was unusually good and each feature was enjoyed to the utmost. During the early part of the evening a whist contest was held. Following were the prize winners, respectively: Miss Rose Henton, Miss Mamie Wholey, Mrs. Foye and Mrs. John Monahan. The gentlemen's prizes were won by Master Casey and Master Mortimer Sexton and Fontaine. Among the most notable concert numbers were a vocal selection by Master William Chandler and a cornet solo by Master John Buckley. Rev. John A. Degan, the pastor, was present and complimented the committees on the success of the occasion.

Following were the boys in charge: Masters Richard Campbell, Harold Judge, John Quill, Myles Kalls, Thos. James and William Brosnan, William Lynch, Luke McCarthy, Leo Wholey, Daniel Cogger, John Harrah, William Sexton, A. McCabe and Thomas O'Connor. The mothers of the altar boys were matrons.

John Jacob Rogers, republican, 15th representative district, "nothing expended"; Loring R. Kew, republican, 17th representative district, $9.25; Dennis A. Murphy, democrat, 18th representative district, $5.60; Henry Achin, Jr., republican, 17th representative district, $137.40; John J. Quennan, democrat, 15th representative district, $12.50; Michael H. Brady, democrat, 5th representative district, $22.05; Hercules Trupin, democrat, 17th representative district, and John J. Gilbride, democrat, 16th representative district.

BOY SWEEP OVERBOARD

OSCAR SNOWMAN, JR., SON OF CAPT. SNOWMAN OF SCHOONER HENRIETTA SIMMONS DROWNED

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Oscar Snowman, Jr., only son of Captain Oscar Snowman of the schooner Henrietta Simmons of Portland, Me., which anchored here today was lost overboard in a gale last night off Thatcher's Island. Snowman was standing at his father's side at the wheel when he was thrown over the side of the snapping of the main boom. The vessel was bound for New York.

GREAT BRITAIN PROTESTS

Describes Laying of Mines by Germans on High Seas as "Illegitimate Means of Warfare"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The British embassy yesterday made public a copy of a communication from Great Britain to representatives of the allies and neutral powers in London, protesting against laying of mines by Germans on the high seas and in trade routes, which is described as an "illegitimate means of conducting warfare."

The communication says that mines have been found 50 miles from the English coast, and that eight neutral and seven British merchant and fishing vessels have been destroyed by them. The loss of 60 lives of neutrals and non-combatants is alleged.

SHIP RELEASED

British Government
Frees U. S. Oil Tanker
John D. Rockefeller

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The British government has released the oil tanker, John D. Rockefeller, the detention of which was due primarily, it is said, to the fact that there was no indication in the ship's papers of the destination of the cargo.

"So soon as it was ascertained that the destination of the vessel was Copenhagen the ship was freed."

"In the case of the tank steamer Brindilla, which is now held at Halifax, the British government has had friendly negotiations with the American government. The case is regarded by this government as one calling for an investigation by a prize court, but it is announced there will be as little delay as possible in having the matter heard."

The Brindilla was recently transferred from the German to the American flag under the new ship registry law of the United States and the prize court probably will undertake to determine whether the transfer was bona fide and in harmony with international law.

U. S. SENDS ANOTHER PROTEST
WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The United States has decided to formally protest to Great Britain against the seizure of the Standard Oil Co. steamer Florio, demanding her release from British detention at Stornoway, a port in the Lewis islands, Scotland.

CARMAN MURDER TRIAL

crowded courtroom. Among the 200 or more spectators who occupied every available bit of space were long time friends and neighbors, whose faces were wreathed with hopeful smiles as she began her story. Ranged directly across from her chair, within the enclosure and less than a dozen steps away, were the mother, daughter and husband of the woman whose life the state declares she took. This little group followed with intense eagerness every word of her testimony. Mrs. Dursey, the mother of the slain woman, leaned forward as she might miss her every movement.

"I shall watch her every movement," Mrs. Dursey said. "When the district attorney finishes I believe I will know in my own heart whether she killed my daughter."

Mrs. Carman entered the courtroom on the stroke of 10. She walked lightly to the stand and stood near the witness chair. Justice Kelly was seated, chatting pleasantly with her lawyer and nodding from time to time to acquaintances among the spectators. Just before she took the chair she crossed over to her mother, Mrs. Conklin, sitting at the counsel table, and kissed her. Then she walked back to the witness chair and her lawyer announced that she was ready.

District Attorney Smith arose. In his hand he held a sheet of papers—the transcript of her testimony of yesterday.

"Mrs. Carman," he said in a low voice, "you said you were suspicious of your husband. When did you get suspicious?"

"About a year ago."

"Whether it was summer or winter and what caused her suspicion, she could not say. A woman did not cause it—just rumors."

"Devil With the Girls?"

"Were the rumors about a woman?"

"No. Somebody told me he was a devil with the girls."

"She could not recall who told her this, or where, or when."

"Can you mention one single man who talked about girls to your husband?"

"Mrs. Carman hesitated and replied:

"No."

"At Mr. Smith's bidding, she named many men, friends of Dr. Carman, but could not name one of them as having said:

"How are all your girls?"

"Somebody was asking him that question all the time," she said. "They were teasing. I thought at first, but after a while I thought maybe there might be some truth in what they said. They would say to me:

"The doctor is some devil."

"Did you have any inclination to hear what the doctor had to say to his women patients?"

"In a way, yes. That is, to some of his patients."

"Did you ask him where he was when he was out all night?"

"Yes; and he told me."

"Did you believe him?"

"Yes—sometimes."

"Did your suspicions increase with time?"

"Suspicions increased."

"They increased right up to the time of the murder. They have all been dispelled now."

"How long have you been in that frame of mind?"

"Ever since that terrible tragedy. What I heard or what I didn't hear over the telephone instrument reassured me."

For several minutes Mrs. Carman sought to evade a direct answer to the district attorney's question as to whether she thought that her husband was truthful. Finally she said: "No."

She explained that she had no real reason to doubt him, however. She was suspicious of the fact of the woman who called frequently at his office. Finally she was suspicious of nearly all his women callers.

"I got tired of hearing things," she said.

"And the fact that a woman would come to his office afterward was enough to make you suspicious? Were you suspicious of your husband or the women?" asked Mr. Smith.

"Both," said Mrs. Carman firmly.

Some women, Mrs. Carman said, she thought were more attractive to her husband than she was. She didn't know if there were more than one but she wanted to find out.

"Mrs. Smith asked if she thought that Mrs. Varance, the middle aged nurse whose face she slapped was more attractive than she."

"No."

Spied on Her Husband

A diagram of the first floor of the Carman house was set up near the witness stand.

Mrs. Carman stood up and with her finger pointed out how she went out of the house to spy on her husband when she saw Mrs. Varance with him in the office. She said she did not go out through the kitchen that time, although it was the most direct way to go to the window in the doctor's office.

Under the district attorney's questioning Mrs. Carman's color rose and fell. She became very nervous; she bit her lips; she clenched her gloves; and she appeared to be about to faint but her bottle of smelling salts revived her.

The district attorney did not raise a moment in his cross fire of questions and when she sought to evade direct answers he merely framed his questions in different words and planned her down to categorical replies.

She was made to describe the entire scene with Mrs. Varance. She said she saw Dr. Carman give the nurse $15 and saw her kiss him afterward. It was the passing of the money and not the kissing that disturbed her, she said.

"You didn't object to another woman kissing your husband in gratitude?"

"Oh, no," replied Mrs. Carman.

Saw Woman Kiss Husband

"How long after the passing of the money was the kiss administered?"

"A few minutes. They were sitting down alongside each other at the time."

Mrs. Carman said she did not rap on the window when the kiss was heard but waited until Mrs. Varance started to leave the office.

In reply to a request Mrs. Carman indicated that she slapped Mrs. Varance with the back of her hand.

"Now as to the night of the shooting," said Mr. Smith. "You came down stairs in a kimono. What kind of slippers did you have on?"

"Red felt slippers."

"And you could travel very quietly, couldn't you?"

"Yes."

"Did you hear a shot?"

"I heard some commotion."

"What?" exclaimed the district attorney.

"Well, I don't know whether I heard a shot or not. I heard a noise."

"And your curiosity was aroused?"

"Yes."

Heard Unusual Sound

"Surely, it was an unusual sound."

She thought it had come from the rear of the house and it took her about a minute to get downstairs, she said. As she reached the head of the stairs, she saw two women going down the hall but she made no effort to find out who they were. After she went down stairs she walked into the waiting room and leaned against a mantelpiece for a moment. She did not see anyone downstairs and went directly upstairs again after having stood by the mantel for two minutes, perhaps.

Mr. Levy, her counsel, came to the house later in the afternoon on the night of the murder to sympathize with the family, she said. She did not think then that she would require the services of a lawyer.

"But you did tell Mr. Levy then you would call him if you needed him, didn't you?" asked Mr. Smith.

"Yes, because I saw four lines in the paper Wednesday mentioning my name and the telephone instrument."

"Mrs. Carman," thundered the district attorney, "don't you know the first time the newspapers mentioned that instrument was on Thursday—the day following—and that it was in big headlines?"

Tore Out Dictaphone

"No, I don't know that," she retorted. "But I told Dr. Runcie the night of the murder that I had had the thing put in."

"If he contradicted that, you won't dispute him, will you?"

Mrs. Carman hesitated and replied: "No."

She described in detail how she tore out the instrument and its wires between her room and the doctor's office. Her sister discovered her pulling out the wires, she said. She also told how she hid the wires, batteries, sound-gatherers and the receiver in the garret under the floor.

Failed to Answer

"Mrs. Carman," said the district attorney, "if your suspicions were dispelled by what you heard over the instrument, why did you buy the thing on June 23 when your lease on it had two months more to run?"

Mrs. Carman could give no direct answer.

Mrs. Carman said she learned the identity of the victim late Tuesday night. In reply to the district attorney's questions she said she felt sorry for the family of Mrs. Bailey, but that she had not expressed her sympathy to them, although Dr. Carman did so.

"No one prevented you from going to the Bailey house that day, did it?" Mr. Smith asked.

"No."

"You never went into the doctor's office to see the body, did you?"

"No."

"That's all," concluded the district attorney.

Mr. Levy asked on re-direct examination if Mrs. Carman was right-handed or left-handed. She said she was left-handed. He then asked why she did not go to the Bailey home to extend her sympathy.

"Because I did not feel that I was at liberty to do so," she replied.

Mrs. Carman's Daughter

Mr. Smith had no further questions to ask and Mrs. Carman was then excused.

Her ten-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, was the next witness.

She gave her version of what had happened the night of the murder. After dinner, she said, she had gone out and played on the lawn.

"Mother went upstairs," she continued. "My aunt and my grandmother were on the porch. Later I went into the parlor and started to practice on the piano. My mother told me to cease. Then I went into the dining room, walked through the hall and sat in a chair in the dining room. Presently I heard glass break and a shot. I met my aunt on the stairs. I went into my mother's room."

"My mother was there. Then I ran back into the hall. I saw my mother put on her slippers and kimono and followed her downstairs. Then I went up again. When she came up in a minute I went into her room with her."

Burst Into Tears

Mrs. Sarah A. Conklin, Mrs. Carman's mother, 72 years old, was the next witness.

Mrs. Conklin said that her hearing was very weak.

At this point, Mrs. Carman, sitting at the counsel table, burst into tears. She buried her face in her handkerchief and her shoulders shook with sobs.

Mrs. Conklin's testimony corroborated that given by Mrs. Carman and Elizabeth.

After Mrs. Carman had regained her composure her aged mother continued her story.

Mrs. Conklin said that after she had heard the "noise" on the night of June 23, she went to all the doors of the house and looked out to see whether she could see anything or anyone. Then she went upstairs into her daughter's room and there found Mrs. Carman, Elizabeth and Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Carman's sister.

"The bed was all disordered as if someone had just got out of it," she said. "We were very much excited and we all cried, including Mrs. Carman."

When Mrs. Conklin left the stand, Mrs. Carman's sister, Mrs. Ida Powell, was sworn. Her story was almost word for word a corroboration of the testimony of Mrs. Carman, Mrs. Conklin and Elizabeth Carman.

CONGRATULATE MUNSTERBERG

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard received the congratulations of friends at Cambridge yesterday for the satisfactory manner in which the Harvard faculty brought to an end the Munsterberg-Wiener incident that has been troubling the university for a fortnight.

Many telegrams from all over the country also came in to the noted Harvard psychologist.

So far as Harvard is concerned, the whole affair is closed for good. The resignation which Professor Munsterberg tendered when it became known that Major Wiener had threatened to quit Harvard off from a bequest of $10,000,000 unless he was dismissed from the teaching staff, has been withdrawn, and, according to semi-official information at Cambridge, the original letter from Major Wiener has not yet found its way to the proper authorities.

MORGAN'S DEATH

Inquest Finding on the Death of Man Killed by Auto

Judge John J. Pickman today submitted his finding on the inquest on the death of Patrick Morgan, aged 19 years, of Tewksbury, who was struck by an automobile, owned and operated by John J. Healey of Lowell, on the night of Wednesday, Sept. 16, on the State road in Tewksbury, and who died a few days later as a result of the injuries sustained. Healey and another man had attended a baseball game in Boston on the day of the accident, and was on the way home when it occurred.

The finding concludes as follows: "I find that the automobile was running at a higher rate of speed than 15 miles an hour, and at a greater rate of speed than was warrantable in view of the fact that the automobile was running on the left of the road to avoid the van in front which thereby required greater caution in running the automobile. Bearing upon the degree of negligence of the operator of the automobile I have considered the fact that said Morgan came suddenly and quickly out between the vans in an unexpected way and that he went suddenly in front of the automobile.

"I find that on Wednesday, the sixteenth day of September last past, about 7 o'clock in the evening that Patrick Morgan who lived in Tewksbury, in said county, while upon a public highway in said town of Tewksbury, was struck by an automobile that was owned and operated by John J. Healey, and was thrown down there and sustained injuries that caused his death in a few days afterwards. Said John J. Healey was operating said automobile at a greater rate of speed than was proper under circumstances at the time but I do not find his negligence to be of such a gross and reckless nature as to make him criminally liable for the death of said Patrick Morgan."

"John J. Pickman, Senior Special Justice of the Police Court of Lowell and Acting, Lowell, Mass., Oct. 22, 1914."

WANTS DIVORCE

95-Pound Wife Kicked by Her 220-Pound Husband

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Mrs. May Allen, scarcely four feet and a half tall, weighing about 95 pounds, very thin and pale of face, told Judge Wall in the Suffolk divorce court yesterday afternoon how her husband, David Allen, six feet two inches tall and weighing 220 pounds, had strangled her in the face, kicked her in the stomach and done other violent things, while they lived together on Stanford and Cambridge streets, West End.

Three Disks at Her

The court room was crowded to the doors with others seeking divorces and spectators and all listened with interest to Mrs. Allen's story. The Allens were married in Boston a year ago last March and lived first on Cambridge street and then at 32 Stanford street. Mrs. Allen was a steamfitter, his wife said, but never worked.

"He came to the house one day and asked me for 50 cents," said Mrs. Allen. "I told him he couldn't have it and he smashed me across the face. The same thing happened three times after that."

GOV. WALSH URGES TAX

REFORM AT LYNN RALLY

LYNN, Oct. 23.—Fully 500 persons waited in Odd Fellows hall until after 11 o'clock last night for the arrival of Gov. Walsh, who was the chief speaker at the democratic rally. More than twice that number had attended the rally during the early part of the night.

The governor was given a splendid reception and his address was frequently interrupted by applause. Representative Charles H. McGhee presided.

Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Boynton praised the state and national administration, and Congressman Michael P. Phelan spoke on the currency bill, paying a tribute to the diplomacy of President Wilson in averting hostilities with Mexico.

The other speakers were Michael H. Coffer, candidate for representative; Abner S. McLaugh, candidate for senator in the Essex district; and Henry F. Dunn, candidate for senator in the 5th Middlesex district.

Gov. Walsh said, in part:

"The cost of government as represented in taxation is a large element in the present high cost of living, but the great injustice of our present taxation system lies in the excessive burdens which it places on the great masses of common people as represented in rent-payers and in small householders. If all the property in the commonwealth which at the present time escapes taxation and which by law is subject to taxation were assessed the tax rate today would be little, if any, greater than it was a generation or two ago.

"For many years our legislature in its attempts to solve our problems of taxation has found its authority limited by the provisions of the constitution.

"This year I declared in my inaugural address for a constitutional amendment to increase the powers of the legislature in this regard and personally went before the legislative committee on taxation to point out the injustices of the present system and the urgent need of a constitutional amendment.

Thereafter in several conferences with the committee on taxation I used my influence to remove any partisan issue from the question so that results might be accomplished. For the first time after years of agitation the effort for taxation reform met with success, through the passage by the legislature of a constitutional amendment giving to the legislature the power to levy a real income tax.

"The amendment grants to the legislature the power to provide legislation for a real income tax. The amend-

CANDIDATE McCALL

ANSWERS SEC. REDFIELD

HAVERHILL, Oct. 22.—At a republican rally in city hall last evening, Hon. Samuel W. McCall was the principal speaker.

Sec. Redfield, in a speech last night at Cambridge, is reported to have attributed present business conditions in New England to the lack of efficiency of its manufacturing plants.

"An orator who is equal to the assertion that 'the democratic administration and tariff had increased business and prosperity' hardly deserves a serious reply. Unimpeachable statistics relative to foreign and domestic commerce effectively dispose of Mr. Redfield's assertion.

"The truth is that the business men of New England have the brains, the splendid plants with modern equipment, and in fact everything but cheap labor and if Mr. Redfield will point out a way in which with equal efficiency our manufacturers can compete on equal terms with foreign manufacturers while the former pay double the wages that are paid abroad, he will make his position appear to be tenable.

"The remedy I have been attempting to present for extravagance in our state government at the different meetings before which I have spoken has been simply the old-fashioned remedy of keeping down expenditures. In order to keep down taxation we must keep down expenditures."

Discussing the amendment to the Boston city charter which was approved by the governor against the earnest protest of the mayor, Mr. McCall said that the present charter was the result of a long contest practically carried on by leading men of all parties.

"The existing charter provides," he said, "for the election of a governing board under such conditions that the voter may easily make himself acquainted with the candidates and their fitness and the men elected are responsible to the city at large. But it is proposed to increase the size of the board, to dissipate responsibility, and to have the members responsible only to limited sections.

"The system proposed is an ideal one for large cities and political horse trading between the different wards. Such a measure should have received the veto instead of the approval of the governor."

There has been specifically endorsed in the democratic platform and the democratic party is committed to its support and will use its best efforts to secure its passage for a second time in the next legislature in order that it may be submitted to the people for ratification.

"As the question of adopting or re-

PROGRESSIVE ENTHUSIASM

NATION-WIDE, SAYS WALKER

LEOMINSTER, Oct. 23.—About 100 attended the progressive rally at G. A. R. hall last night. Dr. C. S. Brigham presided. The speakers were Hon. Joseph Walker of Brookline and James P. Magenis of Boston, Rep. Alfred M. Fennell of Townsend and Joseph Fennell of Charlton, candidates for congress.

Mr. Walker and Mr. Magenis spoke in Leominster earlier in the evening and did not reach here until 10 o'clock, by which time half of the audience had left.

Mr. Walker declared that no movement since the civil war had taken hold of the people so strongly as the progressive movement. If its present leaders should retire, he said, others would take their places. Enthusiasm prevailed from one end of the country to the other.

From the movement is bound to grow a new liberal constructive party that will give America its purest democracy. Prosperity will not be fostered, he said, but will be passed among the people; politics will be lifted from the mire; people will be taught that it is not a game to be played, but is intended to take the government from the special interests and give it back to the people for whom the progressive party stands.

Mr. Magenis reviewed his early life as a newspaperman and declared that in those days newspapers told the truth.

BIRD SPEAKS TWICE

ATTLEBORO, Oct. 23.—A big progressive rally was held last night in Armory hall. Dr. Clarence W. Esley, chairman of the progressive town committee, presided. The speakers were Russell A. Wood, candidate for senator; Charles S. Bird of Walpole; Mrs. C. M. Tillaght of Somerville and Arthur M. Huddell of Chelsea.

Mr. Bird again urged the advisability of the state establishing a central purchasing agency, which, he claimed, could save nearly $1,000,000 yearly, and asked Gov. Walsh to explain why his administration had failed to take such a step.

In North Attleboro the same speakers took part at a progressive rally in Red Men's hall.

jecting the constitutional amendment will be one of the most important to come before the legislature which is about to be elected this refusal of the republican party to take any position in its platform again illustrates its unwillingness to face squarely problems of vital importance to the masses of the people."

evening to reopen next Monday morning. While information could not be obtained to that effect, it is possible that the mill will only work four days a week for the next few weeks. The management hopes, however, that full time will be resumed very soon. The short week in the day department will not affect the night work, which will continue as at present. The Silesia mills have for the past few years been very busy and have been running overtime when similar mills were forced to work short time. The Silesia mills have the reputation of making the finest yarn in the country, a fact which has been responsible for its steady progress.

Painters Held Meeting

The members of the Painters' union held a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting last night in Carpenters' hall in the Runels building. Business of considerable importance was transacted and one new member was admitted. Three applications were received and turned over to the investigating committee who will report on them at the meeting to be held next Thursday night. Several committees submitted reports and they all denoted progress. Business Agent George Fitch read a report which showed the attitude of the employers toward union employees to be good and all members working. The secretary's report showed the financial and numerical condition of the union to be in an excellent standing. The union headquarters in the Odd Fellows building. Business was transacted. The secretary reported the treasury to be in a good financial condition.

Machinists' Local 820

The Machinists' union, local 823 held a largely attended meeting last night in Machinists' hall in Middle street. President Walter Phelps presided and called the meeting to order promptly at 8 o'clock. A great deal of important business was transacted and several new members were admitted. Several applications for membership were also received. Committee reports were accepted as read and communications from various sources were properly referred to the secretary. Several of the members spoke on the good of the union and their remarks proved of much interest. The secretary's report showed the membership to be making large increases at every meeting and the treasury in a strong financial condition.

Silesia Worsted Co.

The mills of the Silesia Worsted Co., North Chelmsford, shut down last night.

Paul Chappelle and Harold Welcome, clerks at the Saco-Lowell shops, will journey to Wilmington tomorrow in quest of pheasants. Both are crack shots.

Frank Dawson, formerly employed at the Tremont & Suffolk mills is now connected with a Boston firm. He has been in Lowell the past few weeks demonstrating the company's lines, and renewed many old acquaintances.

Adam Bentley, chauffeur at the Massachusetts mills, has returned from a month's visit to Detroit. Enroute he took in many interesting points and was remarkably impressed with Niagara Falls, which he says at this time of the year are very beautiful.

Machinists' Helpers

The Machinists' Helpers union, composed of members employed at the Silesia car shops held a short meeting last evening in the union headquarters in the Odd Fellows building. Business was transacted. The secretary reported the treasury to be in a good financial condition.

General Labor Notes

The committee considering the advisability of holding the English Trades Union congress this year announced that in the present condition of affairs it was impossible to fix a date.

The Tobacco Workers International union will have an extensive exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915.

Unions connected with the Wool-workers International union are taking a referendum vote on the question of affiliation with the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

New York Journeymen Tailors union No. 330 is conducting an agitation for the abolishment of home work, the establishment of an 8-hour day and higher wages.

French state tobacco factories are working day and night to supply the needs of the army, and large quantities of Virginia tobacco are being imported specially for the use of the British troops.

Philadelphia having been added to the roster of union cities by the International Ladies' Garment Workers, the latter are now making a march on to Cleveland in an effort to unionize that city.

The scope of the government's big clearing house for laborers and home seekers has been extended by the establishment throughout the country of distributing zones with headquarters in 18 cities.

In Youngstown, O., a 99 per cent organization of moving picture operators made it possible to obtain a double shift with a 7-hour day for each man, a slight wage increase and full union recognition.

The New York law requiring one day of rest in seven for workers in manufacturing and mercantile establishments has just been extended for one second time in an important decision by Judge Fish of the Niagara county court.

The great national political contest in Australia has been concluded and the labor party has won a magnificent victory. The labor party will have 41 members in the house of representatives and 32 seats in the senate.

The Massachusetts state law which declares it unlawful to make false statements in advertisements was taken advantage of by cigar makers in Boston to end the practice of a non-union cigar manufacturer who was deceiving the public.

Twenty thousand British miners in Connock Chase (Staffs) will give sixpence a fortnight each to the national relief fund and 10,000 men employed by Connell Laird & Co., shipbuilders, Birkenhead (Cheshire) have agreed to the following weekly deduction from wages: Those paid 35c. and over, 6c.; between 25c. and 35c., 4c.; 20c. and 25c., 2c.; and less than 25c., 1c.

As a result of the bill passed by the Massachusetts legislature in 1913, continuation schooling in Boston is made compulsory, and all pupils between the ages of 14 and 16 who obtained their employment certificates since last January will be compelled to attend a designated continuation school.

Oscar F. Nelson, former president of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, now a state factory inspector, has been nominated by the democrats of the ninth Illinois district for congress.

Andrew Elscher, the miner, will again officiate as prime minister of Australia, and with a safe working majority of eight in the house and overwhelming odds in the senate it is likely that he will be able to put through considerable constructive legislation as promised in the labor party's program.

War has been declared on industrial sickness by the American Association for Labor Legislation. A committee from this organization declares that sickness insurance must be made compulsory, with emphasis on medical care, in order that it shall lead to a campaign of health conservation similar to the "safety first" movement from accident compensation.

CARMAN MURDER TRIAL

to bed, and when I came down I couldn't see Mrs. Variance. I wondered if she was in the doctor's office, so I went around the house and to the window looking upon the office. The shade was up a little way.

Q. That was the same window which was broken on the night of June 30 last, and through which the shot was fired? A. Yes, sir, the same window.

Watched Through the Window

Q. Well, what did you see on the night of the Variance incident? A. The doctor and Mrs. Variance were sitting close together. I saw them talk for a few moments, then the doctor made a gesture with his hands, palm upward. She spoke to him again and he brought some money out of his pocket. He straightened out the money—stuffed it in the straightened-out money and I saw him hand her $15. She put it in her purse. Both rose together, and as they did so she kissed the doctor upon the cheek.

Q. What did you do? A. I tapped on the window to let them know I was seen there, then went around to the office door, knocked and said: "Doctor, let me in." He opened the door. I went to her and said: "These are pretty things for a married woman with grown children." Then I said to the doctor: "So this is what you have been doing. This is the way your money goes." I knew he had a good practice and collected a good bit of money, and we lived modestly, but we never seemed to be able to save anything.

Would Not Be Halted

Q. Did you do anything at this time? A. Yes, I slipped her with the back of my hand like this (illustrating a fairly vigorous blow) then Mrs. Variance said: "Who is not giving me this money, but is tending it to me?" I demanded it back. She asked him if he should give it to me and the doctor said: "Yes, if she wants it, it is her house." So she gave me the money and went away.

Q. Did anything happen between you and the doctor afterward? A. Yes, after she had gone he was very angry and gave me the most awful calling down I ever got in my life. He said I was breaking up his practice and he was.

The attorney attempted to interject another question, but Mrs. Carman was full of her subject and wasn't to be halted for an instant. She went on: "Now wait for a minute. He said he wasn't going to stand for it. He wouldn't stand for it and if I ever came in that office again there would be worse trouble."

Counselor Levy next brought up the matter of the dictagraph. The accused wife admitted that it was in the house on the night of the shooting and had been there since May 15. She was directed to give an explanation of why she had installed it.

SLEEPYTIME TALES

BY VIRGINIA VALE

THE LOST POCKETBOOK

Once upon a time Andrew was walking home one night in a great hurry. He was cold, tired and very hungry. Andrew was only fifteen and he had to work quite hard to help his mother and little sister Alice. Just as he was turning the corner he stubbed his toe against something hard in the snow. As he stopped to see what it was he saw that it was a pocketbook and that it was filled with bills.

"What luck," he said, "I can now buy mother a new dress and Alice a warm coat to wear to school and perhaps there will be money enough for us all to go to the movies some night."

Now Andrew didn't mean to be dishonest. He didn't stop to think that was all. "Look mother, see what I have found," he said opening the door with a shout. "A pocketbook full of money. Now we will have money to spend."

"My dear boy, don't you know it is not ours to spend and I am sure you do not want to keep anything that is not yours," replied his mother.

Andrew opened it and they looked at the bills inside and it seemed to them like a small fortune. While they were looking the door bell rang and Andrew went to see who was there.

"Did you find a pocketbook?" asked a lady. "I am afraid that I have lost mine. I am sure I had it just before I passed this house."

"Yes," said Andrew, "I found one and here it is."

"Oh I am so glad for I could not afford to lose it as I am quite poor and it has taken me a long time to save this money and I must use it to pay the doctor. My little girl has been lame and the doctor has just made her well and this was the money to pay him. I want you to take this dollar and buy you something with it," said the lady.

Andrew was very glad now that he was able to return the money and ran into the house to tell his mother so and show her the money he had been given.

"Any way, mother, we can all go to the movies so let's have supper and get ready," he said cheerfully.

His mother patted his head and she said: "We can all go and enjoy that treat of yours I am sure."

rected to give an explanation of why she had installed it.

Suspicious of Doctor

"Because I was suspicious of the doctor," she said, with her chin tilted upward, a little defiantly. "When we would go out together people would ask him how his 'girls' were, and they would speak about how he could stay away from home all night and then could tell me he had been 'out on a case.' I got sick and tired of hearing of his sort of thing and commenced to get suspicious, especially of some women patients who seemed to call regularly."

Q. Did you ever hear her say anything about the dictagraph? A. Yes, she said: "I was never the crazy, jealous woman that the newspapers made me out to be. It was this way: If I was going to take the serious step I had in mind (separating from my husband, so far as wife relations went), I would do it only upon my own knowledge, and not upon hearsay. So I obtained the dictagraph to learn what he was saying to his patients."

The details of how she obtained the dictagraph from Gaston Boissonault, manager of the General Acoustic Company of New York, were then given. They have been told many times—how she first told Boissonault she was a dressmaker who wanted to catch thieves and employes and finally, upon being assured that the transaction would be confidential, told him who she really was, and had him put the machine into her home while she purposely took her husband away from home for a couple of days.

She gave quite a dramatic representation of how Boissonault, in his office, had demonstrated the efficiency of the machine. She said she had a girl in another room listen and then repeat what he had said while in the room with Mrs. Carman.

He had counted "one, two, three, four, five, six" in varying tones of voice and the girl had repeated the numbers. Mrs. Carman illustrated each tone of voice Boissonault had used, down to the faintest whisper.

Removed the Instrument

Next she introduced an entirely new bit of testimony, tending to put into a bad light the young man who told the newspapers of his dictagraph the day after the shooting. "As I left his office and stood waiting for an elevator, he followed me," she said. "I asked him if I had had lunch. I said 'No.' He asked me if I would go to lunch with him. I told him (this in a tone of scathing righteousness) that I didn't go to lunch with strangers men."

Q. Did you ever tell him that you had kept or intended to keep a diary about the conversations you overheard? A. I did not.

Q. When did you remove the dictagraph from his fastenings in your home? A. On July 1 (the day after the murder), early in the morning.

Q. What part did you take away first? A. The part that was concealed in the doctor's office and the wires that led upstairs.

Never Knew Mrs. Butler

Q. Why did you remove the machine at that time? A. Because I thought the doctor had trouble enough on his hands just then and I did not want him to know, besides, that I had been jealous of him.

She said, in reply to a series of questions, that she had frequently listened to her husband and his patients and had heard their conversations, but take care of her boy as long as he lived? A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell her to live to me when I questioned her about the night of June 30? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you talk at her on that occasion? A. (Smiling so broadly as almost to laugh.) A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell her to get your father, as you wished to have a pistol put out of the house? A. I did not.

The lawyer then asked Mrs. Carman if she had been allowed to testify as she had wished to do before either of the two grand juries which indicted her, the first for manslaughter, the second for murder. She said she had not been permitted to testify.

Shows Condition of Her Arms

Then he asked her to do something entirely unexpected, the useful purpose of which was not clearly evident. "Will you take off your gloves, please?" asked Mr. Levy. She obeyed.

Then he asked: "What is the condition of your arms? Have you any cuts or bruises upon them?"

Mrs. Carman pulled her loose sleeves above her elbows, held her arms aloft so the jury might see them and then moved her hands about to show the palms and backs just as a magician does when he shows he "had nothing to deceive you."

That was all.

"Your witness," said Mr. Levy to the district attorney.

"My examination is likely to be quite extended, your honor," Mr. Smith told the court, so Justice Kelly announced an adjournment until the morning.

LEGAL NOTICES

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Athanasios Stavropoulos of Lowell, in the County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to Hiram Whitney of Westford in said County, dated Nov. 26, 1906, and recorded in Middlesex, North District Registry of Deeds, Book 387, Page 183, which said mortgage has since been assigned to M. Elizabeth Whitney of said Westford by an instrument in common form, duly recorded in said Registry of Deeds, and for breach of the condition of said mortgage, will be sold at public auction upon the premises in said mortgage deed described on Friday, the thirteenth day of November, 1914, at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, viz:

A certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in Lowell, on the southerly side of Market street, (formerly called Lowell street) in the rear thereof and bounded on a twelve foot passageway leading from said Market street, which said parcel of land is now owned by said M. Elizabeth Whitney, and is described as follows: Beginning at the northeast corner of the land hereby conveyed and adjoining land now owned by one M. Murphy; thence running southerly on said passageway about seventy-nine feet seven inches to land now or formerly of J. E. Adams; thence running at an acute angle and running northerly on said Adams' land about fifty-eight feet five inches to land now or formerly of Edward Dodge; thence running northerly on said Dodge's land to a line formerly of Patrick Murphy about forty-one feet four inches; thence on said Murphy's land about forty-four feet to the point of beginning. Be the measurements more or less. Being the same premises conveyed to said Athanasios Stavropoulos by John E. Fitzgerald by his deed of Nov. 26, 1906, and recorded in said Registry of Deeds, Book 397, Page 453.

Said premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes and municipal assessments, if any there may be. Terms: $200 cash at time and place of sale, and the balance within ten days thereafter upon delivery or tender of a deed. Other terms made known at sale.

M. ELIZABETH WHITNEY, Assignee and present holder of said mortgage.

FRENCH WARSHIP IN COLLISION ON COAST

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—It was reported here this morning that the French cruiser Descaudry while patrolling off the New Jersey coast had been rammed by the coastwise steamer Telesera. Neither vessel, however, was seriously damaged.

The collision occurred as the Telesera was entering the harbor, her officers said. They did not see the Descaudry until the cruiser was a short distance ahead.

Immediately the steamer's engines were reversed and she let drop her anchor. Her momentum, however, was too great and she crashed at high speed full into the war vessel. A boat was lowered from the cruiser and two of her officers boarded the steamer. They were very angry, the Telesera's captain feared they would beat him.

After a long and bitter wrangle the officers went away and the Telesera was made to give a bond to make good the cruiser's repairs before the steamer was permitted to continue on her trip to Boston and New York.

DEFENDS GARY DINNERS

U. S. Steel Counsel Says They Saved Failures in the Steel and Iron Industry

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—The Gary dinners, to which 99 per cent of the iron and steel manufacturers of the country came to discuss the situation in the dark days of the panic of 1907, are a laurel and a crown in the history of the industry, said Richard V. Lindabury, in his argument for the defense yesterday in the federal suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation. Instead of apologizing for the action taken by the corporation at that critical period of the country's financial history, he added, the steel corporation is exceedingly proud of what it accomplished.

Mr. Lindabury said the iron and steel industry during the panic was becoming demoralized, that E. P. Gary called together the manufacturers to discuss the situation and to prevent wide and change view in prices that would bring ruin to everyone in the business.

As a result of these gatherings, he said, there was not one failure in the iron and steel trade for the first time in the history of panics. No prices were fixed at these dinners as alleged by the government, nor was territory allotted or outputs limited, said counsel.

Mr. Lindabury concluded his argument late yesterday after speaking 10 hours. Most of his address yesterday was taken up with the conduct of the steel corporation after its organization in 1901. He denied the government charges that the earnings of the corporation were excessive, and declared that on the other hand, they were only ordinary.

The billion dollar concern was always fair to competitors, he went on to say, never coerced dealers into taking its products, did not solicit or receive rebates from railroads, and did not countenance participation with independent manufacturers in pools of any kind.

Counsel for the defense spoke in glowing terms of the treatment accorded employees of the corporation. In this respect, Mr. Lindabury said, the steel corporation led the world. Long before the states began to place workmen's compensation laws upon their statute books the steel corporation had adopted a method of compensation, which, he said, has become a model for all the states.

Price Trend Downward
That the steel corporation maintained artificial prices as charged by the government was denied by counsel. Figures were produced by Mr. Lindabury to show that the trend of prices in the steel industry had been downward.

In disputing the government's contention that the steel corporation was monopolistic in its tendency, Mr. Lindabury said that its percentage of the country's iron and steel business was not as large as it was when the concern was organized, while on the other hand the percentage of the business done by other steel corporations had increased.

The famous Tennessee coal and iron sale was touched upon by counsel, who denied that the corporation had acquired that property for any other purpose than to assist in preventing the spread of the 1907 panic. The charges of the government that directors of the steel corporation had accepted President Roosevelt as to the amount of Tennessee stock held by the New York Banking firm which was said to be in trouble during the panic and whose Tennessee stock was finally purchased by the steel interest, was false and should never have been injected into the present suit, Mr. Lindabury said.

Henry E. Colton, special assistant to the attorney general, began his argument today on certain phases of the suit. Five lawyers are still to be heard from on behalf of the United States Steel corporation and other defendants before Mr. Dickinson closes the case with an argument in rebuttal. The vastness of the steel industry, the ground to be covered in the arguments and the importance of the suit have led the court to extend the time for closing the case until next Tuesday.

FINDS WIFE MURDERED

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Edwin Van Aken, 50 years old, was mysteriously murdered at her home at Port Ewen, near Kingston, yesterday afternoon. Her body was discovered in her bedroom by her husband when he returned from home of two hours. Mrs. Van Aken's head had been battered in and the marks on her throat indicated that she also had been choked.

SATURDAY'S SUN FEATURES

Read the Discussion of the Political Parties in the Spellbinder—Real Estate Page and Others

The state campaign will be discussed by the Spellbinder in Saturday's Sun and the comparative strength of the three contending parties will be set forth as indicated by the vote of last election. There will be an account of Candidate McCall's efforts to revivify the G. O. P. by the use of a political phylloxy. Incidentally there will be a number of questions for Mr. McCall to answer relative to the democratic administration at Washington. The attitude of the candidates in reference to national prohibition will also be discussed.

Another big Saturday feature will be the Real Estate and Builders page, containing all the latest news of the building activities and real estate transactions in this city. The advertisements offer attractive property for sale. There will be a whole lot of live news and humorous comment in "They Do Say" tomorrow.

Mrs. Ray's Menu, "What the French Mail Said," "The Tabby's Foot" and the "Sleepytime Tales" will complete the list of features which will appear in Saturday's Sun.

KARLSRUHE HAS SUNK 20 BRITISH SHIPS IN ATLANTIC

Despatch From Canary Islands to London Reports That the Karlsruhe Sunk 13 British Merchantmen—Berlin Gave Out Report on Oct. 3 That She Destroyed 7 British Vessels

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Tenerife, Canary Islands, to the Daily Mail under date of Thursday, reports that the German cruiser Karlsruhe has sunk 13 British merchantmen in the Atlantic.

The news, according to the Mail's correspondent, was brought to Tenerife by the German steamer Crefeld, which arrived there with the crews of the British steamers Stratroy, Maple Branch, Highland Hope, Indrants, Rio Igassu, Farn, Niceto, Maria De Larrizaga, Cervantes, Carnish City, Fruth, Conder and Lynrowan, all of which were sunk by the Karlsruhe. The Crefeld was accompanied into port by the German steamer Patagonia, Rio Negro and Ascunston.

A later message states that over 400 men on the crew are prisoners and that the merchantmen were mostly sunk in the Atlantic. The ships were mostly engaged in the South American trade and their total tonnage is about 50,000.

The cruiser Karlsruhe, a ship of a tonnage less than 5000 tons, has had in this war a career as eventful in the Atlantic as that of her smaller sister ship, the Emden in the Indian ocean. The Karlsruhe first came into notice at the outbreak of the war when she appeared in the vicinity of Sandy Hook apparently in wait for British merchantmen leaving New York. For a few days the British shipping huddled their piers and then came news that the Karlsruhe had been driven away by the approach of several British cruisers.

On Aug. 9 the Karlsruhe appeared in the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, where she coaled and then again took to the seas. Soon after it was learned that the Karlsruhe had been in a sensational running fight at sea with the British cruisers Suffolk and Bristol. It appears that the British cruisers came unexpectedly upon the Karlsruhe while she was coaling from the German steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm. The cruisers engaged in a running fight while the Kronprinz Wilhelm, through her superior speed easily escaped. The Karlsruhe eluded her pursuers and an unconfirmed report had it that she damaged the Bristol in the fight.

Since then the Karlsruhe has appeared in several West Indian ports for coal after preying in southern seas on British commerce. An official statement given out in Berlin on Oct. 3 said she had sunk seven British steamers in the Atlantic. The Karlsruhe is comparatively a new ship, having gone into commission early in 1913. She is very fast, having a speed of 27 knots, which has enabled her thus far to successfully elude the persistent British pursuit. Her main armament consists of 12 4.1 and she carries a crew of 375 men.

FREIGHT RATES LABOR MEN PROTEST DANCE AT NO. BILLERICA

The President of Penn. System First Witness Called Today

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania system, was the first witness called today before the hearings of the inter-state commerce committee on the application of eastern railroads for a general increase in freight rates of at least five per cent. His testimony was similar to that of previous witnesses for the roads, setting out that decline of 3 1/2 per cent in gross earnings for the fiscal year of 1914 and of six per cent for the months of July and August of this year, supplemented by conditions brought about by the war in Europe, made immediately relief necessary.

The war has resulted in special aggravation of a situation peculiar to the railroads, a situation which has already been adjudged as in need of relief, the witness said. He urged that immediate treatment was necessary on the broadest possible scale within the powers of the commission.

Interest begins Saturday, Nov. 7 at the Central Savings bank.

ALLEGES NATIVES OF WEST INDIES ARE GIVEN PREFERENCE OVER PRACTICAL JOURNEMEN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Representatives of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and the Operative Plasterers' International association protested yesterday to the Panama canal commission against conditions which they contend prevail in the employment of labor in the canal zone. They asserted that so-called plasterers, natives of the West Indies, are given the preference over practical journeymen plasterers, natives and citizens of the United States; that these aliens, so-called plasterers, are paid a wage ranging from 20 to 30 cents an hour, while the wages of the American plasterers are 70 cents per hour.

The council expresses belief that conditions applying to the plasterers also applied to all building trades in the zone.

SHORT SKIRTS TO BE THE STYLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Skirt hems above knee tops will be the style this winter, according to Mme. Julia Ripley, president of the Fashion Art League of America. The decree that skirts must be from two and a half to four inches above the ground was received with mingled comment here.

Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, president of the Illinois Suffrage association, said she favored a short skirt. But then Mrs. Trout is famous for her small foot. There is compensation for the maker of dress goods. With the shortening of the skirt is to come more fullness.

BOSTON & MAINE EMPLOYEES HELD SECOND ANNUAL PARTY LAST NIGHT

Another successful dancing party was conducted in Thomas Talbot Memorial hall last evening under the auspices of the employees of the Boston & Maine repair shops. The affair proved an enjoyable one, a large number of couples attending and dancing through the evening. Music was furnished by Broderick's orchestra of Lowell.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was as follows: General manager, Walter Chandler; assistant general manager, Thomas Nickerson; chief aid, Frank Downman; floor director, William Doyle; treasurer, Robert Key; aids, all B. & M. employees.

LONG DEADLOCK BROKEN

Frank E. Morrison Elected Alderman From Ward 1, Somerville, Through Mr. Dargis's Vote

SOMERVILLE, Oct. 23.—The election of Frank E. Morrison, republican, as alderman from ward 1, Somerville, by the aldermen of that city last evening, ended a deadlock that has prevailed since June on this matter. John J. Wood, democrat, had the endorsement of the democratic city committee for the place. Alderman Dargis, who had heretofore voted always for Mr. Wood, switched to Mr. Morrison, the latter thus winning, 11 to 9.

Mr. Morrison fills the place vacated in June by William T. McCarthy, democrat, now assistant district attorney in Middlesex county. This election is according to provisions for such situations in the city charter.

SAYS HE KEPT PRISONER FROM KILLING HIMSELF

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—The sentences of six to eight years imposed upon Samuel Rosenfeld and three to five years upon Glen Farmer, the "do luxe" look agents, for the larceny of $57,075 from Mrs. Mary Rogers of Beacon street, went into effect yesterday.

They had been stayed during the pendency of the case before the full bench of the supreme court, which recently overruled their exceptions. Judge Quinn in the superior criminal court yesterday removed the stay and again imposed the sentences. Farmer had been out on bail and when notified to come in for sentence did so. Rosenfeld was in jail.

Louis Marks, counsel for Rosenfeld, read a letter from Sheriff Quinn, commending the prisoner for assistance rendered at the jail in preventing dependent inmates from carrying out plans of ending their lives. One of the men who contemplated suicide, according to the letter, was Joseph Duddy, confederate of Lawrence Robinson.

Robinson ended his life while on trial of the murder of Inspector Norton. When Duddy learned of the suicide of Robinson he procured a rope in some manner and planned to use it to kill himself. Rosenfeld heard of the plan and talked to Duddy, inducing him to abandon it.

Counsel for the defendant urged the judge in view of the information contained in the letter, to take off seven months which he has been in jail from the sentence. Judge Quinn refused to do so, remarking his imprisonment while exceptions were pending was "one of the fortunes of war."

Rosenfeld seemed surprised when allowance was not made for the seven months he had been incarcerated in the Charles street institution. He dashed a little. Farmer accepted his sentence stoically.

Both were taken to the state prison to begin their sentences.

APPRECIATES MARSHALL

PRESIDENT WILSON WRITES IN WALK COMMENDATION OF THE VICE PRESIDENT'S WORK

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 23.—Declaring that "the pleasure of being associated with you grows as the months pass," President Wilson has written Vice President Marshall, at his home here, endorsing all the majority in the United States senate. The letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. Vice President—I am sure that my colleagues in the senate realize that my recent letter to Mr. Underwood was spoken as much in their praise as in praise of the members of the house, for we all stand together as a single team, and my satisfaction in cooperating with the members of the senate has been no less than in cooperating with the members of the house."

"I want to send you these few lines of sincere and genuine personal appreciation. The pleasure of being associated with you grows as the months pass, and I want to send you, as the session closes, this simple message of congratulations and thanks. Cordially and sincerely yours,

Woodrow Wilson.

The letter was made public here yesterday by Mr. Marshall's secretary.

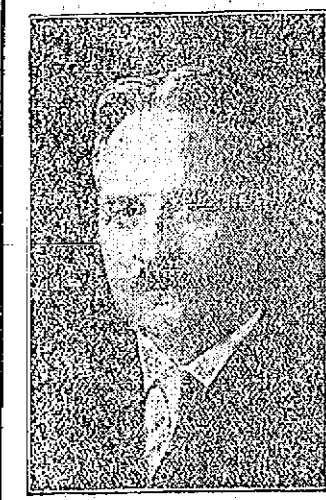

COMMENDS INDIAN TROOPS

Lord Crewe Says That Germans May Learn Lesson in Chivalry and Humanity from Them

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Press bureau made public yesterday the speech of Lord Crewe, secretary of state for India, delivered Tuesday to officers recently appointed to government service in India.

"The Indian forces," he said, "will very soon take their place on the firing line beside their British comrades. The enemy make it a reproach that we employ Asiatic troops in Europe. To that I am prepared to reply with the famous sentence over the gate of the University of Aberdeen: 'They Say—What Say? Let Them Say.'"

"But it is not in our eyes a matter of reproach, but of pride that our Indian fellow subjects feel themselves identified with us in the quarrel, and I expect that the enemy may learn severe lessons from them in chivalry, humanity and respect for the persons and homes of the poor and the humble."

Boys' Overcoats from $5 to $12

Boys' Suits from...$5 to $10

We want you to submit them to the acid test of wear and prove them up for yourself.

You're in sympathy with our efforts to be sure, besides saving yourself $5 on a purchase, but don't think the opportunity will wait on you. This brass tack sale will last long enough to give you a reasonable opportunity to take advantage of it, but no sizes can be replenished after present offering is exhausted. At present we have sizes to fit almost any man that walks.
